Farmers Assured Electricity by REA

Boone county farmers are practically assured of electricity during early 1939 according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. Two hundred eighty-four farmers had signed on Monday of this week and approximately 35 more memberships were in hands of committeemen to be delivered Tuesday afternoon.

The main line from Grant county thru the northern section of the county consisted of 52.2 miles with 175 signed memberships. Three members per mile are required before the allotment for line construction can be secured. The remaining 109 members signed and in the office Monday were on approximately fifty miles of spur or side lines. All side lines averaging three members per mile will be included in the original allotment request while those averaging less than three per mile will be elegible to file allotment applications as soon as sufficient signers can be secured. This however, will mean delay in getting electricity for these members.

The sign up has progress rapidly with the present membership signed in the last thirty days. Preliminary application forms for line construction are to be submitted to the association office at Owenton on Wednesday at 2:00 p. m. The district office reports funds for construction of the Boone county lines have been ear marked and will be available as soon as application forms can be completed.

ACTION TAKEN AFTER PROPOSED FOUR-LANE SUPER HIGHWAY FOUND AS FALSE REPORT; FOUR GROUPS JOIN IN EFFORT TO GET WORK

At a joint meeting of the Williamstown and the U. S. 25 Association of Kentucky held at Williamstown tonight (Thursday) the proposed new super four-lane park-plan highway that has been receiving prominent space in the daily papers was learned to be unfounded, and no one could explain where it started. About one hundred members and their guests had gathered expecting to learn about the project, but club officials were as much in the dark as other interested parties.

Newspaper reports were to the effect that the proposed new highway would use the LLL highway to Sanfordtown where it would branch off and run south between Walton and Independence, and connect to the present Dixie Highway near Williamstown.

No State Highway official could be reached as we go to press to verify the meetings findings.

It is understood that within the next few years that the present four lane highway will be extended with a three-lane highway through Florence to the intersection of U. S. 25 and 42, thence reconstruction of U. S. 25 will follow the present roadbed as far as prac ical to a point north of Walton. This, however, will only be a two-lane highway from the intersection.

Members present were unanimous in their desire to have the road remain on the present roadbed as far possible, without sacrificing the safety of traffic.

Unless something is done to save the present concrete roadway, the highway will be beyond reclaiming, stated Mr. Billiter, president of the old Dixie Highway group.

Talks were made by representatives of several towns located along U. S. 25 in Kentucky, including Dr. Webb of Livingston, Rockcastle county, Mr. Billiter, John L. Vest of Walton, and others.

Mr. Billiter said that the first step that should be taken by the state is the repair and widening of the present Dixe from Florence to Walton, an eight-mile strip. He also said that he and the former members of the local Highway Association favored retention of the title "Dixie" and No "25" for the present roadway.

Since the Dixie is recognized as the "most traveled road in the state" and is in such "bad condition" at present, widening and repair should be done on it immediately, Mr. Billiter said.

Also following an announcement by Mr. Billiter, one of the early advocates of the Dixie Highway and largely responsible for securing the name of Dixie Highway and the U. S. route number No. 25 for the present highway through Erlanger and Walton in preference to the Madison pike route.

This association is patterned after and is a partial outgrowth of the recently inactive U. S. Highway No. 25 Association, which was centered in northern Kentucky and headed by Simon M. Billiter.

Charles W. Riley, county attorney of Boone county, stated that the Fiscal Court of this county had never been approached for rights-of-way for any improvements to the present road. He, however, pledged his support to any movement to improve the thoroughfare.

Ten men from Walton attended the meeting.

George Lyon, resident engineer for the Highway Commission, admitted Friday that the present Dixie Highway was in a bad condition and needed repairing. The condition of the highway is due to the fills made when it was constructed. These have settled, Lyon said and in settling broke the surface of the road.

It is the fear of the Dixie Highway Association members that if the new road is built the present highway will be abandoned completely and allowed to deteriorate.

Promise after promise has been made by the state officials on this road, but delay after delay has ensued. The road is not now completed and another winter has taken possession of the road with ice and mud, Kiette pointed out. The Highway Commission has not issued the work order for the completion of the road, although it has been con-

Times Through The Ages

We are pleasantly reminded by Miss Elizabeth Achelis president of The World Calendar Association, that Christmas is a festival season with special significances to any student of the calendar. This outstanding leader in the movement for a practical revision of the 12 months calendar (keeping to a 12-months calendar) reminds us that "the most important festivals of pre-historic time were sun festivals, one in mid-summer and the other in winter." Christmas time, was to primitive man an important and critical period when the days were getting shorter and the nights longer. So men lighted bonfires of logs to give the sun strength and bring him back to life again. Of course their efforts were crowned with success—they soon noticed that the days were growing longer and rejoiced because the sun had been reborn and was coming back in glory and splendor. Those were sun-festival periods for the Egyptians, Chinese, and other people. Ancient rulers and gods were honored by these festivals. Eventually the fathers of the church decided to fix a date to celebrate the birth of Christ, and wisely chose that day so firmly fixed in the minds of the people. And so we see that day so firmly fixed exact date of Christmas was fixed by the sun. There is a beautiful Christmas thought for you.

Il Duce's Inconsistency

It is difficult to understand the reasoning of the Italian controlled press in matters which affect the immediate designs of Mussolini. When he seized Ethiopia, he attempted to justify his action by declaring that Italy needed more territory to absorb the surplus population of the fatherland. Recently the newspaper Popolo D'Italia, said to publish his personal editorials, carried an article in which it was claimed that in race and blood there were some 28,000,000 Italians in the world outside Italy. If all of these could be repatriated, the article said, Italy's population would become 72,000,000, which would make Italy, "the second nation in Europe and only very slightly behind Germany." As here used "if" is a big word. It is the opinion of many that if all the Italians who want to could expatriate themselves there would be plenty room in Italy for the 28,000,000.

It may be added in this connection that when an Italian citizen is of Jewish and Italian blood it is the former by which he is classified by the Il Duce. Aping Der Fuehrer he would pose Italy as pure Aryan. Whereas it is doubtful if there is a nation in Europe that has a greater mixture of races than Italy. A strict test would likely reveal that the blood of the Il Duce himself is a mixture of several strains.

What Must We Defend?

There is perhaps no subject concerning which the people of the United States are more in accord than than that of national defense. Every true American wants to see his country made safe from invasion.

But the question most pertinent just now concerns the scope defensive measures should include. The question might be divided somewhat like this:

Should we be prepared to defend only the continental United States and the possessions which are indisputably our own territory, such as Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Alaska and the Pansma Canal?

Should we go to war to defend the Philippines, which by their own request have been granted entire independence to become fully effective after a transition period of a few years? And what about other Republics in his hemisphere?

Should we go to war if necessary to defend commercial or personal interests of Americans throughout the whole world?

Should we go to war to aid Great Britain and France, for example, as we did in the World War—and for what?

The answers to these questions must have a definite bearing on the nature, extent and cost of the proposed new defense program.

But the answers can be given until it is known to what extent we intend to involve ourselves with other nations over matters which are of little importance to our own people as a whole.

Wasteful Government's Friend

Many oil companies advertise the price of gasoline in this fashion: "Gas, 15 cents a gallon; state and federal tax, 6 cents; total, 21 cents."

If similar methods of illustrating the price of all products were employed, the American consumer would get the shock of his life.

When you buy a five-dollar pair of shoes, a dollar or more is for taxes. When you pay a three-dollar electric bill, 50 or 60 cents represents taxes. When you buy a forty-dollar suit, close to ten dollars goes for taxes.

You can't dodge taxation—unless you're a hermit living in the hills. On a normal day, you pay taxes a dozen times, though you may not know it—when you drive your car, ride a trolley, eat lunch, or make a purchase. When the American people get this truth through their heads, there will be a drive for economy in government that will get somewhere. For ignorance of the facts is a wasteful government's best friend.

Success Story, New Style

Reporting a question and answer session between Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews and Denver businessmen, the Rocky Mountain News quotes the following:—

Businessman—"Can an employer permit a worker to work overtime, or must he lock him out?"

Mr. Andrews—"In my opinion, such a worker should be dealt with the same as one who persisted in quitting early. He should be fired."

Well, we can see Mr. Andrews' point, if any employer is unwilling to pay the legal time and a half for hours in excess of forty-four a week, the only way he can obey the Wage-Hour act is to prohibit overtime work— and enforce the prohibition. It would undermine the law if employees vied with each other in "voluntary" overtime work without pay.

But the American success story formula certainly is going to have to be revised to something like this:—

Boss—"Young man, I notice that you never watch the clock."

Employee—"No sir."

"And I often find you here at your desk, after closing hours, or even in the evening."

"Yes sir. You see, I want to learn the business."

"You know, of course, that I can't afford to pay you overtime for it."

"Oh, that's all right. I figure that, eventually, I'll earn a raise."

"Well, that's fine, young man. Just fine. You don't often see such ambition, these days. I admire you for it."

"Thank you, sir."

"Well, good-by, young man. I won't see you again. You're fired!"

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

It is rather late to write a New Year's story but as other stories were ahead of this it had to take its turn. We were brought up under the old custom that what we did on New Year's Day would be an index for what we would do the balance of the year. So we were taught in Kentucky in the good old days to put in a full day's work on New Year's Day.

With this in mind, as we wanted to have a good business year, we jumped into our auto with one of our men from the cattle department and one from the hog department, who was our chauffeur to go to Indiana to solicit business, our objective being Seymour, Jackson County, where we found broad acres of good land, nice country homes and live stock and plenty of everything but money. We all would be glad to get hold of any kind of money that had the proper backing; they would be glad to accept our certificates which the gold barons are depriving the people of. What they wanted was money to help pay debts, interests and taxes without going deeper into debt or issuing bonds with added interest.

We put in Friday and Saturday forenoon in Bartholomew County, were entertained in Columbus, a real inland town, Saturday night by ourgood friend C. F. Whitehouse who lives in a mansion and has one of the biggest business concerns in Columbus. We are not saying this to boost Mr. Whitehouse's business but want to use him as an example for the boys and young men who may read this; Mr. Whitehouse was born and reared in a log cabin in the hills of southern Indiana, a poor boy.

He has built up his business on his own efforts, being a middle aged man and in the prime of life. For the encouragement of boys in the country or city who are having a hard fight now, there are as good opportunities as ever to succeed, if they will be sober, honest and ambitious.

"PETS"

In our time the cat and the dog are rapidly becoming the only pets of the average household; on the farm in older times almost anything could be a pet. G. K. Chesterton has written a charming little essay on "Pigs as Pets," declaring that only custom is responsible for pigs ever become fashionable pets, our devotion to dogs and that if pigs ever become fashionable pets, all sorts of strange pigs will be developed: lap pigs, watch pigs, Mexican hairless pigs, Airedale pigs, and son on. Mr. Chesterton was never on a farm in America, so far as I known, or he would not have written of pigs as pets as a sort of comical dream. I have seen plenty of them, have owned them, have heard their gence, enough to make the owner of owners boast of their pets' intelligence dog jealous. A colleague of mine, while she was teaching acountry school not far from where I lived as a boy, went to a neighbor's house to use the telephone. While he was talking, he heard a step at the door, looked up, and saw a pig enter, scratch himself on the foot of the bed, and then, with all the necessary accompanying grunts, settle himself for a nap in his bed.

As small children our favorite pets were chickens, little fellows that we had to feed carefully and watch over for the few brief days that most of them lived. We often made great ado over the death of these pets of a few days, giving them burial in a special graveyard, where small blocks of wood, left from sawing the palings for the fence, served for headstones and footstones. Sometimes we had a mock-heroic funeral, a little shame-facedly, as I now recall it. At times our pet chickens grew up, though, and became regular nuisances. It was almost like cannibalism to devour these pets when they were frying-sized.

Pet lambs were fairly easily raised. They became devoted little fellows, following us everywhere except to school, after the fashion of Mary's little lamb. Association with human being often ruined the morals and manners of meek lambs, especially buck lambs. They became eager for a fight and sometimes chased visitors and other members of their family. One such lamb, a black one, was so bad that he became mutton for a dinner on the ground. But the sheep family did not profit by his tragic life, for later pet lambs developed the same sort of bad traits.

Nearly every family tried its hand at keeping a wild animal as a pet. Raccoons were probably the ones most often found. Very soon they became troublesome, but often saved their lives by their cute manners. A pet squirrell laughed and chuckled in many a farm home, traviing untold miles around and through its limited cage. Daring people sometimes caged skunks, pretty animals as you know but hardly aesthetic to our modern taste. Caged birds were once common, before national and state laws prohibitd the capture and imprisonment of wild birds except for scientific purposes. You might expect to find in the same home a caged mockingbird and a necklace of catbird's or bluebird's eggs, the latter a gift of some young swain to the grown daughter of the family.

ODDITIES AT THE FAIR

A parachute tower from which visitors may "bail out" at an elevation of 250 feet and be sure of a "happy landing."

Revolving "magic carpets" from which you may look down as from a height of two miles upon "The City of Tomorrow" inside the 200-foot Perisphere.

A "Tree of Life" carved from the trunk and branches of an elm planted in Connecticut in 1781 by Revolutionary War prisoners.

Five million dollars worth of diamonds, rubies, emeralds and other gems in one glittering display.

The steel-walled bathysphere in which descent has been made miles down in the black depths of the ocean.

"Rocket gun" by which passengers will be shot to the moon, or Mars some day—perhaps.

The model of a human eye so large visitors may enter it and look out upon the Fair's busy scene just as if the eye were doing the looking.

The largest opal in the world.

The largest model railroad ever constructed.

Displays of rare orchids, renewed every three days by plants flown to the Fair from Venezuela.

The tremendous discharge of 10,000,000 volts of man-made lightning.

A Brazilian exhibit building erected on stilts.

A floor made of cotton.

Ricksha runners from South Africa six and a half feet tall and clad mostly in feathers, horns and beads.

A waterfall cascading from the high roof of a building.

Fireworks set to music in related patterns of color and light.

A city entirely populated by midgets.

Mighty snowstorms sweeping down out of a clear Spring sky.

Moving chairs traveling around in a building so visitors won't have to walk.

A flight to Venus so real you'll swear you've been there and met the folks.

The tallest mural paintings in the world.

A model of New York City so large that the Empire State Building is reproduced 23 feet tall.

A sphere 200 feet in diameter seeming to revolve on jets of water, like the little silver ball in the shooting-gallery.

A fountain that sings.

Paintings that have to be destroyed every night and done all over again next morning.

A "Fountain of the Atom," with electrons and protons dancing around a pulsating shaft of light.

UNEMPLOYMENT PAYMENTS START THIS MONTH

24,000 social security numbers were issued by post offices in these eight counties before we began to type numbers in our office in the Coppin Building.'

"Any worker who desires to known the status of his social security wage record for 1937 may get this information by applying on post cards which we will supply," Mr. Decker added.

The Covington, Kentucky office manager stressed the importance of the claims work done in he area which he serves.

"In the year 1938, 418 claims for lump-sum benefits, or money payments, now due under the old-age insurance plan and filed through our office, had been certified for payment," Mr. Decker said.

"The 418 persons to whom these checks drawn on the Treasury of the United States, were made payable, received a total of more than $19,060. Payments are now being made to workers who reach age 65 after having worked in employment covered by the Social Security Act. Paymens also are being made to the heirs of estates of workers who have died since January 1, 1937, after having been similarly employed."

Mr. Decker said that in the nation as a whole more than 265,000 such payments have been certified, amounting to more than $1,000,000. The country-wide average of claims certified in November of this year was $64.36, he added.

The Covington, Kentucky field office is one of 35 in Region V., which includes the states of Kentucky, Ohio and Michigan. Headquarters of the Region is in Cleveland, G. R. Parker being Regional Director.

RESUME OF PAST YEAR WITH KENTUCKY CROPS

1937 69,400,000 pounds; Paducah-Mayfield dark fired 1938 24,661,000 pounds, 1937 28,200,000 pounds. Kentucky's estimated tobacco production, by types within this state only, in 1938 and 1937 was;—burley 1938 267,750,300 pounds, 1937 276,555,000 pounds. Green River air cured from both Owensboro and Henderson districts) 1938 16,176,000 pounds, 1937, 19,800,000 lbs.; 1938 2,188,000 pounds 1937 2,125,000 pounds, Hopkinsville dark fired 1938 18,750,000 pounds, 1937 25,200,000 pounds; Paducah-Mayfield dark fired 1938 18,436,000 pounds, 1937 21,000,000 pounds. (NOTE;—As soon as proper check data are available on total sales and private sales, a revised tobacco summary will be issued giving prices and values as well as acreage and production.

CATTLE—The facts are, there is a shortage of cattle, and it will take more than 1939 to make up the shortage; there need be no fear of over-supply of cattle.

Our fear should be the importation of cheaper foreign meat, which carries out our idea of raising all the cattle we can, supply our demand. We continue to say, "there are two ways to make money on cattle; buy as good quality and as light as possible to grow into money; or raise your cattle from good beef grade cows with good beef grade bulls; or if you want dairy cows have dairy bulls.

The facts are, we are short of good beef stocker and feeder cattle; which makes prices high to feed out, unless there are hogs to follow; which will help. We see no reason why cattle prices should not hold up good through 1939.

CALVES—There is a shortage of calves, in fact our demand is greater than our supply, which is holding prices good on calves, better than any other live stock. Our calf raisers would realize more money if they would keep good beef type bulls.

HOGS—The hog market is holding up good, considering the prices of corn and wheat; there has never been a better time for the grain raiser to convert their grain production into good prices. There is no shortage of hogs or over-supply, but a good demand for the receipts: the facts are, the eating public can get along without other meats, but it is hard to get along without the many by-products of hogs. The packers have talked and expected lower prices on hogs for the later part of this year; they have missed their mark.

This year has shown good or better margin of profits, to hog feeders than many years, considering the price of grain; which we are glad to see, and hope prices will hold up. Our opinion is, we will have an increase in production of hogs of 1939; can expect lower prices.

THE FACTS ARE: If there were more people employed and with more buying power: there is no reason why 1939 should not be a good business year for the producer and all business, which would help to solve our recession.

THE YEAR 1938

Has been a fairly good business year for us; it could have been better, could have been worse. We have no complaint to make; we want to thank our many new customers and old ones, for helping us make the grade. We do not believe in boasting about the percentage of business we do, (knowing the producers are not interested in the amount of business we do), but how well we serve every individual customer; which we make a specialty of working for them, first, last and all the time. Pass it on.

Thanking you again and again, Wishing You a Good and Prosperous Year.

Yours for better service if possible for 1939.

NORRIS, BROCK CO

In using electricity, it is well to remember that it is a great boon, but can also be deadly if improperly used. For instance, no one should stand in a bathroom on a wet towel and reach for the light switch. Have all wires properly covered and then stay away from them.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Eleven Bell county dairy farmers sold $10,640 worth of milk from 113 cows last year. One man with 21 cows ranging on a 12-acre pasture received $4,332 for milk. His labor and feed bills totaled $2,782.

Tobacco improvement work in Ballard county in 1938 included the purchase of No. 5 and No. 16 seed by about 100 farmers; the selection of good ground and the use of correct fertilizers; and finally better curing methods, including use of heat.

Fred Ross produced slightly over 80 bushels of corn to the acre on Boyd county bottom land where crimson clover was plowed under and fertilizer and manure applied. The land has been producing good corn for several years.

Seven hundred and thirty-two acres were terraced in Calloway county in 1938 at an average cost of $1.74. About 5,000 tons of limestone and 850 tons of phosphate were used in the county, and 47 farmers sowed cover crops on all cultivated land.

Last year, the third year in which he was a member of a dairy herd improvement association, a Caldwell county farmer reported an average of 422 pounds of butter fat from 11 cows. His average was 352 pounds in 1937, and 300 pounds in 1936.

The Madisonville Kiwanis club is sponsoring sheep raising among Hopkins county 4-H club members. Each of 17 boys and girls has a flock of five ewes, and follows a program of drenching and feeding, including pasture rotation.

Three combines were used to harvest korean lespedeza seed in Bath county. One farmer combined 10 acres that produced 7,700 pounds. After putting aside enough for his own use he sold the rest to farmers of the county.

BUSINESS RECORDS OF FARM IMPORTANT

Keeping some kind of records of the farm operations is advocated by the deparment of farm economics at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. They may be just receipts and expenses, or they may be as elaborate as the farmer wishes to take time and trouble to make.

Some farmers make an inventory of the year. This includes a list of of their property at the beginning machinery, feeds, supplies, livestock and real estate.

A record of receipts and expenses is more useful if it includes amounts of items sold or bought as well as dollars.

Another matter which farmers find of value includes listing the yields and production of crops, the use of fields, and records of animals.

Some farmers have complete records, showing feeds used for each kind of livestock, kind and amount of fertilizers by fields, products used by the household, and the like.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

A 4-H club band and instruction in singing are included in the farm included in the farm and home programs in Harrison county.

Martin county farmers report satisfactory progress with flocks started with western ewes.

Green county farmer harvested 30,000 pounds of korean lespedeza seed with a combine.

Bell county dairy farmers reported profits as high as $75 per cow last year.

Lyon county farmers report paying returns from raising hogs on clean ground and from vaccinating against cholera.

Several Pike county farmers have started small flocks of sheep, their first experience with this kind of livestock.

More than 250,000 pounds of korean lespedeza seed was sown in Breckinridge county in 1938.

Reforestation will be given a prominent place in the 1939 farm program in Marshall county.

THE FARM HOME

Food for the person recovering from illness should never be heavy, and perhaps can't be varied to any extent, but it should always be tasty. Serve small portions of the foods allowed. By arranging silver carefully, having clean napkins, and everything within reach, life for the invalid can be brightened considerably.

Milk and other daily products have large shares of the vitamins. The average healty person can get vitamins from dairy products meats, vegetables and citrus fruits, without resorting to other products. As a rule, the family physician can tell whether concentrated dosages of vitamins are needed.

Fewer and better pictures has come to be the rule in many Kentucky homes, according to Miss Ida Hagman, home management specialist for the Kentucky College of Agriculture. It is also accepted that one calendar is needed in every home, but no more than that.

Consumption of turkey has increased greatly, due partly to the fact that prices are moderate but also because it is no longer known strictly as a "holiday" bird. Turkey is good at Christmas and also just as good in January, March and other months.

MEMBER OF FAMOUS GIRL'S ORCHESTRA

Phil Spitalny, noted maestro, and his All-Girl Singing Orchestra, heard every Monday night on the radio networks in the "Hour of Charm" with Dorothy Thompson, will bring his famous ensemble to Taft Theatre, Cincinnati, to top a special New Year's Week show starting Friday, December 30, under the management of William Elliott.

The thirty glamorous, talented young women in the orchestra are ex remely versatile, and their stage performance will be a varied and clever elaboration of the "Hour of Charm." Supplementing the stage show will be a film program, featuring a full length feature picture and short.

UNEMPLOYMENT FUNDS WILL BE PAID OUT

Payments under the Unemployment Insurance Law begin in Kentucky in January and yet it is probaly known but very little about the low—how it will operate or how it will provide benefit payments for certain groups of unemployed Kentucky workmen.

More than 300,000 Kentucky workers and approximately 8,000 employers have a vital interest in the Unemployemeny Insurance Law. Thehe workmen and employers created the insurance fund from which these benefits will begin to flo win January.

When the first benefit payments are made next month a fund well in excess of $20,000,000 will be available to such claims for payments in Kentucky.

The fund represents contributions employers have made over a period hhe employees have contributed a fixed percentage of their earnings of wages.

Tthe fund thus created for Kentucky workmen is on deposit in the federal treasury and ce be drawn against for only purpose—the payment of unemployment insurance to Kentucky workmen.

Unemployment insurance was included in the broad provisions of the National Security Act but it required enactment of laws by the several states to set up agencies to permit Unemployment insurance to become a reality.

Kentucky conformed to the requirements of the Social Act. At a special session of the general assembly called by Governor A. B Chandler the first Unemployment Insurance Law was passed and approved three years and by mployees during the last two years. Employers have contributed to the fund according to the amount of heir payrolls while proved on December 31, 1936. At the regular sessionof the Kentucky Legislature in 1938 the law was redrafed and reenaced and it is under this law that the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission is composed of three members, one representing the public, another the employers and the third the employees. V. E. Barnes, chairman and executive director represents the public; John C. C. Mayo, Jr., of Ashland the employers and Omer C. Stubbs, of Covington, the employees. The offices of the Commission are located in Frankfort. It acts as the collecting agency for contributions to the Unemployment Insurance Fund from employer and employee alike depositing such money with the federal treasury.

Though since its creation two years ago the Commission has confined its endeavors to building up the reserve insurance fund for Kentucky workmen it will be in charge of the payment of benefit payments in January when such claims can legally be paid under the law.

The Commission also directs the activities of the Kentucky State Employment Service which has as it's function the finding of jobs for unemployed workers in the state. With the beginning of benefit payments the activities of the Employment Service will be broadened so it will play an important part in gaying benefit insurance claims. William H. Fraysure is Director of the Kentucky State Employment Compensation Commission.

KENTON COUNTY FARM NOTES

Members of the Kenton County Planning Committee met in Independence, December 6th, to discuss plans for the coming year. Mr. Bruce Poundstone, Extension Agent in Farm Management, from the University of Kentucky, had charge of the discussion.

The main problems set up for 1939 was that of proper land management. This is to be brought about by using more cover crops, seeding more grass and legumes, especially alfalfa, using more lime and phosphate and the use of hybrid corn instead of the open pollinated varieties.

Because of the large amount of erosion that takes place each year in the county, proper land management is the quickest way to reduce it.

The next problem of importance discussed was that of feeding and management of dairy, beef cattle and sheep. In the case of beef cattle, proper finish was he problem set up as important to beef cattle raisers as very few know when an animal is finished, problems mentioned above will be of chief importance in the six discussion groups

Meetings will be held at the following places in January:)1(). Oak and home programs in Harrison Island School,)2.) George A. Eubanks, Crescent Springs, (3). Court House, Independence, (4.) Fiskburg Hall, (5) C. A. Ballinger, Towers,)6). B. L. Wayman, Richardson Pike and (7). Jos. Kahmann, Jr., Dudley Road.

Those attending the County Planning meeting were: C. E. Flynn, Geo. A. Eubanks, Chas. W. Thirs, Pete Blu, C. A. Ballinger, Jos. Kahmann, Jr., Fred Neihoff, Albert List, Chris H. Beck, Dawson McDannold, James Bristow and A. C. Bird.

Mr. James Bristow was elected Chairman of the Committee for 1939, Mr. C. A. Ballinger, Vice-Chairman, and Mrs. Dawson McDannold was elected Secretary.

KENTUCKY 4-H CLUB NEWS

"EVERY FARM BOY AND GIRL in Bell county in 4-H club work in 1939"—this goal has been established, due to the large percentage completing projects this year. Leaders in each community are assuming responsibility for this.

NELSON COUNTY calf club members sold 15 calves for $1,200, an average of approximately $81 per calf. Of special importance is the fact that members so managed their calves that the profit per calf ran to $32.

Institute poll shows 71 per cent of people favor wage-hour law.

UP HAIR DO STILL DEBATED

Up-hair-dos are still a moot question with the big league hair dressers. New York debutantes have almost with out exception refused to accept the new arrangement and most big balls and important coming out parties have seen the debbies wearing their hair shoulder length, with a childish bow or coquettish flowers at the top. The resort season, however hair dressers say, will find a return of the up-swept coiffures, chiefly because the style is more convenient. In Miami the coiffure with curls piled high on the head is increasingly seen and the new L'Aiglon cut i againing rapid popularity.

For that new holiday dress to wear to family get-togethers or New Year's day festivities, choose one of the new bright pastels. Perfect under your fur coat it will do double duty if you go resorting later in the season. Very new and smart are such shades as "stained glass" yellow, chartreuse, salmon-rose, beige, mauve, "bourgogne" violet and ayer-white.

Handkerchiefs for Hoods

If you're received a lovely chiffon handkerchief for Christmas tie it about your hair Medici-fashion when you're dressing formally and you'll not only be smart but will keep your hair in place. For an added touch of gaity anchor the kerchief to the top of your hair with flowers which later can be pinned in your hair.

STATE PURCHASES NATIVE QUAIL FOR DISTRIBUTION

With the purchase of an additional 1,200 native Bob White Quail, the Quail Farm on the Shelby County Fair Grounds now have a total of 2,900 birds in the pens, Major Jas. Brown, Director of the Divison of Game and Fish, announced today.

The native quail were purchased from independent hatcheries within the state and will be held at the quail farm through the winter and released in all the counties of central Kentucky the latter part of next March. Only those counties and localities having the proper food and cover will receive these birds.

The Division would like for certain individuals to note carefully that the birds will not be released in Shelby County alone, but are merely being held there at the farm where they are being fed and cared for through the winter months. The Division of Game and Fish does NOT put out quail in the fall but purchases the birds throughout the fall and winter months and releases them the following spring in pairs.

An article carried in several papers of the state several weeks ago stated that Shelby county did not have the proper cover and food for quail, but that the Divison of Game and Fish was releasing several thousands of the birds in the county. That statement is not true as the Division is only holding these birds at the rearing station through the winter months and will release them in suitable cover in the counties of Central Kentucky next spring. The article was written by a gentleman who is supposed to know such things and who is supposed to be a good newspaper man and who should present only the correct facts to the public. Such incorrect article are misleading to the general public and draw much criticism t othe Division of Game and fish which is not deserved.

There are 75 single pens on the grounds of the Shelby Quail Farm with a capacity of 25 birds for each pen. There are also 50 double pens which hold 25 birds to each side.

The Division also has quail rearing stations located at Ashland, Princeton, and Williamsburg.

MISTRESS of MONTEREY

VIRGINIA STIVERS BARTLETT

(C) Virginia Stivers Bartlett W.N.U. Service

A great estate of his own! He could see himself riding over the land; could see the sleek herds, the spirited horses he would raise; could see the fields of corn and grain, squashes, beans and chiles; he wandered through his own orchards and vineyards. At Dios, that was what he wanted! A ranch that could entertain a hundred guests, and where a hundred servants would do his bidding; where there would be music and flowers and hospitality . . . and at the end a host of strong sons to speed his departure into that dark uncertain land . . . But the vision did not hold Eulalia.

With a bitter laugh he gulped his wine.

"Before God, Don Epifanio, you are sent by Satan to tempt me! That may be your life, but it can never be mine."

"I am sorry, my friend. For there are many of us who campaigned with you who are going to do this very thing of which I have spoken. In fact, many have sent for their wives and families to come from Mexico, and, as I said before, those of us who have not wives will find them here. Yes, we will found a new civilization, I think, in this strange new land, and you should be one of the founders."

The Governor left San Gabriel, visited the troubious little village of Los Angeles, and left there shaking his head over the laziness and immorality of its inhabitants. South, then, to the Mission San Juan Capristrano, and at last to the Presidio and Mission of San Diego, the cradle of California. Then he turned north again, to return to Monterey, more restless, more unhappy, more disturbed in mind than when he had started on his journey. He had not left his anxieties behind. They had traveled with him. And to them was added the nagging certainty that he was at a crisis in his life. He could not continue living as he had been. He and Eulalia were killing each other.

And after that, what?

One of two things. Remain in the province as an hacendado, and fulfill his dearest dreams, regardless of Eulalia. Or return to Mexico, perhaps to Spain.

He groaned in spirit, and worried his grizzled beard as he considered that possibility.

The soft breath of California kissed his cheek as he rode north. The very brambles and wild roses reached out and clutched him with clinging fingers; and when he lay down at night the warm earth seemed to cradle him in loving arms that would not let him go.

When at last he rode through the gates of the Royal Presidio Monterey two months after he had swept through them, he had made a decision.

He would not leave California.

The priests at Mission Carmelo were shocked and horrified when La Gobernadora was delivered to them, no longer hysterically screaming as when she left the presidio, but cold and icy, sitting regally before the bewildered soldier on his horse. If she had been as the Governor had last seen her, good Fray Fermin would have feared her less, and thrown her to the tender mercies of the matron of the monjera for discipline.

But this cold haughty queen, who held her head so high and comported herself like a prisoner of state was someone to be feared.

So they put her quietly into the monjera, which Junipero Serra had long ago called a dove-cote . . . and there, through the long spring days, she lived with the Indian girls, under the chaperonage of the ancient Dona Maria. Dona Maria took a certain grim pleasure in watching over the proud Gobernadora, and though she did not exceed her duties in regard to her, she did not neglect any discipline which she considered necessary. Eulalia wove and sewed, sang psalms and prayed, outwardly as quiet as the stupidest Indian girl.

But when she lay at night on the pallet they had made for her on the floor, with a barred window high above her head, she would cram the corse sheet into her mouth to keep from screaming. She boiled and seethed with rage, despair, outrage. Sometimes it was directed against the Governor, then it turned most bitterly against herself.

"Fool! Fool!" she muttered to herself. "Silly fool, to allow this to happen to mei Ai, Dios! Madre de Dios!"

There was one rule she refused to obey. And that was to attend the masses at the church. When this duty was urged upon her, she was silent, but drew her brows together dangerously. Then the priests and the matron were glad to leave her alone.

One day the Fray Presidente called for her, and Dona Maria escorted her to his quarters. She stood uncompromisingly stiff before him, but he motioned her to a chair.

"Be seated, Senora la Gobernadora," he murmured.

The father leaned back and looked at her curiously.

"I have been studying you since you have been here, my daughter," he said, "and I must say that I have found your conduct most exemplary."

Eulalia inclined her head.

He continued. "You have been docile, obedient, silent amid a discipline that must have been a severe punishment to you. And I should say that you have been very brave. Now, I do not know what the private difficulties are between you and his Excellency. I have heard, of course, of the events that led to your being brought here. Not officially, for his Excellency did not . . . to me. But I can not help feeling that there is some grave misunderstanding between you that caused you to . . . to do as you did."

Eulalia leaned toward him, her hands gripping the arms of the chair.

"Ai, Padre mio," she breathed, "if you only knew . . ."

But the priest silenced her.

"I was going to say that I am sure the fault does not lie with you, whatever it be. For . . . he has behaved under this punishment only as one who suffers unjustly, and is innocent of wrongdoing."

Eulalia leaned back and stared at him breathlessly.

"As your spiritual father, I tell you this. And as the spiritual father of his Excellency, Don Pedro, I must speak to him as I have spoken to you."

"Ah, no!" she cried suddenly. Then at the surprised expression on the priest's face, she controlled herself hastily.

"You think, then," she said haltingly, "that perhaps Don Pedro's conduct is . . ."

"Extraordinary, to say the least."

Eulalia smiled a secret smile of triumph.

She rose.

"Is that all, Father?" she asked meekly.

"That is all, for the present. But I am going to ask you one thing. Come to the early mass Sunday."

"Very well."

When, on the next Sunday, she entered the church with the Indian women she was trembling nervously. No comfortable chair was placed for her, as when she had been there before, and she needs must stand on the cold dirt floor, and kneel upon it, without any cushion. With her head wrapped in a coarse black rebozo, her face shone out, white and drawn with the strain of her incarceration. Dona Maria looked at her and compressed her lips.

"I am afraid for that one," she thought to herself. "She looks ill."

With shaking knees and voice, Eulalia followed the service. Her thoughts flew back to the first time she had taken part in the services in the church of Mission San Carlos, and Junipero Serra . . . She bent her head.

There at her feet, actually beneath her where she stood, lay his bones.

Junipero Serra, Junipero Serra! She nearly screamed the words aloud. Through the wood of his rough coffin, through the dirt that covered him, his eyes seemed to stare at her reproachfully, blazing at her from fleshless sockets . . . The strength of pride and will that had kept her suffering nerves in leash these two long months deserted her, and weeping hysterically, she collapsed on Junipero Serra's tomb.

When the Governor reached the presidio, almost the first report he had was from Angustias who told him accusingly that La Gobernadora, imprisoned in the monjera at Carmel, had been very ill, but was now better.

"No wonder," snorted the old woman. "With no decent food or clothes. I went over to Carmel several times to brush her hair, and that old beldame, Maria, wouldn't let me!"

It was his first impulse to run to her swiftly. Suddenly, more than anything in the world, he wished to hold her in his arms, to comfort her as though she were a little girl. His flower, his Eulalia! Why, it was because she was such a spirited, fiery little thing that he had fallen in love with her and married her. And after he had married her, he had spoiled her, and been away from her too long; was her fiery spirit broken after these two long months in the monjera to which he had sentenced her?

He sent a messenger to her to tell her to come to him as soon as she was able.

For he could not trust himself to go to her.

And Eulalia, in the austere monjera, wept.

Suddenly, to her, nothing seemed so desirable as to be in her husband's arms, wherever he might go, whatever he might be.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Waiting restlessly for Eulalia to come to him, Don Pedro rode out to his vineyard in the bright spring morning. He left his horse and walked alone among the green vines. Tenderly he looked at them, admiring their robust growth, touching a tendril here, stroking a glossy leaf there. He knelt down on the earth beside a young vine and picked a bit of soil up in his fingers, as was his habit.

Over him the sky was unusually blue for this coastal region, and the sun was high and hot. A little in the distance he could see his orchard, some of the trees in early green, some still rosy with blossoms. And where the land was not cultivated it bloomed with wild-flowers.

"California!" he breathed. "She has given herself to me like a woman. Give her smiles and her tears and fruits of her body. I shall not leave such a fruitful mistress."

A single horse and rider came rapidly toward the vineyard. It was Eulalia.

Pedro Fages rose to his feet and looked about him.

"The vines are young," he murmured. "Next spring they will be young again. Ten springs . . . a score of springs, and they will still be young . . . but I . . ." He watched, almost in fear, as she slipped lithely from her horse and came toward him, at first slowly, then as she caught sight of him when he stood upright, in a little run, holding up her skirts, laughing like a girl, shading her eyes with her hand.

"But Eulalia is young now!" he cried to himself. "Ten springs, a score of springs . . . and then . . . NO!" Suddenly he brushed the soil of California from his fingers and sprang toward her. Dimly he noticed that her feet crushed the young vines as she ran.

"Pedro! My Pedro!" She sank at his feet in the dirt, laughing, weeping. "Pedro, oh, my Pedro!"

He lifted her in his arms, then put her on her feet, and knelt before her, swinging off his sombrero.

He Lifted Her in His Arms.

He clasped her knees, looking up into her face. "Eulalia, my dear, my flower . . . you are beautiful, and pale. You have suffered . . ." He kissed her little shoe, and noticed the pungency of the vines she had crushed.

She pulled him upright to her, and took his face between her hands. "Pedro, my great bear, you are so brave, so strong . . . so cruel to me . . ."

"I am a great fool!" He groaned, straining her to him. "Eulalia, I have something to tell you. I am resigning as Governor of the Californias, and . . ."

"And?" she exclaimed, flushing suddenly, radiantly, "and we are going away from here . . . back to Mexico . . . Spain?"

Over her head he looked at the hills, the sky, the distant mountains, the sea, the orchards, the beloved vineyard. Tears filled his eyes and blurred the scene.

"Yes . . . away from here," he said.

CHAPTER XXIX

Triumphantly Eulalia sailed on the first ship that put out from Monterey, with the two children and Angustias. From the shore Pedro Fages watched the ship as far as he could see it, then turned and rode madly to the Mission Carmelo. He went into the little church, and kneeling by the tomb of Junipero Serra talked with his old friend.

It would be a year before his successor would arrive. And the time was all too short in which to say his farewells to the land he had loved so faithfully, so he had hastened first to the old missionary.

He spent the year putting his affairs in order, tending, with an aching heart, his trees and vines.

And at the end of the year his successor came. On board the old San Carlos arrived his old friend Capitan Romeu, who had persuaded Eulalia so long ago to come to California.

A few days later the San Carlos was due to sail. On that same day the great Spanish explorer Malaspina put the frigate Descubierto into the harbor of Monterey. Those on shore watched her launch a long-boat among the frisking whales. When the long-boat landed there was a bundle wrapped in sail cloth.

"A dead sailor," said the captain. "We wish to bury him ashore."

So he was buried. Pedro Fages and the new Governor of the Californias paused by his grave on their way to the beach from where Don Pedro was to be rowed to the San Carlos. They examined the slab of oakwood that bore his epitaph.

"John Graham, a seaman. Born in Boston, Massachusetts . . ."

"Our first American," murmured Romeu.

Pedro Fages looked east across the mountains. In his mind's eye he saw higher ranges of mountains, deserts, prairies, rivers, more mountains and great inland lakes. And across that country, men having come to the end of the men, California, and her golden lure.

"You are right," he said, "our first. But not, O Governor of all the Californias, our last."

Then he hastened to the waiting lancha and, turning his back resolutely on the land, was rowed to the waiting San Carlos. Soon the sails filled and Romeu, watching on the shore, saw the gallant old paquebot, which had borne Pedro Fages to California, slowly turn with the tide to bear him away.

GAME IS PLENTIFUL IN STATE SAYS REPORT

According to reports received by the Division of Game and Fish from the Conservation officers and from the hunters themselves, the rabbit and quail hunting season is a very successful one.

On the opening day—Thanksgiving day— the fields were blanketed with an approximate 4-inch snow, and in many places it was eight and ten inches in depth. This was a blessing in disguise to he rabbits and quail as many hunters who had planned to go into the fields and forests remained by their firesides and those who were brave enough to face the snow and cold, had trouble locating the rabbits and quail. Very few hunters reported killing the bag limit, on either bird or animal on the poening day. As a result of this, many rabbits and quail were spared.

Beer Pays Million Dollar Daily Taxes

BEER has become a revenue producer of more than a million dollars a day for the Federal, state and local governments—more than $500 a minute to the U. S. Treasury alone—according to official figures in "Beer and Brewing in America," the 1938 edition of the industry's economic textbook. The study is a revised edition by Standard Statistics Co., Inc., of the book by the late Warren M. Persons, former professor of economics at Harvard University, and is published by United Brewers Industrial Foundation.

Federal taxes, which totaled $273,192,458 for the fiscal year 1938, have exceeded $1,306,000,000 for the five and one-half years since relegalization of beer, in April 1933, while state and local fees have totaled another half-billion. The public revenues from beer and one-half years have exceeded the aggregate for the 25 years prior to prohibition, when beer sales were even higher. This is explained by the fact that current taxes on beer are seven times as high as in the former days, when the excise was $1 per barrel, in contrast to the current $5, and there were no state taxes.

The booklet also analyzes the benefits that have accrued to agriculture, labor and various lines of industry furnishing machinery, equipment, materials and services to the brewing industry. Brewery labor alone has benefited to the extent of $350,000,000 since relegalization, while the amount spent by the brewers for farm products has approximated a half-billion dollars. Total benefits accruing to allied industries, labor, public revenues and local business men through direct sale of beer are estimated at seven billion dollars for the five and one-half years.

"The influence of that expenditure in the deepest depression that this nation has even experienced was far-reaching, and as the expenditure indicates," is one of the observations made.

In an appendix, it is also revealed that consumption of beer, as a beverage of moderation, has shown an increase in recent years in all countries where temperance education was most wide-spread and effective.

HONEY HAS MANY USES IN BAKING

Bakeries make much of the fact that they use honey in baking. They do this to keep their products from drying out too rapidly. The same principle works equally well in cakes and other products baked in the home, says Miss Florence Imlay of the home demonstration section of the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Honey takes up moisture rapidly and holds it so fruit cakes, streamed puddings, cookies and candies made with it stay moist a long time. But confections and frostings made with honey will remain undesirably soft and sticky and take up more moisture if the air is humid.

One can substitute honey for sugar in a cake recipe, but because of the moisture in the honey less liquid is needed. The amount that the liquid must be reduced depends on the kind of honey—medium, thick or thin, and one the proportion of honey substitued for sugar.

When medium-thick honey is substituted for half the sugar in a cake recipe, reduce the liquid one-fourth. If honey is substituted for all the sugar, reduce the liquid one-half.

Honey may be used in gingerbreads and steamed puddings. It has much the same consistency as molasses and may be used in place of it, measure for measure. But honey contains less acid than molasses; so leave out the soda if it is called for and increase the quantity of baking powder. Otherwise follow the usual method in the recipe you are accustomed to, including time and temperature of baking.

If sportsmen will observe the laws pertaining to bag limit and try not to become "game hogs" birds and animals that survive the hunting season will be many and will reproduce many more for the next season, resulting in even better hunting tracted for and could have been completed, he asserted.

DIXIE HIGHWAY GROUPS FAVOR RECONSTRUCTION

Judge Read, in commenting on the expressions of the Dixie Highway Association, invited them to present arguments and any objections they had to the Fiscal Court at one of its meetings. The Fiscal Court will do nothing which will impair the welfare of any of the communities or residents on the existing road, he said Thursday.

Mr. Billiter's letter to T. H. Cutler, State Highway Engineer, expresses his views on the proposed construction of a superhighway. The letter is as follows:

"The distance between Florence and Walton is a little less than eight miles. This road has had but very little maintenance costs during the last stages of depreciation, which yet could be saved with a binder base and rock asphalt surface. By doing that and adding two lanes of traffic on each side of the present road—which should be 10 feet wide of concrete construction, a superhighway would be had from Covington to Walton at a fraction of the cost it would require to build the proposed super-highway from Latonia; could probably be built with six or eight months and serve the community that has done so much to make this modern highway possible. The Latonia to Walton proposition is deserving also, but could follow, as the state will lose the valuable base that is now available, but perhaps will be entirely depreciated in another year or two. Residents in this community have been patiently waiting this extension from Florence and it is badly needed. Right-of-way alongside of the present road is sufficient in much of the distance and where additional land is required, it is safe to say it can be had very reasonably in this civic-minded locality. We feel that it is not asking too much to complete the present location from Florence to Walton utilizing present available resources in time."

HOUSEWIVES HELP JOIN CRUSADE AGAINST TAXES

Mrs. Kenneth C. Frazier, national president.

The commission is described as a non-political organization conducting a drive by housewives of the nation against all taxes that add to the burden of the consumer. The drive is led in this state by Mrs. E. H. Heller, of Louisville, the national committee member and Mrs. J. E. Warren, Mayfield, Kentucky state director.

"This is a movement every housewife should support," Mrs. Frazier said, in welcoming the new chairman. "Hidden taxes, which increase the cost of everything we buy, account for 63 per cent of all tax revenues raised by local, state and national governments, according to the commission's research department.

"These unseen levies fall most heavily on lower-income families. They cause higher prices on food, clothing, fuel, rent and other family essentials, with the result that many families have to give up some of the necessities to make ends meet.

Hundreds of units in states from coast to coast already are active in the ax fight, Mrs. Frazier said, and plans call for groups in every city and town. A series of study programs she added, will be used by members through which to inform families here of their tax burden.

PROPOSED ROUTE TO BE DISCUSSED AT HIGHWAY GROUP MEETING

HUGE MARIHUANA SUPPLY SEIZED BY STATE PATROLMEN NEAR HERE TUESDAY

Negro Captured After Chase by Officers

A cargo of marihuana with a retail value of $6,000 was seized by State Police in a car parked north of Walton early Tuesday morning. The occupant of the car, Freeman Miller, 29, was arrested by James Carr and Charles Conrad, State patrolmen, when he was found asleep. The other prisoners were Wm. Rogers, 23, and William Crutcher, 27, all of Nicholasville, Ky. Two sacks of marihuana were hidden in a field near the Southern Railroad right-of-way. Officers were first called when the section foreman noticed the men secreting the sacks, and the one arrest followed.

After laying in wait for several hours the two other occupants of the car returned with gasoline and a tube from Cincinnai, and officers arrested two after chasing Crutcher across a corn field for a half a mile.

Six bushels of the weed, valued at $25 a bushel was found in possession of the suspects. This is regarded as a major blow to the suppliers of the weed in Cincinnati. The Negroes admitted that they had been running marihuana into that city for more than a year and wholesaling it to muggles peddlers for $25 a bushel. If made into cigarettes selling at 15 cents each, the retail value was over $6,000, officers said.

The suspects, held in Lexington for arraingement Wednesday before William B. Martin, U. S. commissioner, were held under $5,000 bonds. Miller pleaded guilty and the others entered innocent pleas.

The state patrolmen enlisted the aid of R. E. Brugh, marshal of Walton, E. M. Johnson, Kentucky game Warden; Monroe Thompson, deputy U. S. Marshall and two federal narcotics agents.

Another bushel of Marihuana was discovered when officers searched Miller's home at Nicholasville, Jessamine couny, Ky. Miller was said to be a marihuana addict.

Several patches of wild hemp have been discovered recently in the Bluegrass and it is thought seeds have been scattered in various patches under surveillance of members of the ring, to make it appear that the weed was growing wild.

The business educational meetings will be followed by a banquet at the Baptis' church. Mr. Carl W. Jones will be in charge fo a special recreational program for the members. All Utopia club members are urged to be present and visitors are welcome.

TO BE HELD AT FLORENCE TUESDAY NIGHT; PROPERTY OWNERS URGED TO ATTEND AND AID IN OBTAINING WORK ON PRESENT DIXIE

A meeting for the purpose of discussing further plans for securing reconstruction work and maintaining the present route of U. S. 25, more familiarly known in Northern Kentucky as the Dixie Highway, has been called for Tuesday night, January 25, at Florence, Ky. A committee report will also be heard at that time.

Following a joint meeting of the U. S. 25 Association and the Williamstown Rotary club last Thursday night, Mr. Billiter, president of the old Dixie Highway group immediately made plans for the Northern Kentucky and of the road to take an active part in fighting to maintain the present right-of-way (wherever practical) as the leading North and South route through Kentucky. The meeting called at Zimmer Gardens, located at the intersection of U. S. 42 and 25, will start at 8 p. m. fast time (7 p. m. Walton time).

A proposed new four lane parkplan highway has received much publicity through the daily paper for the past few weeks, and as this new route is said to use sections of Kentucky 17 in leaving Covington, later branching off at Sanfordtown to go South between Walton and Independence to a point near Dry Ridge, the group became active.

The present highway is being constantly maintained, at a great expense by the State Highway Department, and will have to be rebuilt within the next two or three years. Steps should be taken to widen and repair the present Dixie from Walton to Florence, an eight-mile strip.

Since the Dixie is recognized as the "most traveled road in the State" and is in such "bad condition" at present, widening and repair should be done on it immediately. Mr. Billiter added.

Representatives from the communities affected by changes in the road are invited to be present and take part in the activities of the evening. Many homes and business houses will be seriously damaged if any change is routing is allowed. A great deal of time and money have been given in the past to preserve the identification of this highway group in retaining the present route.

It is the fear of the Dixie Highway Association members that if the new proposed route is built the present highway will be abandoned completely and allowed to detierate.

The committee of three that were selected at the Williamstown meeting will make their report at this meeting.

Plan Community Farm Programs

To Hold Series of Farm Owner Meetings Soon

Boone county farmers will hold a series of 1939 community agricultural program planning meetings during the next two weeks according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. The purpose of these meetings will be to plan the local agricultural improvement program that the farm people of that community would like to see carried out during the remainder of the year.

Farmers cooperating in this work in the past have rendered a splendid service to the solution of local farm problems. The past year much of the hybrid corn growing work, increased use of winter cover crops, limestone, phosphate and improved varieties and methods of tobacco, production, fruit, poultry, dairy, sheep and livestock improvement and other important agricultural projects were planned for and developed thru these local community programs.

Farmers interested in this work and who are willing to cooperate in the solution of these problems are urged to make plans to attend the planning meetings in their community. The dates will be announced the later part of this week.

HAMILTON RESIDENT DIES FROM PNEUMONIA

Brief funeral services were held at the grave of Rev. Roy Johnson, and interment was in big bone cemetery. He leaves three brothers and three sisters.

Chambers & Grubbs were in chage oft he final arrangements.

STATE PATROLMAN IS SUSPENDED TUESDAY

Nick Winterberg, state highway patrolman was suspended Tuesday for ten days pending an investigation into an accident in which he was involved last Tuesday.

According to Mr. Winterberg, the tire of his motorcycle blew out as he came through Richwood. He swerved to avoid hitting an auto and plunged over an enbankment. No one was injured. Damage to the cycle was slight. Reports show this fourth accident with that equipment.

Following a proposed new four lane park-plan highway has received much publicity through the daily paper for the past few weeks, and as this new route is said to use sections of Kentucky 17 in leaving Covington, later branching off at Sanfordtown to go South between Walton and Independence to a point near Dry Ridge, the group became active.

The present highway is being constantly maintained, at a great expense by the State Highway Department, and will have to be rebuilt within the next two or three years. Steps should be taken to widen and repair the present Dixie from Walton to Florence, an eight-mile strip.

One Resolution You Should Keep

By this time, most of your New Year's resolutions have probably been broken. That's only human. But there's one resolution every one of us should make and keep for the twelve months ahead. Here it is: "I resolve to do my part, as a motorist and pedestrian, to help reduce America's ghastly death and accident toll."

During a large part of 1938, the accident rate declined. But we haven't yet earned the right to compliment ourselves and sit back on our laurels. Tens of thousands more will die unnecessarily this year—unless all of us do something about it.

There are three basic approaches to the accident problem. First, comes education. And that doesn't mean just teaching the rudiments of safety to school children. It also means reaching the adult—continuously and pointedly—with those simple instructions and suggestions that, if followed, will reduce the hazards of motoring 90 per cent.

Second, comes law enforcement. Incompetent police—wholesale ticket-fixing—slothful prosecutors—inefficient traffic courts—these are among the best friends the Grim Reaper has. A number of American cities have materially reduced their accident rates by revising their traffic codes, training their traffic police, and doing away with fixing.

Third, comes better street and highway design, to eliminate "accident prone" locations. Many an intersection which was a virtual death trap has been made safe through competent engineering. Every community should start on a long-time program that will gradually do away with this cause of deaths and injuries.

We can have safety—if we want it, and are willing to earn it. This is a universal problem, and its solution depends on the cooperation of us all. We made progress toward that end last year—let's do a great deal more this year.

Harmony In Democratic Circle

News dispatches from Washington indicate that "all is well" among Democrats gathered to the 76th Congress. Prominently mentioned in the press releases is the name of Kentucky's foremost leader, Senator Alben W. Barkley, who was re-elected as majority leader for this session of the Nation's lawmakers.

Kentucky is proud that this noted son is again honored as leader in the Senate, and the honors bestowed on him are honors granted as well to all Kentuckians, for it was through their individual vote that he was returned to represent this grand state in affairs of the nation.

In striking contrast to the bitter Democratic battle over Senate leadership last session, Senator Barkley won the post this year by a unanimous vote, in a session that lasted only 20 minutes. Last year he was named to succeed the late Sen. Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas by a single vote margin in a contest with Sen. Pat Harrison of Mississippi.

Again harmony reigns at Washington.

You May Help

Requests often come to us for donations for one cause or another, and sometimes we give, other times we don't. Recently, however, the struggles of an invalid who is trying to save her home was called to our attention. Upon investigation we found that one of Kenton county's finest women, who has been an invalid for many years, was staging a battle to redeem her home with the help of her friends and neighbors. And, if you please, you may help ease the burden from this bed-ridden woman's shoulders. A small gift sent direct to Mrs. Wallie Morgan, Morning View, Ky., will receive her humble thanks and do wonderful work for this fine lady.

Secure

In this issue of the Advertiser is printed several semi-annual statements of the banks of Boone county. From their figures we learn that our neighbors are better off financially than those in some of the adjoining states, and that our banks are in a strong, secure position to carry on their endeavors. It is with a feeling of satisfaction that we print the statements each six months, for we know they prove that Boone county is one of the finest, financially and otherwise.

Need Fo rNew Dixie

Current discussion of the proposed routing of the Dixie Highway through Kenton county, leaving Boone entirely off, has brought a storm of indignation from property-owners along this "beaten trail." For many years the Dixie Highway through this county was the only paved outlet to the Bluegrass and other points from the North, and retained its popularity after the surface had disintergrated to a dangerous point.

Today the road stands in need of reconstruction and straightening in many places. But mockery is heaped upon the efforts of a decade ago when men struggled to retain its famous name "Dixie Highway" and "U. S. 25" by suggesting a foreign route that would deprive this stretch of road of its rightful revenue.

For many, many dollars less the "Dixie" could be rebuilt to carry the present-day loads, as well as those of the future. Plans should, and must, consider this route first.

Inviting Typhoid To Walton

Recent efforts in Louisville to rid that city of the menace of outdoor toilets and the accompanying typhoid fever epidemics should interest the citizens of Walton. Last year the Trustees of Walton passed an ordinance banning the use of unsanitary and disease-spreading toilets. A few of the property-owners built the improved-type Kentucky sanitary toilets, but as long as their neighbor neglects to protect themselves, the town will be easy prey for typhoid fever germs.

Walton residents should make plans now to eliminate this unsanitary and unsightly object before warm weather, and in its place build health-protecting sanitary toilets.

A Live Wire Briar Hopper

An Explanation! Why I am having my Briar Hopper stories reprinted; all but a few of my original stories were lost in the flood, having a great many requests for the stories I am having them reprinted with the intention of putting them in book form with other interesting matter—Will S. Norris.

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

When I read dramatic moments of Democratic convention by Urey Woodson in the Kentucky World it reminded me of the great silver and gold campaign in 1896 which was more or less dramatic all the way through when people went wild about Bryan the great leader of the common people at his first appearance at Music Hall in Cincinnati which was dramatic. Later on in the campaign I saw the gold standard procession marching through the Cincinnati streets when factory men and railroad men had to carry gold banners under the marching orders of the great corporation of railroad magnates or lose their jobs.

Men were told if Bryan was elected they need not come back to work as the factories would be closed. This was anther edict the great mass of common and laboring class of people had to bow to. From then until now the cords have been tightened.

The facts are the trouble started when they demonitized silver and legislated in favor of gold. What is the result? The railroads are reaping what they sowed. They are depending and begging on bended knees for the government to loan them money to keep them from going bankrupt. Banks say they have no money and are loaded down with frozen assets. What is the cause of all of this? Most everyone says he has no money. Where is all of the money?

The facts are there is not enough money to go around. Our country and things have grown faster than our money which continue as long as we have a single gold standard.

PLAN PROVIDES FOR JOB INSURANCE

At the outset it should be understood that Unemployment Insurance is like all other farms of insurance. All insurance is a definite protection against loss, with Unemployment Insurance taking the particular form of protecting a worker against loss of work.

A person who has a fire insurance policy upon his home or furnishings is assured, by the regular payment of premiums, a certain financial return in case his home or its contents are damaged or destroyed by fire. Only in the event of a fire and resulting damage does such a policy holder collect on his policy.

Similarly, under the eligible to receive benefit payments.

Thus the contributions of a worker and those of his employer to the Unemployment Insurance Fund become "premiums" upon a "job insurance" policy. Workers who do not come under the law and therefore pay no "premiums" to the fund are not eligible for benefits.

The purpose of this form of insurance is to provide a safeguard for workers during the hardships of unemployment. The purpose of the law is to assure a worker who is a "policy holder" a regular income for a period of time ordinarily sufficient for him to find other employment or until his former position again becomes available to him.

In any event he is assisted in his efforts to find work during his period of unemployment bythe Kentucky State Employment Service which will use all of its facilities to locate him a similar position or one as good as the position he formerly held.

As a general proposition employers having four or more persons in their hire, except for certain types of service, come within the provisions of the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Law. If any employer has less than four persons in his employ, generally speaking, he does not come within the provisions of law are: Agricultural workers; domestic service; officers an dcrews of vessels; services performed by a child unde the age orf 21 in the employ of father or mother, and service performed by a parent for his son or daughter; services performed by an individual in the employ of wife or husband; governmental service, whether federal, state or local; services for charitable, religious, scientific, literary, educational or humane organizations not operated for profit; casual insurance activities not in the course of the individual's ordinary means of livelihood.

Employers who come within the provisons of the law are required to post notices in their places of business evidencing the fact they come under the law.

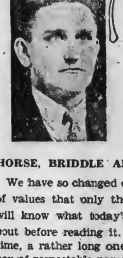
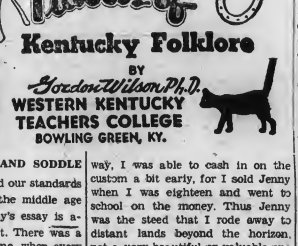
INFORMATION IN REGARD TO OLD AGE PENSIONS

The fact that a person works for an employer who is covered by the old-age insurance part of the Social Security act does not necessarily mean that worker is entitled to unemployment compensation if he becomes unemployed.

This statement was made today by Frank B. Decker, Jr., manager of the Social Security Board field office in Covington.



This statement was made today by Frank B. Decker, Jr., manager of the Social Security Board field office in Covington.



"All employers of one or more, in commerce or industry, are usually covered by the Social Security Act's oldage insurance plan," Mr. Decker said.

"But in Kentucky only those employers of four or more persons come under our state's unemployment insurance law. Therefore in the smaller establishments workers may be covered under the old-age insurance plan but not entitle dto job insurance benefits if they become unemployed," Mr. Decker added.

The state employment offices should be consulted by those who believe they may be entitled to job insurance benefits, as these payments are made entirely by the state, Mr. Decker added.

HORSE, BRIDDLE AND SODDLE

We have so changed our standards of values that only the middle age will know what today's essay is about before reading it. There was a time, a rather long one, when every boy of respectable parents was given a horse, a bridle and a saddle on his twenty-first birthday. This was his start in the world; he could saddle his nag and ride to conquer the world, like a knight of old. Society regarded this as a handsome start for a young man, and it was, with his horse he could make his way in the world. Land was abundant and practically free. The frontier was calling to all the restless younger generation. Given this start, almost any boy might soon be the owner of a quarter section of land, which he might hope to add to as his own family grew up about him. And to each successive boy who became a man there would be given a horse, a bridle, and a saddle. Each boy expected it.

How delightful the old custom of setting up the newly married couple in their first housekeeping! Her parents usually gave a cow and some chickens; both families gave feather beds and pillows and quilts and sometimes furniture. The dowry as such had long ago vanished, but a family pride saw to it that each new couple had an even break with the world.

Some of us lived just when this ancient custom was passing. Since I was the youngest boy, I barely got in on this tradition. But my Steed was a little red mule named Jenny, and I bought the saddle myself with money I made raising onions. Anyway, I was able to cash in on the custom a bit early, for I sold Jenny when I was eighteen and went to school on the money. Thus Jenny was the steed that I rode away to distant lands beyond the horizon, not a very beautiful or valuable one but connected with a fine old tradition.

Many fathers that I knew as a boy would talk with pride in their declining years in some such fashion: "Me and Mary was purty pore when we got married, but I had my horse, and she had her cow and some chickens. We started keeping house in a log cabin, with jest a jacob fer a bed. But we worked hard, and, I gum, I give ever' one of my boys a horse, bridle and saddle when he was twenty-one year old." A familiar formula to the old-timers, a strange rigmarole to youngsters; but only another illustration of how impossible it often becomes for one generation to talk understandingly to another. How can you and I make our children understand the value of a buggy, when they are used to the family car? What would they think to hear Granpa brag about buying a new surrey?

Human affection for children has in no way changed; we have merely changed the ways of showing it. Your boys and girls go forth to conquer the world today, not on a horse properly bridled and saddled, but equipped, well or poorly, with an education that must be their means of finding their way in an age when free land no longer exists. And, let us hope, they, too will provide whatever has again taken the place of horse, briddle, and saddle for those who come after them.

S-C-S Notes

The beginning of a new year marks a time when good business men, on farms and in town alike, take stock of their peast year's efforts and make plans for the coming year. Mr. H. T. Hesson, project manager of the Soil Conservation Service demonstration projest on Grassy Creek, points out that some consideration for soil conservation must be included in the farm plans for the new year if the yare to be sucessfully executed.

The past year was marked with some rains of high intensity which did untold damage to hill farmers by washing fertile soil from their plowed fields, well as to bottom land farmers who lost many acres of crops through floods. The occurrence of such rains can never be predicted with accuracy so we must anticipate them each year in our planning, says Mr. Hesson.

In a section where slopes are as steep as those in northern Kentucky, the first step in planning for soil conservation and profitable farming is to arrange the farm in such a way that minimum acreage is subject to erosion and a maximum acreage is devoted to soil conserving crops and pasture. A survey in the outer Bluegrass Bulletin No. 384. It was found that land was utilized most profitably when approximatly one-sixth of it was used for the production of alfalfa hay; less than one tenth for intertilled crops such as corn and tobacco; from one-half to two-thirds for good open pasture; and less than onetenth in brush pasture. Such an adjustment in land is use in a basic for soil conservation as well as for profitable farm operation.

Reduction in intertilled crops provides for a minimum acreage subject to erosion, but does not protect those acres from washing. Measures recommended for soil conservation on such land include (1) farming the more gentle slopes,)2) plowing the land deep and early, (3) turning under a good growth of vegetation and (4) application of manure to improve the physical condition of the soil and aid in preventing erosion.

Strip cropping, that is arranging for bands of sod between each 12 to 15 rows of cultivated crops, has proven to be very effective in catching soil which may wash from the plowed land if a good sod is present in the control strip. Diversion ditches have been used with good results in removing excess run-off from broad ridges without letting it wash steeper land below.

A real problem of soil and water conservation exists on pasture land in the outer Bluegrass section of the state because of the poor quality of many pasture sods. One of the first steps in planning for better care of pastures is to divide the pasture land into smaller fields and control the grazing on them according to the growth of the grass, instead of letting the stock have he run of the entire farm.

Interseeding of existing pastures with adapted legumes pay big dividends when grazing can be controlled on the reseeded arear long enough to give the young seedlings a chance. Sweet clover, sown in February, or Korean lespedeza sown in March, sow most promise for pasture improvement. Ten pounds of seed per acre counted as one unit of soil conserving practice under the agricultural conservation program in 1938 and it is thought that the 1939 program will be the same in this regard. With the low cost of seed this year this practice can well be increased or initiated on practically any farm in Grant or Pendleton county.

For futher suggestions on soil conservation farming you are invited to contact your county agricultural agent or the Soil Conservation offices in Falmouth, Ky., or contact the SCS camp at Walton, Kentucky.

SOCIAL SECURITY TAX RATE TO REMAIN SAME IN 1939

There is no change in the 1939 rate of the tax which is imposed for old age insurance under the Social Security Act. This statement was made today by Frank B. Decker, Jr., Manager of the Social Security Board field office in the Coppin Building in Covington.

"The rate this year is the same as it was in 1937 and 1938," Mr. Decker said.

Workers contribute one percent of their pay in jobs which are covered by the old-age insurance plan, up to a maxium of $3,000 a year for any one job. Employers are taxed a like amount for each covered worker."

Taxes for the first quarter of 1938 are payable not later than January 31 at the office of the United States Collector of Internal Revenue in Louisville," Mr. Decker added.

RECORD 4-H CLUB YEAR COMPLETED

A record 4-H club year was completed in 1938 according to H. R. Folkner, county agent. Four hundred and seventy-one of the 501 members enrolled or 94. 1 per cent completed their project work. Two hundred forty-one of these members completed 284 agricultural projects valued at $18,373.00

The above records give Boone 4-H clubs the largest enrollment, the largest number of project completions with the greatest money value in the history of the 4-H club program. The adult 4-H club leaders and the splendid type of boys and girls enrolled account for the major portion of the fine work done the past year.

The 4-H club members and ladies are undaunted in making record breaking history. They are looking forward to 1939 for even greater achievements. The 4-H clubs will begin their organization work in February. Plans are being made for a bigger and better year.

NEW STRAINS OF BROWN LEGHORN BEING DEVELOPED IN KENTUCKY

Cooperating with the University of Kentucky, Herbert C. Helm, owner of Helm's Hatchery at Paducah and Metropolis, Ill., is developing a new strain of Brown Leghorns. Last fall Helm imported from Danmark some of their finest and heaviest production Brown Leghorns. For years it has been known that the Brown Leghorns in Denmark have been developed for heavy laying just like the White Leghorns have in this county. Also the Danish Brown Leghorn lays such a large white egg shipped clear from Denmark top the London markets in competition with the eggs produced in England.

Last week the first eggs from these Denmark Brown Leghorns were set to hatch on January 9. Regular settings will be made weekly through the year for Helm hatcheries continuously, never closing his incubators. However, for the first year none of the chicks will be offered for sale to the general public, only to special selected cooperators who want to take a part in the development of this new breed. However, right from the star a limited number of day old males for flock improvement purposes will be available to those now raising Brown Leghorns.

It is through the interest of Dr. Martin, head of the Poultry Department of the University of Kentucky, that these Brown Leghorns are being developed in this country. Several years ago, while enjoying a boat ride together in Baltimore, Dr. Martin remarked to Mr. Helm that in his opinion the Danish Brown Leghorns were the finest of all breeds and that he hoped some day as his contribution to the poultry industry to develop in this country a new strain of Brown Leghorns based on those famous Brown Leghorns that Mr. Helm told him he would finance the importation and that they would start at once developing this strain in America.

PROGRAM $63,640 PAID FARMERS A. C. PROGRAM

Boone County farmers will receive approximately $63,640. 0 in Agricultural Conservation Program benefits for cooperation in the 1938 program, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. Application for payment forms are being rapidly completed at the county office in Burlington and will be ready for farmers' signatures in about ten days. Approximately six weeks are required between the time applications are filed and payment is made.

Approximately $48,640.00 of the above payment will be made for carrying out soil building practices and $15,000.00 for tobacco acreage reductions. The soil building practice earnings exceeds the $30,680.00 earned in 1937 by $17,960.00 or 58.5 percent. This represents a substantial increase in grass and legumes sown and the amount of limestone and phosphate used on soil conserving crops to protect and build up the land.

Notes From Division of FISH and GAME

With the introduction of metal license containers for the hunting, fishing and trapping licenses this year, Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, gives several reasons for the use of such containers in this state.

1. The container protects the license from wear and tear and also helps to prevent loss of said license.
2. The container with the license enclosed, must be worn on the outside clothing where it must be plainly visible. This will result in common knowledge of just what has a license and who doesn't.
3. With the license plainly visible in the container on the outside clothing, the farmer will know who is container is visible, he can rest assured that he is entertaining a violator and a trespasser at the same time.
4. Any one who fails to have the container with license enclosed on the outside clothing while hunting, fishing or trapping, is liable to arrest and prosecution.

Title to all wildlife, including birds, game animals, fur-bearing animals and fish, is vested in the state in its soverign right and oily when such wildlife is legally reduced to possession, does it become private property. That this heritage may be preserved, those who participate in the sport of taking wildlife have a definite responsibility, is regard for others who indulge in the sport, vandalism and destruction of property on privately owned lands, a lack of consideration of the feelings of the land owner upon whose premises wildlife is produced, and the careless use and handling of firearms, may make necessary the enactment which will limit the privileges which we as citizens of the "land of the free" enjoy and desire to pass on to posterity.

All waters within the state flowing in natural channel streams are, unless set aside as State or Federal game refuges, public shooting, trapping and fishing grounds, for the use and enjoyment of all in common. The ethical sportsman will not encroach upon another's shooting, trapping or fishing site or spot, which is rightfully the latter's by virtue of prior occupancy.

To promote a better understand and relation between the sporman and the land owner, the rights of the land owner must be respected. Trespass laws, armed with "teeth," are not the solution, hence this appeal is made to the hunter, that he, through exemplary conduct and and "Missionary" work, promote better Sportman-Farmer lelationship. Permission to hunt on occupied farm lands, if it is worth anything, is worth asking for. To invade a cornfield in quest of game birds without first ascertaining whether or not livestock is at large in such field or whether the corp is being harvested with horse-drawn equipment, is unnecessarily endangering life and property. The few minutes, promotes safety and not infrequently such cantracts result your host game taken on his premises is a geture that ontalls no sacrifice on the part of the hunter and in most cases is deeply appreciated. Not all farmers have time not the facilities with which to take for themselves game produced ontheir acres.

If a closer understanding is reached between the farmer and the sportsman, the Division of Game and Fish will be better able to carry on its program of the conservation of wildlife, education and a bigger and more plentiful supply of game and fish fo rthe citizens of Kentucky as well for the thousands of tourists who visit our state each year.

Federal debt is now $39,427,000,000 a new high.

Newness

IN AN old autograph album were found these words, penned long ago, but still ringing with hope and serving to arouse one to new efforts and achievements.

"Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new."

Words are worth only the thoughts they convey, and few carry more inspiration than does the word "newness." . . .

In the history of the children of Israel, as recorded in the Bible, we read that they were admonished to cleanse the altar after making sacrifice and to sanctify it for the new day. Would this not indicate the need for us to begin each day afresh, to leave behind, to clean away, the shadows, discouragements, and disappointments of yesterday and begin anew, fortified by new consecration, new vision, fresh aspiration?

Jesus said (John 13:34), "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you." The old standard of "thou shalt not" was to be supplemented with a larger, a newer standard of a positive rather than a negative nature. Proportionately as this new commandment is put into practice the nature of the individual is changed, a new view of man's relationship to God is gained, and his whole existeuce takes on new life and beauty. "God requireth that which is past" (Ecclesiastes 3:15). Only today is ours with its infinite possibilities.

Paul wrote (Ephesians 4:22-24), "Put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and . . . put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." . . .

The human mind has a tendency to look backward and to grieve over past mistakes; to spend much precious time in regretting its failure to use the opportunities presented and its unwise and unloving actions. Jesus once admonished his hearers to remember Lot's wife. The record does not say that she started to go back; she merely looked back, and her punishment was swift.

To ignore evil neither corrects nor destroys it; but when a wrong is recognized as error, and an honest effort is made to correct it, wisdom bids us turn from it with a firm determination to avoid its repetition, and to lift thought to higher levels. Mary Baker Eddy says in "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany" (p. 195), "To do good to all because we love all, and to use in God's service the one talent that we all have, is our only means of adding to that talent and the best way to silence a deep discontent with our shortcomings."

Each day should be for us as a clean white page. No one can write upon it but ourselves. Shall it be marred by thoughtlessness, selfishness, discouragement, or regret? Or, shall it be illumined by the consciousness of well-doing, tender compassion, sweetness, and unselfed love? It lies within ourselves what shall be written on that page.

No one who is self-centered grows in happiness or usefulness. Self-love clouds his vision, limits his viewpoint, and leads to stagnation. Forgetfulness of human self in an increased understanding of one's spiritual selfhood, however, brings a broadening, deepening, and enriching of character, opening up for him new and greater ways for service and thereby blessing himself as well as others. Vain regrets are worse than useless. Today is ours, with its infinite opportunities, and we can best redeem the past by filling each moment with thoughts and acts which will bear good fruit. . . .

As one begins to recognize and claim his true birthright as a son and heir of God, there dawn upon his consciousness possibilities of which he had never dreamed, and in this dawning is found a new day which spreads its beams until it develops into the full glory of the noonday sun. . . .—The Christian Science Monitor.

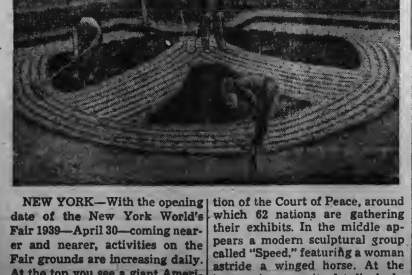
A cream to polish nickle and silver: Use a pound of whiting, 3 teaspoons of washing powder, 3 teaspoons of olive or castor oil and a cup of boiling water. Dissolve powder in the water, add the oil and slowly stir in the whiting. Mix well and put into glass jars and seal.



To can chicken, prepare as for frying. Place in a pan and put into a hot oven until the fowl begins to brown. Sprinkle with a teaspoon of salt per pound of meat.

La Nola-Moredock Stock Farms pictured herewith make up a show place of dairying and livestock raising in the Central Ohio river valley. Situated in a bend of the Ohio River near Patriot in Switzerland County, Indiana, they are the home of a herd of 100 purebred Jerseys and white-face Herefords. On three farms totaling about 500 acres, including those on which he and his wife were raised, George E. Moredock, eastern district sales manager for the International Harvester Company, is proving that this section is ideally suited for dairying and raising beef cattle.

The foundation stock of registered Herefords is of Domino and Fairfax breeding. The Jersey herd is Volunteer and Wonderful Standard, two famous blood strains. Among noted animals on the farms is Beau's Wonderful Snowdrop (shown here with Mr. Moredock), the daughter of Imported Wonderful Snowdrop, a grand champion of Jerseys for several years; and a sire which is a son of You'll Do Volunteer, a famous bull. Chester White hogs and a flock of 1,500 White Rock and White Leghorn chickens are also raised on the farms.

The farms are completely equipped with modern McCormick-Deering tractors and farm machinery, and dairy equipment for milking, cooling, and separating in the dairy. A welcome awaits visitors to the farms, which are on River Road, Highway 56, between Patriot and Rising Sun.

U. K. TO PLAY NOTRE DAME IN LOUISVILLE ARMORY, JAN. 14

Continuing their policy of meeting the nation's outstanding basketball teams, the University of Kentucky Wildcats are preparing for their engagement with the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame. This game will be played Saturday night, January 14, in the huge Jefferson County Armory at Louisville.

This game will mark the third meeting between Kentucky and Notre Dame since Adolph Rupp became coach of the Wildcats in 1930, both previous games going to the Irish after hard-fought battles. After this game the Kentuckians will begin playing Southeastern Conference foes, including Mississippi State, Alabama, Vanderbilt and Tennessee. The Wildcats believe they have a good chance of humbling the mighty Irish as they picked up a world of experience on their recent eastern trip on which they played Long Island University in New York's Madison Square Gardens, and St. Joseph's College at Philadelphia.

Two lengthy Wildcats are staging a merry battle for the honor of starting at center against Notre Dame. They are Homer Thompson six-foot four inch senior from Jeffersonville, Ind., and Marion Cluggish, six-foot eight inch junior from Corbin. In previous games, Coach Rupp has alternated these lads in the starting line-up.

POLLS SHOWS WOMAN'S SEVEN MAIN INTERESTS

Food, home, children, fashion, beauty, leisure and careers are the seven main interests of the woman of today.

Such is the opinion of the organizers of the Woman's Fair—the first ever held in Britain—now running in London. The organizers, however, are not sure they have calibrated the interests of women in the right order.

"We compiled the list from a census we took among women in various walks of life, and upon it we based the exhibition," and officials of the fair said.

"There are many women who put beauty and careers much higher in the list, and several who would not give the first place to food. Before the next fair is held, we shall endeavor to take a nation wide census to get these interests in their proper order."

Embellishing the Oyster

By BEULAH V. GILLASPIE
Director, Sealtest Laboratory Kitchen

Courtesy Sealtest Laboratory Kitchen

THE old idea of watching the months with the "r's" has disappeared—but since we are still in an "r" month, here's a tantalizing way of serving oysters that will grace any dinner, party or late supper, and it's quite simple to make, too!

OYSTER AND CELERY TIMBALES WITH SHERRY SAUCE

⅓ cup butter	¾ cup diced cooked celery
1 cup milk	1 teaspoon salt
2½ cups soft bread crumbs	Few grains pepper
2 eggs	1¼ cups milk
1 dozen large oysters	3 tablespoons sherry
3 tablespoons flour	Salt and pepper

Add the butter to the scalded milk and stir until melted. Pour over the crumbs and let stand for a few minutes. Add the slightly beaten egg yolks, drained and chopped oysters, celery, salt and pepper and mix well. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and pour into buttered custard cups. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F.) for about 40 minutes or until set. Unmold and serve with Sherry Sauce made as follows:

Melt the butter in a double boiler, add flour and mix well. Add milk gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add sherry and salt and pepper to taste. Reheat. Serves six.

Destruction of all vegetation except grass from low-water level to a point above the high-water level also aids in decreasing the mosquito menace.

REA COMMITTEE CLOSES ELECTRIFICATION SIGN-UP

361 Members Reported Signed-Up for Rural Electricifation Lines

Boone county REA sign-up committeemen reported 361 members had signed up at the close of the meeting held at Burlington court house last Thursday evening, January 12. January 19 was set as the closing date for the sign-up to be completed.

Mr. Chester Roland, manager of the Owen County Association, ran the proposed Boone county lines last Monday, January 9. He reported his inspection trip showed that additional work was needed and that many of the side lines could not be approved for allotment unless additional membership on these lines were secured.

A county meeting of sign-up committeemen was held at Burlington last Thursday evening to discuss this report and decide what immediate action should be followed. It was then decided to give prospective members an opportunity to sign-up until the 19th and all lines meeting the three members per mile minimum requirement be submitted immediately for allotment. Those falling below the three per mile would have to wait until they had met the minimum membership requirement before extension approval could be secured.

STATE MAILS 62,000 INCOME BLANKS

State income tax return forms were mailed today to 62,000 taxpayers by the Department of Revenue. The blanks are addressed to 8,000 corporations and 54,000 individuals known to be liable for filing returns.

Returns covering the calendar year of 1938 are due to be filed by April 15 with the Department of Revenue at Frankfort, but numerous returns are already being received. All single individuals having a gross income of $1,000 or more or a net income of as much as $1,000 for 1938 are required to file. Married individuals must file if their gross income exceeded $3,000 or if their net income was more than $2,500. Returns are also required of every corporation doing business within the State.

Failure to receive a return form does not exempt any taxpayer from the legal responsibility for filing.

The income tax yielded the State a total of $3,550,556.85 during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938. Of this amount $2,466,493.62 was paid by individual taxpayers and $1,084,063.23 by corporations. The Revenue Department estimates a slight increase in receipts for the current year.

We Pause To Honor Robert E. Lee

Recent years has brought the observance of the birthday of Robert E. Lee to Kentucky as a legal holiday . . . observed, however, in the deep south almost since the days of the Civil War.

GROUP HEARS REQUIREMENTS UNDER WHICH STATE WILL CONSIDER PRESENT RIGHT-OF-WAY OF U. S. 25 IN BOONE, KENTON AND GRANT

May Make Highway Survey to Find Best North-South Route

Conditions under which the State Highway Department would consider the Dixie Highway through Boone, Kenton and Grant counties as the right-of-way for a four-lane highway, were given in a report to approximately 125 assembled highway enthusiasts Tuesday night at a meeting at Florence. The report was made by Simon M. Billiter, Covington, John L. Vest, Walton and R. L. Vincent, Williamstown, who were instructed at a recent meeting in Williamstown to interview State Highway Engineer T. H. Cutler at Frankfort.

Three Requirements Outlined

Mr. Cutler set forth that three principal requirements must be met by the communities bordering on the present route if they hope to ever compete for, or get, a super-highway. The conditions were: 40 foot clearance from curb to curb through all towns and villages; plans to eliminate grade crossings; and that there shall be no parking on any part of the highway within the corporate limits of any town. Other minor suggestion were offered by Mr. Cutler, such as the elimination of speed traps and cooperation of local citizens in securing the right-of-way.

Representatives from Many Points

The meeting was called to protest relocation of U. S. 25, and was presided over by Emil Rivard. It was attended by representatives from Covington, Lookout Heights, South Fort Mitchell, Erlanger, Elsmere, Florence, Devon, Richwood, Walton, Bracht, Crittenden, Sherman, Dry Ridge, and Williamstown.

To Organize Next Tuesday

A meeting will be held next Tuesday night, January 24 at the old Florence fairgrounds at 7 p.m. c.s.t. for further organization and planning. Also the group will elect permanent officers at this meeting, and will effect plans to bring the Dixie up to the necessary requirements. Every citizen whose property is adjacent to or in towns on the Dixie should plan to attend and take an active part. It is necessary to have cooperation along this route to win the fight.

May Make Survey on Dixie

The committee that contacted Mr. Cutler reported that he showed them every courtesy and interest in the problem of those along the present route.

It was stated by Mr. Billiter that the highway engineer promised to send a crew of engineers and observers to the points in question on the Dixie to determine if the present route could be made into a modern super-highway.

The reception given the local delegates by Mr. Cutler brought repeated references Tuesday night that he was a "fine engineer and a gentleman," though no definite promise regarding the Dixie was given by him.

Towns May Be "Skirted"

One suggestion offered was that the small towns along the present roadway be "skirted," following a proposal of Mr. Vest at a previous meeting at Williamstown when he said "let's at least follow the Dixie route 98 per cent of the way."

Highlights of the Meeting

Highlights of the session were:

One: There will be a reorganization of the old U. S. 25 Highway Association of Northern Kentucky to fight any proposed change that would leave the present route. A meeting will be held Tuesday night at Florence.

Two: Committees were appointed to arouse interest along the present route in the effort that must be made to keep the main highway and have it improved.

Three: There is a "fighting chance" to keep the present route and Mr. Cutler was sympathetic to the problems a change would bring about.

Four: But a survey has been tentatively made over another route, Covington to Sandfordtown and through a point between Walton and Independence to connect with

For a New Dixie

Recent efforts for a new Dixie Highway have brought the Old Dixie Highway Association back to life after several years of inactivity. At present, their plans are under consideration, but include in main that any new road should include as much of the present roadbed as is practical.

U. S. 25 has been the leading North and South highways in Kentucky for many years, and should be the first route to be given that consideration by the State Highway Department.

Sanitary Ordinance to Be Enforced

Members of he Board of Trustees of the Town of Walton were firm in their belief that the sanitary ordinance regarding disease-spreading outside toilets should be enforced. Aid of the State Board of Health will be secured, if necessary, to protect the health of the citizens of Walton.

The ordinance, printed in part, appears in an official notice on another page of this issue. We suggest you read it, and adjust your property accordingly.

March of Dimes

An active campaign to combat the dreaded disease, infantile paralysis, will receive the benefits of funds derived from the March of Dimes now in progress.

President Roosvelt loaned his birthday in the campaign to raise money to carry on the infantile fight at Warm Springs, Ga. A great work is being done at that institution, and many children are being restored to useful lives.

A nation-wide campaign, non-political in scope, is aiding in securing these funds from persons not able to attend one of the President's Birthday Balls. Your dime will join the "March of Dimes" in this worthy cause.

Kentucky's Stake In Railroad Prosperity

The Scouts are celebrating again—the 29th this time—with a message that "Scouting Carries On American Ideals", ideals of Service and cooperation, tolerance and religious obligation, and homage to the responsibilities and privileges of participating citizenship. It is a welcome portent for the future of American democracy that more than a million and a quarter men and boys are now active members of a movement which, although founded to capitalize on the love all boys have for adventure in the out-of-doors does not fail to provide practical ways for helping them fulfull the obligations felt by every genuine American.

Scouting has succeeded in becoming a part of the American boy's world because it is a program of action plus idealism. So it has a two-fold appeal, demonstrated by its growth in popularity each year, in many sections limited only by the lack of leaders or adequate funds for extension. Measured in terms of boys who want to be Scouts there is still much room for growth. Measured in terms of results produced the Boy Scouts of America has already paid any debt due the American people for the operating charter granted it by Congress many years ago.

In our own community now there are many men, part of the 8,400,000 who have been included in the Scout family since 1910, who believe in the principle that "Once a Scout, always a Scout" and who are doing their best to extend and interpret in practice the concept of civic and moral responsibility that came to them in their Scout Troops. For this reason, if for no other, America has every right to be proud of its Boy Scouts.

That Kentucky's railroads "stand on the front rank among the constructive economic forces of the Blue Grass State" is forcibly pointed out in an enlightening article of interest to every Kentuckian published to a recent issue of "Manufacturers Record," monthly magazine of the industrial South.

"Railway purchases," the article begins, "payrolls and taxes exert a powerful influence upon the economic life of Kentucky. Few states have a greater stake in railway prosperity. Few states are more directly affected by the rise and fall of roalway earnings. earnings.

"Kentucky ranks fifteenth among the states in population, twenty-second in value of manufactured products, and twentieth in cash farm income, but it ranks twelfth in railway purchases and fourteenth in railway employment.

"Nineteen thirty-seven was far from a satisfactory year in the railroad business. Traffic was light and earnings were low. Yet, for every day of 1937 the railroads spent $200,000 in Kentucky . . . "Total railway expenditures in Kentucky for all purposes last year exceeded $72,000,000."

The article then goes on to discuss in more detail the various railroad contributions to Kentucky's economic welfare. It point out, for instance, that in 1937 no less than 83 different railroads made important purchases totaling $22,000,000 in 377 cities and towns located in 102 of this state's 120 counties. The most important single item was coal, with forest products second; but the railroad shopping list also included such varied commodities as sand and gravel, gasoline, structural steel, fire brick, paint, asphalt, printing and liquor for sale in dining cars.

Railroad property taxes which helped to support state, county and city governments, totaled $5,109,000, or $1,338 for every mile of railroad in Kentucky. Excluding social security taxes, $686,000 of this amount was spent on public highways; $1,477,000 on general expenses of state and local government; and $1,714,000 on operation of public schools—enough to cover the annual cost of educating approximately 39,000 Kentucky school children.

Likewise, Kentucky railroads in 1937 paid $45,-800,000 in wages to nearly 31,000 employes scattered throughout the state, thousands of them home owners and taxpayers.

"Most important of all," the Manufacturers Record concludes, "is the role of the railroads as providers of transportation service. Providing uninterrupted passenger, freight, perishable, express and mail transportation, serving farms, mines, quarries, mills, factories and thundreds of communities, day in and day out, month after month, year after year, each railroad is performing a service of fundamental importance to its territory."

By WILL S. NORRIS

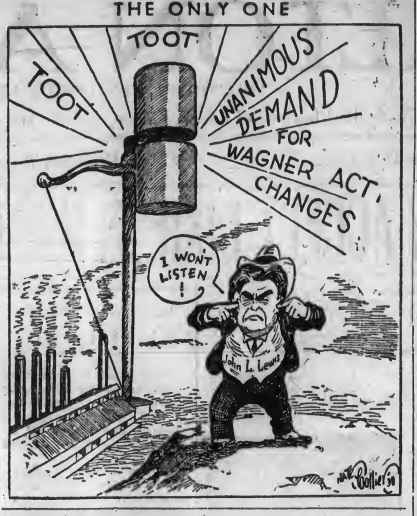
Grandmother was a good soul. Her family said, "Grandma speaks so well of everyone we believe she would have a good word for the devil." Her answer was that the devil was a very industrious person, being persistent in persuading people to follow him. I will illustrate this by telling a story and experience of a good friend of mine from 12 years old up to the mature age.

This is his story: "When I was about 12 years old one day the devil took me by the hand and led me up a beautiful avenue into a beautiful and spacious palace. As I walked into the great building and he led me from apartment to apartment, he showed me the beauties and splendor of the place.

"Everything body, mind or thought could conceive was there. He pointed to a door and told me of the good times I could have if I would but take possession. He showed me the sofa of contentment and took me and set me down on the table of pleasure. Here you can join others in the pleasures, that they call a good time.

"He led me on showing me other apartments and beautiful pictures hanging on the wall. They enraptured my soul. When he had shown me all those things, he said to me, if you will be my servant all these are yours. I walked through the beautiful palace with all its beautiful furniture, its comforts that I thought would give me happiness. I told him I would accept if all these were mine. What did I care for mother, God and hope."

"I took possession and thought I had all I could wish for. But one day I walked out of the palace and, when I returned, my chair ofease was taken away. I walked out another day, coming back my sofa of contentment was removed and still another day after walking out and then returning my table of pleasure and temporary friends were gone."



"I decided this is no more a palace. I will leave it, understanding now the devil's promises are all a hoax, although it took me many long years of sin to wake up to the fact that I was deceived and of all men I was the most miserable.

"I had a boy friend who had grown up with me to manhood. When I woke up to the devil's deception. I pleaded with him to turn his back on the devil and go with me but he walked away and said he had waited too long. I was present when he made his dying confession to his wife saying "The palace of sin which was so full of luxury is gone. Now it is all dark. The walls are coming together."

"At one o'clock that night the palace crashed together upon him. His last words to his wife were "I am doomed. The way of the trangressor is hard, the wages of sin is death."

"This caused me to review my past life. With the first drink of whiskey I took I felt I had almost got to be a man. I had followed the devil's crowd until I almost despised myself. I was a blashhemer in the sight of God and had followed sin until I found as much as I loved their pleasures the results are like "poppies spread."

You will see the pleasure of everything is dead or "Like the snowfall in the river, a moment white, then melts forever."

Officers of the Army General staff and Naval General Board, who map out the strategic policies of our national defense, were not a little surprised when they were credited recently with urging 10,000 airplanes to be built' immediately under the national defense-spending program.

Such a program, because of the factor of quick obsolescence in airplanes, would quickly wreck itself according to the best experts. Quiet queries among the naval and military men themselves disclosed that none of them had advocated such a program. A much lower figure for such a building program had been set by them as the number of planes under a practical program.

Mixing some two-plus-two-equals-four speculation with their own inquires the experts opine that the 10,000 figure was sent up by the Braintrusters as a trial balloon to see if they could get away with a heavy spending program to the tune of drum-beating for "defend the nation at all cost."

The military and naval experts further argue that it is well that the United States do some well considered thinking on defense inasmuch as it would be well to impress any potential enemies America might have with real defenses rather than by theatrical spending.

Incidentally, the current budget estimates now before Congress call for spending by the Federal Government during the next fiscal year at the rate of $17,113 a minute, or $24,-643,835 a day. As one newspaperman around the National Press Club remarked: "That means my income tax will run the Government just one-one billionth part of a second."

Among life's little problems, list this one:

One of the Cabinet officers has a fancy for green ink. He has used it ever since he came to Washington. He finds now, however, that his signature is fading from documents, and the U. S. Bureau of Standards informs him nothing can be done about it. The dye used in green ink just won't last, the Bureau has reported to him in a lengthy report.

The Cabinet member, therefore, has to use permanet black ink now for his signature to official government documents.

It is better than an even bet around Washington that Congress will soon be asked to increase the limitation on the national debt. Congress passed a law last year placing the "absolute" ceiling on the national debt at 45 billion dollars. Under the law, therefore, the Treasury canot lawfully accumulate a debt beyond that figure. At the present time the debt is just short of 40 billion dollars, an all-time high.

The new budget, however, projects the debt to 44 1-2 billion, which will be too close to the ceiling for the Treasury's comfort. A 50 billion dollar limitation, or even more, probably will be asked of Congress.

Coffee make news at home and abroad last week: In Washington it was announced that thereafter coffee will be only 5 cents per cup in the House restaurant (where U. S. Representatives dot heir mid-day dingn). In one of the foreign Capitals, t awis decreed by the dictator that coffee tras added to the list of food rationed to the populace. Merchants are allowing about 1-8 pound per week per person.

Many people, who probably have forgotten that not so many years ago they attached only a 2-cent stamp to letters, probably have forgotten too, that the 3-cent postage is supposed to expire next June 30. The 3-cent postage was established as an "emergency" tax measure.

Don't stock up on 2-centers, however, for the budget submitted to Congress calls for a continuance of the 3-cent rate.

SIMPLE TREATMENT SAVES DRAPERIES

Have you wondered what made your window curtains and other draperies wear out so fast? It's not entirely the action of sun-light, though that is hard on window curtains. Perhaps most of us have never considered the possibility the draperies have been affected by absorption of gases from the air in the house. Sulphur in gases from coal-burning stoves and furnaces, and in illuminating gas, is destructive to all kinds of fabrics. Even when the familiar sulphur or coal-gas smelt is not present, there may be some sulpher fumes which combine with moisture to make strong acids. These are often more destructive that the normal wear on curtains, rugs, and draperies.

There is a simple way to protect your household textiles from the gases and at the same time make them more fire-resisting. The treatment does not affect the appearance of most fabrics. Simply dip the fabrics in a solution made of 7 ounces of borax and 3 ounces of boric acid dissolved in 2 quarts of water. In treating water-resistant fabrics enough soap is added to the solution to form a suds. Laundered articles have usually lost their sizing, and soap is not needed.

There are other good fire-resisting and gasproofing formulas, but everyone is familiar with borax and boric acid and every druggist sells them for a small sum, so that it is not difficult to make the solution at home. This borate treatment does not furnish protection against sunlight, but treated curtains suffer no more than untreated ones. Articles laundered or exposed to the weather must have the fire-resisting dip after each laundering or wetting.

KENTUCKY 4-H CLUB NEWS

THE BABY BEEF project has always brought more money to Graves county boys and girls than any other one piece of work. Therefore they are specializing this year in learning to handle fine cattle for profit, having 59 calves on feed.

AN OUTSTANDING RECORD for completions of project work last year has encouraged Johnson county club members. Out of 1,199 projects started, 1,062 were completed. In the opinion of the county president, this surpasses having 2,000 projects started with 1,500 completions.

DESIRE FOR LARGER CASH income has caused several veteran club members in Hickman county to plan more elaborate livestock projects in 1939. They plan to have fat cattle for the Louisville show, and also beef cattle for regular sale.

RUCKERVILLE CLUB set 732 trees on home, school and church grounds and won the tree-setting contest among 20 clubs in Clark county. There were 26 boys and girls in the club. The prize was a basketball.

PUTTING INTO PRACTICE the cooking methods they learned in past years, Lincoln county club members had gala parties during the holiday season. A widely varied menu composed of foods that were characteristic of several nations was followed in every case.

CLOTHING PROJECTS ranked first in appeal in Floyd county last year, with gardening and poultry work coming in next for attention. "From these three, one can be well-dressed, well-fed and have a small cash income," one club member remarked.

Girls used to make up with their sweethearts; now they make up to get them.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

Gordon Wilson, Ph.D.

DOWN THE MISSISSIPPI

A popular song of recent years invites the listener to come with the singer down the Missippi; that is what I want you to do today, while we view a long-past institution, the flatboat. In its days the flatboat was an institution that seemed as permanent as the later "floating places," also no largely a memory.

When the Mississippi was the great avenue of travel and trade, the flatboat procession down to New Orleans was an annual event like the migration of the ducks and geese i spring, and fall. People at the upper reaches of the river loaded their boats with all sorts of things to sell and set out, with the current of the river as their chief motive force. These boats bore name; arks, flatboats, Kentucky boats. Alexander Wilson, the great ornithologist, who visited Kentucky in 1810, having paddled a skiff down from Pittsburgh to Louisville, this describes the arks:

"In the course of the day I passed a number of arks, or, as they are usually called, Kentucky boats, loaded with what it must be acknowledged are the most valuable commodities of a country; viz., men women, and children, horses and ploughs, flour, millstones, & etc. Several of these floating caravans were loaded with store goods for the supply of the settlements thru which they passed, having a counter erected, shawls, muslins, etc., displayed, and everything ready for transacting business. On approaching a settlement they blow a horn or tin trumpet, which announces to the inhabitants their arrival . . . The arks are built in the form of a parallelogram, being from twelve to fourteen feet wide and from forty to seventy feet long, covered above, rowed only occassionally by two oars before, and steered by a long and powerful one fixed above. The arks cost about one thundred and fifty cents per foot, according to their length; and when they reach heir places of destination, seldom bring more than one-sixth their original cost."

The flatboatman became a sort of profressional. All the daring youths wanted to go down the glamorous New Orleans; Lincoln, as you know, made a trip or two. Even whole families were known to go though this was hardly the rule. After the long journey down the Mississippi came the long trek homeward, up the historic Natchez Trace, infested often with highwaymen, who fed fat on the poor flatboatmen. As for that, the river pirates did a thriving business in this same period, some of them, as Otto Rothert, secretary of the Filson Club of Louisville, has shown, becoming rich with the spoils of the flatboats.

The whole experience was an adventure, calculated to rouse the imagination of the young blooda. To outwit the wiles of the river itself, "Ol' Man River," was not an easy thing, with no government lights, no protection against drifts and sandbars. The appeal of this early trade or profession has not wholly died: since this column began, I have seen large rafts in a Kentucky stream, one of them manned by a patriarch who has made dozens of trips of a hundred miles or more. When I last saw him, he was floating around a bend in a heavy snowstorm, with the temperature dropping toward one of the coldest nights of the winter. I saw him and all his predessors in the brief moment I ran along the bank and questioned him.

BELL COUNTY LAUNCHES "GRASS ROOTS" PROGRAM

"A grass roots" program opened the New Year in Bell county, Ky. Farmers from 16 communities planned to eliminate idle land, reforest thousands of acres, and cover hills and valleys with grass. A county honor roll will list the names of farmers who cooperate 100 per cent.

Some of theme thods to be applied are reported by County Agent R. V. Trosper as follows:

Eighteen hundred farmers and two dozen corporations will launch a tree-setting program next spring, and planting will continue until 150,000 acres are reforested.

Woodland owners will be encouraged to list their lands with the State Forestry Division for fire protection. A total of 65,403 acres now are under this protection.

All land devoted to harvested depleting crops will be sowed to cover crops next fall.

All farm boys and girls will be invited to join 4-H clubs.

Chickens and Independence

A thousand chickens and independence will be the subject of Grant Maddox, Florence, Ky., at the poultry raisers' meeting. Graduating from the College of Agriculture, Maddox could have been a county agent or had a government job, but he preferred his poultry farm. He will tell why in his talk at the Farm and Home Convention.

More than 1,300,000 children are educated annually with the school taxes paid by the American Railroads.

Yet only about one-third of the railroads' total taxes go for school purposes. The rest—about $200,000,000 a year—goes toward the support of federal, state and local government; the courts, police and fire protection, hospitals, good roads, and a long list of other public institutions and services.

CROOK, DISGUISED, TOURS WORLD AS POLICE HUNT HIM

Spiro, $3,000,000 Swindler, Gets Eight Years Penal Service in England.

LONDON.—After having, by a series of disguises, eluded for 13 months the police of eight countries and toured the world a hunted man, Stanley Grove Spiro has been sentenced in the Old Bailey, London, to eight years' penal servitude, for stock swindling involving $3,000,000.

A man called Graham—his real name is Strakosch—is, it was stated in court, being hunted in the United States after absconding from extradition proceedings. Except for this fugitive, all Spiro's accomplices have been rounded up.

"Brains of a band of commercial brigands," the Recorder called Spiro, adding that he was the head of a society that made war on the community by elaborately planned activities.

Never Robbed Poor.

The convicted man made no comment. His boast has been that he had never robbed widows or the poor, and to a reporter of the London Daily Express he had said:

"I have walked on the shady side of the street of finanee too long to complain about what is coming to me. I have had the sweets for a long, long time. I can take the bitter now."

Stanley Spiro, who was born in South Africa 42 years ago, married the daughter of a canon of the Church of England. She died of cancer in Switzerland a few months ago. She knew he was the head of several companies, but nothing whatever of his crooked transactions.

His fraud was simple. He bought an old-established Scottish brokers' business and opened a London office. This gave him 500 clients—wealthy people—who had trusted the firm for half a century. Spiro used the good Scottish name of Elphinstone. Later, he was "Mr. Royston," sometimes "Mr. Richards," occasionally "Mr. Mortimer."

With his clients he always first did legitimate business. Then he induced them to part with valuable securities and receive in return shares that were worthless.

Puzzled by Success.

Spiro founded a worthless concern called Scottish Gas Utilities corporation and a colliery company. Their shares were exchanged for real securities. Yet Spiro was puzzled by his own success as a seller of shares to shrewd and hard-headed business men.

His own story of how, while the police of all countries were on the lookout for him, he escaped detection, follows:

"I eluded the police with a six-inch beard and a perfect-fitting wig. And I was a hunchback at times." (Here he slouched up his shoulders.) "And my stomach came out to here." (Here he held his hands a foot from his waistcoat.)

"I got my hunchback and my stomach in Berlin. I had them made for me. They were of papier-mache. There were straps on the hunchback so that I could fasten it round my shoulders, and there were straps for the stomach, too.

"No one would ever have known me when I was wearing them. I walked into England—right under the noses of two specials who were watching me. Right under their noses, boy!—that gave me a thrill.

"I was arrested three times while I was away. Once in Mexico, once in Germany and again in Austria. I had no passport or papers. Each time I talked myself out of it. I never crossed a frontier by train. I always walked across—slipped in unnoticed."

Finds He Slept for Two Nights With Dead Man

TOLEDO, OHIO.—Police here investigated the story of a 53-year-old man who said that he had slept in bed with a friend for two nights without knowing that the man was dead.

The first night he noticed nothing unusual, he related, and when he came home and went to bed the second night, he still thought nothing was amiss although his friend had not moved.

At the end of the second day, he tried to awaken the "sleeping" man. He failed, and called police to whom he told his story.

Deputy Coroner A. H. Steinberg said the man had died of natural causes and probably had been dead 48 hours.

Court Punishes Husband As He Punished His Wife

BERKELEY, CALIF. — Police Judge Oliver Youngs believes in a certain application of the "eye for an eye and tooth for a tooth" law. When Mrs. Gustav Berndt complained that her husband knocked her down and poured one pitcher of ice water down the back of her dress and another down the front, Judge Youngs ordered Bailiff Charles Matlin to take the husband to the basement of the court and apply the same treatment to him.

"Now how do you expect me to get home in these wet clothes?" demanded the soused prisoner upon his return.

"The same way your wife did," replied the judge, "and start right away."

Linoleum and Carpet Company Has New Store

The above is an interior view of the Independent Linoleum and Carpet Company's new store at 527 Madison avenue, Covington. Wm. Miller is the proprietor. Starting in the floor-covering business 26 years ago in a store on Pike Street, Mr. Miller 13 years later opened a store on Madison avenue. The new store is the result of expanding business, Mr. Miller stated. Besides a complete showing of floor coverings, the company will carry furniture, stoves and bedding such as mattresses and bed springs.

Mr. Miller has found that by offering the advice and suggestions to his customers about laying and caring for linoleum, many o fthem were able to do expert jobs in laying the rugs. He offers homeowners, and prospective home owners his assistance and experience learned over twenty-six years of handling all types of floor coverings. Of course, there is no cost for his advice.

The company carries one of the largest and most diversified lines of linoleumn found in the Cincinnati area, offers immediate delivery on items in the store.

FEED TURKEYS WELL FOR LAYING SEASON

Good feeding of turkeys, in preparation for the laying season, is recommended by J. E. Humphrey of the Kentucky College of Agriculture poultry department. Turkeys lose weight during the laying period, and should be conditioned for laying by good feeding. Also, since many breeders select young hens and young toms from the spring flock to hold over as breeders, liberal feeding is required to bring them to full growth by the time the laying season begins.

LOWER RATES NOW IN EFFECT ON L. & N.

Cent-and-a-half a mile coach fares are back on the lines of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and those of the majority of the other railroads operating in the southern territory, and, according to the January 1939 issue of the L. & N Employes' Magazine, it is belived they are back to stay.

This good news for travelers becomes effective January 15 and will mean a substantial saving for those who used he railroads' lines. The saving will, of course, be in direct proportion to the distance traveled. Pullman fares will remain the same, i. e., 2½ cents a mile for round trip tickets with six months' return limit, 3 cents a mile for one-way travel.

Prior to the reduction, coach fares had been 2 cents a mile having been raised to this figure on Nov. 15, 1937, after a previous experimental period with the one and a half cent fares, extending from January 1934 to November 15, 1937.

The trend of passenger revenue on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad since September 1937 has been downward an it is hoped that the inauguration of the lower coach fare will be just the thing to make this revenue do an about face, thu attracting a constantly increasing number of travelers.

SLEEPING SICKNESS HORSE DISEASE IS FOUND IN KENTUCKY

Sleeping sickness, which has been killing horses in many states, was responsible for the loss of one horse in Central Kentucky, according to laboratory tests made at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington. This is said to be the first authentic case of the horse disease in Kentucky, although cases have been reported from Western Kentucky, but there were no laboratory tests to confirm the clinical diagnosis.

The sleeping sickness disease has been reported in 30 states, including several states bordering on Kentucky. About 100,000 horses are said to have been afflicted last year, and nine states were added to the list of states reporting losses.

I has been established that mosquitoes are one of the carriers of sleeping sickness, which may account for the fact that it is less prevalent in winter. It usually begins to appear in late May or June.

A vaccine has been developed which leasts at least six months, and probably longer. Two injections are given a week apart. Vaccination should be done in early spring, before mosquitoes spread the disease.

A REAL GOLD BRICK IS POLICE PUZZLE

Loot Is Found Melted Into Precious Ingot.

FLORENCE.—An ingot of pure gold has baffled Italian police and hampered the liquidation of two cases of robbery perpetrated here last summer.

Several months ago a band of thieves broke into Villa Marmagliano, mansion of Mrs. Beulah Branch, widow of a Chicago banker, for many years a resident of Florence. They carried off money, silverware and jewels with a total value of more than $100,000.

A short time later another theft, the traces of which had strange resemblance to the one at Villa Marmagliano, occurred in the palace of Goffredo Visconti, an eccentric 90-year-old multimillionaire of Florence.

Police put their ablest detectives on the case and after four months arrested a prominent jeweler, Sestilio Giannini, of Florence on charges of receiving stolen goods.

Following Giannini's confession police captured Oteilo Balzani, leader of a band of half a dozen thieves, including his 26-year-old mistress, Valeria Uccifti. Police have rounded up the entire band, which now is awaiting trial in the Murate jail of Florence.

Cini confessed that part of the gold bracelets and earrings stolen from Villa Marmagliano had been melted together with rings and other jewels stolen from Visconti's home.

Mrs. Branch's jewels were recovered in part in Giannini's shop, but a diamond ring worth $10,000 and a pearl necklace of greater value have not been found.

Police have not reached any decision regarding the gold ingot, which perhaps will be equally divided between the American widow and the aged Visconti.

Maine Only State Missed In His Round of Prisons

CROWN POINT, IND.—Jefferson Sharun, a kindly-faced old man with silver hair, smiled up at the judge.

"Well, your honor, I've now been sentenced to prison in every state in the Union except Maine."

"How did you evade Maine?" asked the judge.

"Maine was too small," Sharun replied, adding, "but you can take it from me that crime does not pay."

Sharun and his two accomplices had been sentenced to 2 to 14 years in prison for mulcting $6.000 from Ben I. Schultz, a Gary, Ind., junk dealer. Schultz told the court that Sharun told him he had a scheme to "break" all small race-horse handbooks.

Sharun left a farm in Daviess county, Ind., and eventually became a clever "con" man.

In a small cell, Sharun leaned back and talked smoothly.

"I never took an honest man. I always took a sucker and never felt sorry for them because they were trying to get something for nothing too."

Stanford U. Parties Are Easy Prey for Bandits

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, CALIF.—The practice of campus policemen flashlighting petting parties is driving romance off the campus of Stanford university and out into the neighborhood hills where couples become the victims of petting party bandits, according to protests now being made by scores of coeds.

An unusual number of these holdups has taken place recently, and as the bandits rob the girls as well as the men, it is the coed element that has taken up the task of remedying the situation.

Stanford this year has only 500 coeds against 3,000 men students with the results that the girls are dated up almost every evening.

KEEN JOHNSON SPEAKS ON UNEMPLOYMENT

Lt. Gov. Keen Johnson, in a recenty address before members of the personnel of the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission predicted that liberalization of the unemployment insurance program would become an actuality in the near future.

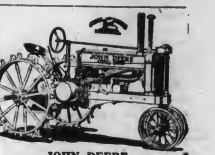
"It is my earnest hope," he declared, that through experience and otherwise, it would be possible to so efficiently administer the provision of this law as to provide for longer period of benefit payments and to offer its protection to a greater number of workers through broadening the eligibility requirements."

The lieutenant governor reviewed events leading up to enactment of the 1936 measure by a special session of the General Assembly in December of that year.

Through passage of this law prior to January 1, 1937, approximately $2,500,00 was saved for the jobless of the state," he declared. It was necessary to procede cautiously and carefully in drafting the orginal bill because of the lack of any background experience, but now that such a background has been obtained, we are more in a postion to understand just how far we can go in carrying out the purpose of the law which is to provide compensation for the jobless and to find them, if possible, new employment. We are not only in a position to estimate just what we can do along this line, but also have necessary experience to carry out a broader progam.

The Leiutenenant-Governor, upon the occasion of his first visit to the new offices of the Commission, cited the fact that the personnel has been selected upon the basis of merit examinations. This, he said, was an added reason for efficient administration of the program.

V. E. Barnes, Executive Director of the Commission, issued a statement in which it was declared that Kentucky's unemployment insurance fund was in better conditions that that of any other state in the country.



Barnes declared, however, that liberalization of the unemployment insurance program was contingent upon retaining in the law the employee contribution rate.

"It is not inconceivable," the statement read "that benefit payments over a period of twenty-four weeks or even a six-months period may be possible under present conditions. If this should become an actuality, it would mean that Kentucky would have gone further in the matter of providing benefit payments than any other state."

NETS AND SEINES MUST HAVE TWO-INCH MESH

Beginning January 1, 1939 all hoop nets without wings and seines, used for the taking of fish, must have a mesh of not less than two inches, Major Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, stated today.

Heretofore the law stated that the mesh could be as small as an inch and one- half, but with the passage of the new Game and Fish Laws by the last Legislature, the mesh was increased one-half inch.

In regard to netting the law states: "It shall be lawful for any person to take by the use of seines and hoop nets without wings, the mesh thereof to be not less than two inches square, any fish from the streams forming the boundary of any part of the boundary between this State and any other State or States, and from the navigable streams of this State. Provided further that no person shall take or attempt to take any fish by seines or nets or place any seines or nets in any of these streams within two hundred yard of the mouth of any stream entering into such waters nor within two hundred yards of the mouth of any navigable streams within the State nor within two hundred yards of any lock or dam located on such stream or streams nor above the last lock or dam in any navigable stream. It shall also be unlawful for anyone to operate or have in possession any seines or nets pursuant to the provisions of this Act unless such person or persons shall have procured a license so to do and a metal tag for the use or possession of each net or seine and complied with the provisions herein after set out."

The law also states that all large or small mouth black bass and crappie caught in seines or nets shall be immediately returned without injury to the water from which taken. It is also unlawful to use nets during the month of May.

MOUD ADAMS MAKES RE-APPEARANCE AT TAFT

Maude Adams, for many years one of the most beloved personalities of the theatre, will emerge from retirement once more to face an audience from the stage of the Taft Theater, Cincinnati, on Friday evening, February 3rd. Miss Adams will appear in a lecture-recital, "The Theater as I knew It", under the management of Jason Howard.

When Miss Adams made her first appearance in her present tour several weeks ago at New York's Town Hall, the place was packed long before the hour scheduled for her performance, and hundreds had to be turned away. It was necessary to schedule another appearance of Miss Adams the following week, to give those who had been disappointed a chance to hear her.

Miss Adams, who is forever famous as the creator of the role of "Peter Pan," appeared on the stage when still a child. She joined E. H. Sothern's Company in New York at 16; afterwards was a member of Charles Froman's Stock Company, and later supported John Drew for five years.

As a featured star, she made famous the leading roles in "The Little Minister,", "Romeo and Juliet", "What Every Woman Knows," Joan of Arch", "Cantickleer" and a number of others. She retired from the stage in 1918, but returned in 1931 to appear in a revival of "The Merchant of Venice" with Otis Skinner, and later in "As You Like It."

Following her appearance in Town Hall, the critic for the New York World Telegram stated in an enthusiastic review: "She can play Peter Pan right now for this reporter." He described her as "small, birdlike, with a quick, sweet smile and a gentle, lovely voice."

Reservations may be sent to Jason Howard, 639 Enquier Building, Cincinnati. Prices range from 75 cents to $1.50, plus tax.

WOMEN MUST BUY LICENSES

Under the New Game and Fish Laws, created by the last Legislature, all women 16 years of age or older must procure fishing licenses, dating from January 1, 1939 on. Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, stated today.

Heretofore women were permitted to fish without a license, but with the passage of the new Game and Fish Code at the last session of the Kentucky Legislature, a provision was inserted compelling all women to purchase a fishing license.

VERONA BOY, 8, KILLED BY AUTO TUESDAY

Second Grade Pupil Dies Of Crushed Chest After Running In Front of Car

The first death in Boone county from injuries received from being hit by an automobile was recorded Tuesday noon when James W. Hiles eight-years-old, stepped in front of a car driven by Leonard Caldwell, farmer, of near Verona. The youngster died from a crushed chest and head injuries about 12:30. He was on his way home to lunch from the Verona Graded School, where he was a pupil in the second grade.

The driver of the machine attempted to stop the car, but the suddenness of the child running in front of him and the ice-covered road made it impossible to avoid the accident. Young Hile was removed to a nearby store and Dr. J. F. McCormick called to treat him. He lost consciousness soon afterward and lived about thirty minutes. The body was later removed to the J. L. Hamilton funeral home for preparation.

The son of Earl Hiles, Verona businessman, and Mrs. Hiles, the boy was born near Georgetown, and attended school at the Great Crossing school last year. His family moved to Verona a few months ago, and he entered school there. He would have been nine years old in May.

Funeral services will be held at the Verona Baptist Church at 10 a. m. this morning with Robert K. Porter, member of the School Board, conducting the services. Burial will be in the Hopson cemetery at Hebron, Ky.

He leaves his parents, and a brother, Eugene, two sisters, Mildred and Alice, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hiles, Georgetown and Mrs. Lunt Ditter, Hebron.

J. H. Hamilton, Verona funeral director, has charge of the arrangements.

Nicholas McCormick was killed August 21 last year when struck by a car in this same town, and several accidents, not fatal, have occured.

Officers Chosen for Group Tuesday

Local Attorney Chosen to Head U. S. 25 Club of Northern Kentucky; All Towns Represented on Official Board as Campaign to Retain North-South Highway Is Opened

Gathering at Florence, Tuesday evening when only the hardy would venture out 125 interested business and professional men discussed ways and means to retain the present highway on U. S. 25 from Covington to Williamstown. Representatives from all towns along the route was reported. A permanent organization was formed, that will direct this campaign, and to aid in securing deeds to necessary rights-of-way along the route.

Tleciously the club itself had, formed from remnants of the former U. S. Dixie Highway No. 25 Association of Northern Kentucky and o.h.r newly interest d persons.

Adopting a resolution pointing out that any change would deprive property-owners from rightful revenue, and that any new routing throug Covington would only serve to confuse tourists, the group sent a copy to Hon. T. H. Culter, State Highway Engineer at Frankf..rt.

Traffic congestion in the downtown Covington district would result from a rerouting of the Dixie Highway via Madison pike, if the falked of route through Sanfordstown on the LLL highway is completed.

It was pointed out that use of the state bridge, when it becomes free, would lead all in and out bound traffic in the same direction thru the heart of the city.

At present motorists on the Dixie miss the downtown district traveling on Main to Pike street and from Pike onto the highway.

The club urged retention of the present route.

The Resolution was as follows:

Chief

CITIZENS OF BENTON, BOONE AND GRANT COUNTIES ASSEMBLED IN MASS MEETING AT FLORENCE, KENTUCKY:

That we respectfully represent to the Honorable T. H. Culter, Chief State Engineer of Kentucky, that in the proposed and contemplated reconstruction of U. S. (L.) Approximately one-third the distance from Covington to Williamstown is already constructed as a four-lane highway.

INDEPENDENCE FIRE DEPT. EXTINGUISHES $300 BLAZE

Independence volunteer firemen, under Chief Ira Lower, extinguished a blaze Saturday afternoon at the home of Harry G. Klosterman, Covington postmaster, on Taylor Mill road, near Latonia Lakes, Kenton county.

Loss was estimated at $300 on the fire, which was confined to the basement of the home. Firemen blamed a short circuit in the wiring. Mrs. Klosterman, who had been visiting a neighbor, returned to discover the fire. Neighbors formed a bucket brigade and kept the flames from spreading, it was said.

TRAFFIC DELAYED BY SNOW AND SLEET

Rain and warmer weather faced northern Kentuckians Thursday after several days of sleet, snow and ice.

Traffic slipped on skated over the streets of northern Kentucky causing, minor accidents, considerable delay, but no serious damage.

RESCUE OF TEN SURVIVORS OF SUNKEN FLYING BOAT IN OCEAN CALLED MIRACULOUS

Safe after one of the most dramatic rescues in the annals of transoceanic air travel, five men and five women survivors of the sunken flying boat Cavalier were bound for their original destinations after being brought safely to New York aboard the tanker Esso Baytown.

Gale-wept seas which slowed the sturdy rescue vessel to eight knots revivied anew for the ten who lived the memory of nearly 10 terror-filled hours they spent clinging to rubber lifebelts until the tanker hove to in the darkness, drawn by their cries.

Joy over their own miraculous rescue was tempered with sorrow at the fate of three other persons—two men passengers and a plane steward—who slipped beneath icy waves, apparently too weak from injuries for the long struggle against tempest winds and battering water.

Eight Coast Guard vessels gave the three up for lost last night after a thorough search of the seas where motor trouble forced the giant Bermuda bound imperial British Airways craft to pancake into the Atlantic Ocean 300 miles southeast of Cape May, N. J., during a gale Saturday afternoon.

It sank in 10 minutes, forcing the 13 persons aboard to leap into the water before they could don life-saving equipment.

Among the survivors were the wives of the two missing passengers. They were recuperating from hysterical horror engendered when, helpless to aid, they saw their weakened husbands slip from hastily grabbed lifebelts to certain death.

All survivors were reported in "fair condition," however, except Capt. M. R. Alderson, pilot of the 19-ton $300,000 flying boat, who suffered more from shock and exposure than the others. Several were cut and bruised.

Change Will Be Unfair

The proposed change of location of the Dixie Highway will deprive property owners along the present right-of-way of a valuable franchise that was bought and paid for at the time of the purchase of their property. Take this important highway away from them, and you will take many thousands of dollars away from the valuation to Boone county.

This fact was brought out very clearly a few years back when an attempt was being made to re-route U. S. 31-W through the city of Louisville. Tax experts were called into the fight, and finally the city fathers acknowledged that theloss of taxable valuation on the Eighteenth street road would be far greater than acknowledged that the loss of taxable valuation on the ready taxed as high as possible. Many merchants on the main highway would have been forced out of business, and others would have suffered a serious decline of revenue. This same thing will be true if U. S. 25 through Boone county is rerouted over an entirely new right-of-way.

The property-owners adjacent to the Dixie Highway should solidly back the movement to retain this nationally known north-south highway.

For Your Own Good

The Trustees of the Town of Walton are stressing the necessity of strict enforcement of the sanitary laws in our town for the safety of citizens and not to play petty politics. The city dads several years ago saw the necessity of doing something about an unpleasant situation, and passed the ordinance protecting the health of the community.

Several years have passed since this ordinance took effect, and property-owners have had ample time to correct this situation. Now it is a case for the State Board of Health to investigate if owners fail to take action. The elimination of unsanitary practices in Walton is for your own good, and to ward off any dangers of typhoid epidemics with the accompanying disasterous effects.

Notice has been served, and the proper officials will proceed to enforce the ordinance at once.

Boy Scout Week

A nation-wide series of Inter-Troop visitations and rallies will be conducted by Boy Scout groups everywhere soon as their part in the Scout Brotherhood Day activities of the 1939 Boy Scout Week, in observance of the 29th birthday of the Boy Scout Movement in this country. Membership in the Boy Scouts of America is open to all regardless of race, creed or economic status, based on the principle stated in the fourth Scout Law "A Scout is friendly—he is a friend to all and a brother to every other Scout."

Acting in this spirit the leaders of the National and Local Councils of the Boy Scouts of America have urged all local Troops, Sea Scout Ships, Explorer Troops and Rover Crews meeting to night to invite as their guests other Scouts with whom they are not already acquainted,m aking a special point of honoring those with whom they might not ordinarily meet daily. In this way boys and young men with varying backgrounds, interests and outlooks will come to know each other better through the medium of their Scout relationship and plant seeds of human understanding emphasizing the great and important role of human brotherhood.

The inspiration for Scout Brotherhood Day arises from the Scout custom of conducting a world Jamboree every four years, so that Scouts from the 73 different national Scout associations affiliated with the International Bureau of the Boy Scouts may meet each other in camp for a period of two weeks, develop friendships and better understanding. Five of these great world gatherings, attended by an average of 25-000 Scouts have already been held, two in England and one each in Denmark, Hungry and Holland respectively. There is ample evidence that the fraternal feeling generated in these gatherings have endured and borne important fruit.

Similar to such world meetings was the National Jamboree held by the American Scouts in Washington, D.C. in 1937 and attendedb y 27,232 Scouts and Scouters (adult leaders) including delegates and guests from 24 countries or territories outside the continental United States, as well as American Scouts from every state in the Union.

The program planned for Scout Brotherhood Day will in all probability equal or surpass in spirit and effect any previous effort in the same direction and the Scouts who participate in them will not only enjoy a series of good Scouting activities but be doing their share toward keeping and preserving the vitality of American Democracy.

Home Town Paper

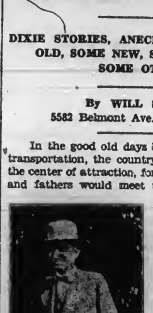
For a sense of well-being and a reconstructed belief in the sanity of theworld and one's fellow man, a little reading of the weekly paper from the old home town is recommended.

Perhaps one does not find news there of great moments. World disasters, politics on a national scale, the rumbling of drums on the European and Asiatic war fronts, rarely find their way into the home-town paper. Instead there is a parade of the every-day doings of the people whom we know.

Farmer Brown is in town to report that the corn never looked better in his neighborhood; the Grange held its picnic and Mrs. Smith won the layer cake contest; the Cross-Roads Sunday school's last session is reported; there is a serious and intelligent discussion of the wheat loan; families "week-end" with friends at near-by hamlets; a young couple is wedded amid the ecomtums of the kindly editor; announcement is made of a fried chicken dinner by the ladies of the local church; a citizen dies, and his useful life is related.

Not very important items these, but the point is that they present the authentic picture of something which is important—human and community life. It is pleasurable to notice the often apt and even charming writing in the home-town weekly. Farmer Brown's crop report, the Grange picnic with Mrs Smith's cake-baking victory and the Sunday school session are given the important place they really hold in the lives of the people. The crop loan editorial is not superficial, there is a heart-warming joy in the account of the wedding, and the death of the citizen is simply and beautifully told, leaving the unavoidable impression that the man was a friend. Not even the political editorials are harsh or biting. A kindliness imbues all of the home-town paper's columns.

There are scores of such papers in the United States. In their mass impression they create a feeling of confidence in the state and nation. Perhaps no world events are going forward in these communities, but there cannot be much wrong with the sober, industrious, good-humored life which is mirrored in the country papers.—Kansas City Star.



A Live Wire Briar Hopper

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

In the good old days before automobiles and fast transportation, the country store and postoffices were the center of attraction, for miles around. The mothers and fathers would meet there and make purchases.

The young folks would go to the postoffice to mail and receive letters from their sweetheart that lived in other parts of the country. Mr. Abe Barnett, a typical, clever and accommodating Jew, conducted the country store at Kingston, Ky. He took great interest in all the doings of the little village, and a special interest in the girls and their beaus, who came to see them from a distance; with an eye to business, making better customers of the girls and their friends. One of the girls in the neighborhood married a young man who lived at Richmond business man, and who was in the monument business. A good many of the girls envied the young lady for her catch of the prominent Richmon business man, which the young lady rather proud of her good fortune.

After their marriage at Richmond, the bridal party of several young couples drove over ot the Big Hill Pike with horses and buggies (real pleasure driving couples) to Kingston for the reception that was given by the young lady's family and friends. A governor of the state or high official of today would not attract more attention than did Mr. Francis, the groom. Most everyone in the village made it their business to be around the store and postoffice upon the arrival of the bridal party.

It was quite a busy day for Mr. Barnett as he was a leading citizen and expected to be the official on the reception committe. When the new Mrs. Francis and her husband drove up to the store, Mr. Barnett came out, bowing with all the politeness of a dancing master. Mrs. Francis with all the pride of a young bride, said to Mr. Barnett, "I want to introduce my husband, Mr. Francis." To her utter surprise Mr. Barnett said: "He is the very last man what I will have any use for." The young bride was very much disappointed and humiliated, saying, "Mr. Barnett I do not understand why you would say that about my husband." Mr. Barnett's answer was, "He is a monument man and I am going to stand him off as long as I can." Everyone enjoyed the joke. All joined in giving the newlyweds a grand reception at the appointed time that night. Mr Barnett led all the boys that night with their drums, horns, fiddles, fifes, tin-pans and noisemakers to the home of the bride giving a grand serenade, after which Mr. Barnett and his serenaders were invited into the house and given a treat to an abundance of lemonade and cake. With common consent, Mr. Barnett, not good looking, but a good-natured, jolly fellow, was appointed the official kisser of the bride for the crowd. These were the good old days when people really enjoyed life. What say you readers who were raised in the country.

Promote Kentucky

An Editorial

"State Exploitation . . . .We advocate the creation and support by adequate appropriation of a real bureau to exploit Kentucky as a tourist State. Figures recently issued show that we are twenty-ninth in the United States in revenue from tourists; we should easily be in the first ten. The failure is our own; Kentucky has more to exploit and had done less exploiting than any State that comes to mind. Virginia's revenue from tourist travel is almost double Kentucky's revenue from her tobacco crop. The State could afford to make half the investment that such States as Tennessee are making and get double the result. We will strongly urge the Lousville hotel men, merchants and others to rid the city of the stigma of "gouging" visitors at Derby time."

The foregoing excerpt from an an editorial statement of the Louisville Courier-Journal and the Louisville Times, in their issues of January 1, and January 3, respectively, states briefly, but with nice clarity, the case against Kentucky in the matter of developing the vast resources which are her's as pertaining to tourist trade—now rated the greatest industry in the nation.

Figures have not as yet been made public for 1938 but the United States Tourist Bureau most reliable of the agencies dealing with this phase of American life, reported for 1937, that tourists spent more than $5,000,000,000 that year in the United States alone.

An endless string of statistics easily could be presented showing how states which have made investments in advertising their attractions, scenic beauties, historical points of interest, industries, attractive homes, parks and amusement centers have reaped abundant harvests of tourist dollars, attracted many new industries, gained innumerable now and highly desirable citizens. In no recorded instance where a state has made any concerted effort to attract the highly profitabe tourist trade has the investment failed to yield less than several hundred per cent of profit.

Kentucky, a few years back, made a splendid start in this direction when it sent abroad throughout this country and most of the civilized world the Kentucky Progress Magazine, the first State pictorial publication, extolling her virtues and depicting her varied beauties. This magazine has its counterpart today in the newer publication, In Kentucky, likewise a pictorial booklet, published quarterly.

A few maps, largely orginated by the State Highway department, and a few folders, compiled by the Division of State Parks, the Division of Forestry and the Division of Game and Fish, complete the pitifully small total of Kentucky's publicity. If is so inadequate a contribution toward properly advertising Kentucky, as compared with other much less favored states are doing, as to leave our great State far down the list in attracting visitors who provide highly profitable business.

Kentucky should have, for exhibition in schools, before women's and men's organizations, civic clubs and wherever public gatherings are held, modern motion pictures showing her attractions for tourists; she should go on the air at regular inteval to tell Kentucky's glorious story; she should employ at least a few of the better periodical publications for advertising purposes; she should quadruple the circulation of her state magazine; in short, it greatly behooves Kentucky, the State which has more of tradition, scenic beauty, historic interest and widely-famed culture than any other, with the probable exception of Virginia, to do a real job of selling herself to the world.

Kentucky has too long neglected of her opportunities along the lines mentioned herein. She has had the very great advantage of receiving more free publicity than any other state, in song, in story and in the immortal achievements of her noble sons and daughters. The time has come when she should, without delay, capitalize upon all this by adequately equipping the agency which has its duty as properly advertising Kentucky, no longer the "Dark and Bloody Ground" but become, as her name really implies, "The Great Meadow."

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

BY JAMES PRESTON

A confidential report, based on a secret investigation of living standof a top-rung administrationite. It will be made public soon. When it is released for public consumption, it will take the wind from the sails of anyone with the notion that the dictators have created a magic economis Utopia that challenges The American Way of free, enterprise and representative Democracy.

To begin with, the investigator is said to have found the much ballyhooed living standard of the dictator nation about on a par with American slums. Salaries were found to be about half the average in America, and about 70 per cent of the population was found to be on the government payroll, supported by unprecedented taxes imposed on the other 30 per cent.

As for prices of foodstuffs, the report is said to contain this comparison based on the current rate of ex change:

	In the "Utopi-an" State	U. S. aism"
Steak, per lb.	33.3c	$1.00
Butter, per lb	33.3c	.65c
Eggs, per doz	44.5c	.72c
Gasoline, per gal.	23c	60c
Coffee, per lb	23c	$1.00

In otherwords, the worker in the dictator nation, receiving only half (or even less than half) the wages of an American worker, pays many more times as much for his food. (Clothing, rent and other necessities are proportionately as high.)

Incidentally, the investigator found many foods hard to get. Often, inferior substitutes are sold. Such foods as butter and coffee are rationed to the citizens, he found.

A new kind of game is being played in the Capital, but there are limitations on who can play. It is limited to members of Congress, and the game, for want of better name, can be called "Wait And See."

One team is composed of members who want to amend some of the laws enacted by the last Congress to make them workable. The Wagner Act is one, for example. The other team is composed mostly of hold-overs from the last Congress who wrote the legislation in question. A member of the latter team sums up the apparent point of the game thus:

"We are waiting to see what the other side is going to propose. If they come out with a good ball, maybe we can pick it up and run for a touchdown with it."

—o—

A proposal advanced last year for the construction of a super transcontinental highway has been revived and expanded. The idea is being incorporated in the plans for national defense spending and will call for not one, but four super highways. Two will be transcontinental and two will run North-South.

Incidental, to avoid quibbling over just what States, counties and cities the roads will touch, many of the Congressmen have agreed among themselves to leave the matter entirely in the hands of the Bureau of Public Roads.

Here's a tip do the male-hater-of ladies-hats:

If any organized drive for modified hat styles is being plotted, there is a likely recruit from the feminine ranks—and no less a personage than a lady member of Congress. She appeared on the House floor last week wearing dark glasses. She explained she had been "stabbed" in the eye by a feather atop the hat of a lady companion at a Capital tea party.

—o—

Almost simultaneously it was announced to correspondents in Washington last week, that:

The government payroll has hit another all time peak, with 119,034 employed in Washington offices, agencies, bureaus and commissions, as compared with the 117,760 peak during the World War. (These figures don't include field employes, which add more than 600,000 more.)

And that:

A Senate study had found approximately 12,000 Federal employes to be aliens.

Small people and small concerns should remember if size counted for anything David never would have whipped Goliath.

SOME OLD-TIME MEDICINES

If one of us gets sick today, he is dosed with stuff that bears strange new name sand tastes. One almost longs for the old medicine chest and its tried-and-true remidies.

I have been told on good authority that counter irritants are not so common as formerly, and those now in use are likely to be something different from the plasters we used to know. When a fellow had a severe case of cramps, a blister plaster turned the trick, and almost turned the patient, too. I can recall having one such plaser, and one was enough The tad-smelling black ointment was spread out on a cloth and applied to my stomach. Not long after it seemed that a hot iron was burning into my flesh. After sme minutes of agony I was relived to have the plaster removed and a mush plaster applied insted. Then I puffed up as if I had been scalded and by and by got well, plaster or a strong constitution being to blame. Now, a mustard plaster can create enough heat to startle one but I vote for the blister plaster made of Spanish flies or cantharides.

Are there still cricks in the neck? If so, how about cupping? There used to be regular instruments for this, but a wide-mouthed bottle into which has been dropped a lighted paper will form a vacuum and draw the skin into as many fancy shapes as you wish, this relieving the crick. If there are cricks in the back, or any other back miseries, try a porous plaster. One's back, after it has been subjected to a porous plaster for a few days, looks like the board on which ones could play some fancy kind of checkers.

Spells of colic (Newspapers having a large percentage of mid-victorian readers had better delete this word.) Yield to varous and sundry teas. A mild case will probably be stopped by ginger tea, with a little alcohol or whiskey added for flavor. Severe cases will require Indian turnip. In fact, any one who survives a case of cholic and Indian turnip should be given a medal for endurance.

If an insect bites you, there are many things to do. For instance, mix soda and vinegar and apply while the mixture is still fissing. Chiggers and ticks yield to friedmeat grease. A severe bee stang will lose its agony when the spot is covered with a fresh chew of tobacco.

Billiousness, once a much-used word, had a remedy. Most of the herb remidies aimed at this disease. Good old calomel in its various forms, especially blue mass, so easily made into pills, get at the seat of this trouble. If you want to be a little more stylish, buy for a dollar or two about ten cents' worth of calomel in some kind of patent medicine.

And then there are chills, "agers." Quinine is and was the remedy, whatever strides we may have made in other ways. If you can stand it, take it raw; you will think yourself brave to swallow it thus. Capsules, with both "cap" and "sule" full of quinine was the usual form. When a fellow has taken about six capsules of this drug in a single day, he has noises in his head that would make a rock-crusher sound like an accordian. Again if you must be stylish ,try any number of chill tonics, in which the quinine is disguised.

STATE CONSERVATION MEN WIN STREAM POLLUTION SUIT

The prevention of stream pollution received a big boost when Conservation Officer, Dane Hagan, Calhoun, Ky., and Stanley Shelton, Maceo, Ky., won a court case against five major oil companies for poullution of Green and Rough Rivers in the counties of McLean and Ohio.

The oil companies were dumping "B. S." (black oil which settles in the bottoms of tanks and which cannot be sold) into the streams. This oil formed a skim on the water and when the fish came up for air they were killed. Shelton said that thousands of fish met death in this manner during the summer and fall months and that action was taken against the companies the first of November.

Each oil company was fined $64.50, making a total of $322.50 in fines for the five.

Shelton said that this pollution case was the first of its kind in this state.

If other violators were handled in like manner fishing would be raised to a higher level and the numbers of fish would increase rapidly. Some of the best fishing streams in Kentucky have been completely ruined by pollution.

SCATTER FOOD AN HELP SAVE WILD GAME AND BIRDS

Scattering food on the ground for birds during severe winter weather is a good practice, but not nearly so effective as helping nature do the job of feeding the birds, according to Ward T. Darnell, Superintendent of CCC Camp Walton, Kentucky.

A wide veriety of plants and shrubs adapted to this section can be planted on small areas about the farm so as to provide both "board and lodging" for birds, rabbits, squirrels and etc., and other desirable species of wildlife during the pinch periods of winter and early spring he said.

As one phase of its program of soil and water conservation in its erosion control area in Boone and Kenton counties, the Soil Conservation Service is using plants and shrubs which will serve the double purpose of controlling erosion and providing food and cover for wildlife on small scattered areas on farms of cooperators in the projects.

By selecting a variety of such plants which mature seed and make food available over successive periods throughout the year, conditions favorable to the development f wildlife can be provided on any farm. Many species of grasses and legumes, small grains, such shrubs as Pea Tree, Northern Hackberry, and Chinese Chestnut are excellent for this purpose.

Gullies and galled spots and other severely eroded areas about the farm make ideal locations for such plantings. Other desirable sites for bird-food patches include borders, hedge rows, fence corners, margins of woods and other waste spaces not suitable for cultivation.

RESTED NERVES ARE HELPFUL TO POISE

Poise is one of the greatest attributes of charm.

Yet, how few of us ever really stop to think in terms of poise, what it constitutes and how it may be achieved—and maintained.

Perhaps that last is the most important of all, for it is the poise that can be maintained in the face of unexpectedly disconcerting situations that really counts.

And poise is not wholly a matter of psychology as so many of us think. It is also very much a matter of healthy nerves.

Healthy nerves come of good physical condition, of plenty of rest, the right sort of exercise, balanced diets—all of which conspire to produce a healthy mind. However, in this year of crowded hours it isn't always possible to get as much rest as one really needs and even the morning or night exercises are sometimes hard to sandwich in between social and business emergencies.

The next best thing is to set aside at least one day or night—depending upon whether or not you are in business—a week to work on tired nerves.

Let us suppose your are a business woman and that evening is your only free time. Set aside one night a week and mark it "For rest only." Have a masseuse from your beauty parlor come to your house and give you a thorough relaxing message. Arrange the hour of her treatment so that you will have time for a long and leisurely hot bath before her arrival. Make your schedule something like this. Upon arrival home get into a comfotable and not too fussy negligee since you do not want to feel dressed up but relaxed.

Sit down in front of your mirror and give your face a thorough creaming. Then brush your hair thoroughly with a good stiff brush. Next fill your tub full of good hot water and sprinkle in one of the relaxing bath solutions or salts.

After your bath you are ready for your massage. Rub some oil into your finger and toe nails after you come out of your bath and spread a good norishing cream over your face. Then give yourself into the hands of the masseuse. Retire immediately after her treatment. When you awaken in the morning you'll be amazed to find what one evening of carefully scheduled rest and relaxation has done for you.

BATHROOM CLOSETS

A small bedroom is often turned into a bathroom, in remodeling a farm hous., after electricity has become available. In most instances a bedroom is larger than needed, and home management specialists at the Kentucky College of Agriculture suggest that a part of the room be partitioned into a storage closet. Many of the older houses are lacking in closets.

DEEP-SEA DIVER REMINISCES OVER ODD EXPERIENCES

Wife Worries Over Wet Feet When He Goes on Trips For Groceries.

FAIRPORT HARBOR, OHIO.—How deep-sea divers lasso fish—just for the fun of it—was told here by Harry Reinhartsen, working on the old E. G. Mathiott, sunken ship in Fairport harbor.

"Yes, we used to catch them that way down by Miami," the diver said, polishing the glass of his helmet. "This certain species of fish is very lazy and we would sneak up on them with loop of wire, slip it over their tails, and a helper up above would hoist 'em up to the boat before they knew what had happened."

The fish weighed from 50 to 60 pounds and were good eating, Reinhartsen said. He and another diver indulged in the lassoing sport while working on a sewer project—"during recess, you might say."

Reinhartsen, who is 56, was the diver who removed the first body from the submarine S-51, which was rammed and sunk in Long Island sound. Every man died at his post and Reinhartsen worked in 139 feet of water during salvage operations.

Worked on S-48 Also.

He worked also on the S-48, which sank while on a trial run off Bridgeport, Conn., in 75 feet of water. All of the crew escaped by coming out a torpedo tube in the bow, so the diver was sent down with an electric torch to cut a hole in the bottom to permit air to be pumped into the hull to raise the sunken vessel.

"I got a bad case of 'bends' on that job," the veteran diver said. "It wasn't that I was working so deep as that I stayed down too long and ascended too rapidly.. 'Bends' are caused by gas bubbles forming in the blood under the terrific pressure. Nothing happens until you come up. Then the gas bubbles out of the blood, like a bottle of pop just opened. This causes painful cramps—or death if they get to the heart."

One of his jobs, Reinhartsen was sent to the bottom of Lake Michigan—210 feet down—to inspect the wreck of a ship suspected of having been sunk for the insurance.

Since the pay of divers is proportional to the depth at which they are forced to work, he receives $136 a day for his efforts, and as he could work only 20 minutes daily, because of the pressure, his pay figured to about $408 an hour. Actually it was considerably less, because, after working only 20 minutes at this depth, Reinhartsen had to spend three and one-half hours in ascending to the surface by degrees to avoid the "bends."

Testimony Wins Suit.

On the strength of his testimony that the seacocks in the bottom of the ship had been opened, the insurance company won a suit, releasing it from liability.

Reinhartsen is married and says he has his wife "pretty well trained" and accustomed to the risks he undergoes. However, on one job on which he was required to search a reservoir near Jersey City for the body of a fisherman in 110 feet of water, his wife became worried. One diver had been killed on the job—sucked into a water intake at the bottom.

"That got my wife," Reinhartsen said. "She called me up at quitting time one night and begged me to leave the job. But I went home and talked to her several hours and convinced her that it was all right. Next day I went down and found the man after about 10 minutes.

"Funny thing," he said, "she worries more now when I'm out getting the groceries or something. Afraid I'll get my feet wet—maybe get pneumonia, I guess."

Vets Veto Judge; Insist On Being Sent to Jail

TORONTO.—"Guilty," said two Toronto men, charged in police court with fishing unlawfully with a net in the waters of the lagoon at Toronto island.

The men, both war veterans, pleaded that they were unemployed and had no other means of obtaining food for their families.

"Nevertheless, the law is the law," said Magistrate Robert J. Browne, himself a war veteran. "I'll have to impose a fine of $10 or a jail term."

"Can't pay," the accused men chorused. "We'll have to serve the time."

"No," the magistrate replied, "you don't have to. I'll pay your fine myself."

"Not a chance," the accused men insisted. "We won't agree to that. We can take it."

"All right," Magistrate Browne ruled. "That leaves me no alternative. You'll each go to jail—for the term of one hour."

The two veterans spent 60 minutes in their cells and were home with their families the same night.

Trapper Outruns Coyote

LAWTON, OKLA.—John J. Pickens, who has trapped 73 coyotes in the Wichita mountains wildlife refuge, spotted a three-months-old coyote pup while driving through the refuge. He chased it afoot for half a mile across rocky slopes before the tired animal dodged into a rock crevice. Pickens pulled it out by the tail.

RED'S CATCHER CHOSEN AS MOST VALUABLE PLAYER

Ernest Lombardi's 1939 rush to the spotlight, which culminated in his winning the National League's most valuable player award for achieved because of his increased effectiveness behind the bat and not because of any suddenly found batting power.

This might seem slightly bizarre in view of the records that reveal Cincinnati's 220-pound catcher at the top of the 1938 National League batting list. It is the only analysis that can be gained from the situation, however, as batting heroics have been identified with Lombardi since he broke in to the majors with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1931 .

Until last year, he was generally regarded throughout baseball as just a hitter, and not as a crack receiver. His 1938 performance altered the complete situation; for the manner in which he handled the youngster on the Cincinnati staff, and a newly found attitude for his job caused the critics who voted in the most valuable player poll to rally to him as their No. 1 choice.

The manner in which Lombardi handled Johnny Vander Meer in his two no hit contests, and the recognition given the big fellow by all of the members of the Reds, sealed the prevalent opinion that Bill McKechnie had found a new Lombardi to replace the strong offensive but weak defensive catcher of the previous seasons.

The new Lombardi retained all of the outstanding qualities of the old, but added was a fellow who fit into McKechnie's scheme of always having a good catcher to help in the increasing of pitching staff's efficiency. No pitching corps can be successful without a good catching staff to support it, believes Bill.

The record with which Lombardi won the National League batting crown in 1938 was not the highest of his major league career, so you can see to what extent his defensive improvement raised his standing among those who are closely identified with the work of all players in 1935 Ernie clubbed for an impressive .348 average, and in so doing started a string of batting marks that are unrivaled for consistency.

Since setting his high .343 average, that won the championship last season. He also appeared in approximately the same number of games each season, too, varying only one in the seasons of 1935, 1936 and 1937. In those years he participated in 120, 121 and 120 games. Last year he competed in 129.

In his eight major league seasons Lombardi has appeared in 920 games, missing the 100 mark only in his first season with the Brooklyn Dodgers, when he was in 73. His lifetime batting mark is 319, with only two seasons with a mark less then .300. Those years were his first, 1931, when he hit 297, and his third, when he hit 283.

Lombardi as many years left to capitalize on his new standing. He will be 31 years of age 11 days before the opening of the 1939 season.

ELECTRICITY BIG HELP TO FARMERS

The Inter-County Rural Electric Cooperative Corporation is constructing 315 miles of lines to serve 1,400 members in Boyle, Casey, Garrard, Larue, Lincoln, Marion, Mercer, Nelson and Washington counties Kentucky. Six hundred and fifty members are already receiving service.

Accordring to C. R. Thompson of the Corporation, farmers are finding electricity economical as well as convenient. This is especially true of dairy farmers who require extensive cooling equipment.

In one instance, a Mercer county dairy farmer whose gasoline-motor-operated cooling equipment had been costing an average of $45 a month, was able to have superior cooling service at a cost of only $12.51 in August, $11.24 in September, $10.06 in October, and less in winter months.

STICK CANDY FABRICS ARE INTRODUCED FOR FLORIDA RESORT WEAR

As if bathing suits and play ensembles decorated with ruffles, frills and bow knots were not already just too, too sweet, designers concentrating on styles for southern wear have gone a step further and made use of stick candy fabrics to heighten still further the Victorian effect of the resort panorama.

Ushering in the 1939 resort styles, a fashion show staged at Miami, Florida, introduced a group of play and swim suits fashioned of tub satin striped in shocking pink and black. One suit that reached new heights of demure modestly was made with a detachable ruffled skirt over bloomers and a high neck finished off with a prim band. A play suit looked exactly like a little girl's pinafore, having ruffles around the neck and armholes and an apron front that tied in the back with a big bow.

A spectator sports ensemble of white crepe featured a petticoat edged with a peppermint striped ruffle that peeped from beneath the hem. The candy striped taffeta was used for a tiny ruching around the neck and short sleeves.

However, the candy striped fabrics were not used for day-time wear alone, several of the smartest evening gowns being made of taffeta that took its decorative pattern from those sticks of candy so dear to the heart of another generation. One of these was green and pink stripped taffeta, made with a bouffant skirt, brief puffed sleeves and a heart shaped decolletage. Another exploited pink and black striped satin similar to that used for the swim suits and was made with a skirt puffed at the back to suggest a bustle. The girl who modeled this gown wore her hair piled high on her head, with a knot of black velvet ribbon at the back of her crown of curl and black velvet ribbons were tied around her throat and writs.

IN YOUR WINDOW PLANT A GARDEN

With gray skies the order of the January days, thus making it necessary to turn on the lights in the very early afternoon and frequently to burn the most of the day, it takes a bit more than ordinary ingenuity and imagination to give the living room a gay and cheerful atmosphere.

One of the surest ways to achieve an atmosphere that makes your friends exclaim "how charming" when they enter your living room is to make use of growing plants and the many bright bulb plants that bloom so prolifically at this time of the year. In fact, you can easily plant an indoor garden by making use of plate glass shelves that can be installed in your windows with a minimum of effort.

This is an ideal way to keep plants indoors for they not only get the necessary light, but the feeling of a garden can be more realistically obtained if the plants are concentrated in groups. Also, framed by window drapes they make a charming effect that can easily become the focal point of interest in your room.

Many department stores now carry hanging shelves of plate glass that are designed to hold window gardens. However, if you cannot find them in your own department or hardware store the glass dealer in you neighborhood undoubtedly can make them for you.

Among plants which will grow well indoors in pots and which are to be found in almost any florist shop are cyclamen, Spanish pepper, ivy, all f the ferns, begonia, amaryllis paper narcissus, gardenia, the salmon colored patience (an old favorite of grandmother's day) and the African violet.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY CAUSES HEADACHES

All Is Confusing With Two Scotts in Suburb.

CLEVELAND.—A "case of mistaken identity" is causing the Kenneth D. Scott family, of suburban East Cleveland, unwelcome fame—all because another Kenneth Scott, professor of classics in Western Reserve university's Flora Stone Mather college, is not listed in the city telephone directory.

Professor Scott, an authority on Fascism, is much in demand as a lecturer. He does not receive the attention due him, however, as it goes to his namesake—Kenneth D. Scott, an illumination engineer.

"The misdirected telephone calls and letters aren't the worst part of this mistaken identity business," Engineer Scott said.

"What is most annoying is that those seeking Professor Scott won't believe me when I say that I'm not he. I have intermirable arguments with telephone callers who insist that they are talking to the professor.

"On several occasions I've had to use firmness in closing the door on persistent searchers for Professor Scott. They do everything but put their foot in the door," he added.

He said that the callers-in-person say he "looks like the professor."

Here is a partial list of misdirected items which have come to the Scott family addressed to Professor Scott.

Invitations to speak on their travels in foreign countries to which they never have gone.

Poems and jokes on the New Deal. (The purpose of these contributions baffled the Scott family.)

Letters from Germany addressed to "Kamerade."

Engraved invitations to formal dinners.

Money for speeches never made.

The Scott family deducted no compensation for being awakened at all hours of the night by the phone calls for the professor—and they returned the check.

'Eye for Freedom' Plea For Convict Is Denied

JACKSON, MICH. — Officials of Southern Michigan prison and state corrections department rejected the proposal of a 24-year-old convict to give up his right eye to a sightless man in return for his freedom.

The convict, Marby Underwood of Detroit, serving a 2 to 10 year term for obtaining money under false pretenses, offered his right eye because his wife was homeless and needed him. He said she was forced to sleep in all-night theaters.

In a letter to Warden Joel Moore, Underwood asked he be allowed to give the cornea of his eye to William Lewis, 28, a Canon City, Colo., attorney who needs one to restore his sight. Four Colorado convicts awaiting execution have refused to aid the attorney.

Grizzly and Two Women Meet Same Hard Luck

RONAN, MONT.—Mrs. Charles Joyce and her sister, Mrs. Fred Owens, together with a grizzly bear, all played in the same luck.

The two women were driving alone when a grizzly, evidently losing its footing on a nearby hillside, came bouncing down the hill and landed plump on the front of the car. The women had no firearms and the bear was too groggy to attack them.

So both went different ways, the bear in a rather zig-zag manner and the auto at high speed.

By a daily balanced diet of ice cream and beefsteak, the druggist had been able to maintain its weight for years at 13 pounds.

EARLY LESPEDEZA SOWINGS SUGGESTED

Sowing lespedeza in middle winter or else waiting until late March or April is suggested by the Kentucky College of Agriculture circular, "The Lespedezas in Kentucky." It sowed in late January or early February freezing and thawing and rains will cover the seed sufficiently, the stand will become established early and the plants be in a better position to withstand competition from nurse crops and weeds.

If not sowed in middle winter, it is considered better to wait until late March or April, when the seed can be covered with a harrow or other implement. Late sowing may best after where lespedeza is sowed with small grain. With oats or alone on prepared ground, it is better to sow the seed on the surface and allow rains to do the covering. On hard, bare ground, the use of a harrow or other implement is advantageous. After middle April moisture conditions are usually less favorable and it becomes increasingly difficult to get a stand.

For maximum yield the first year, 20 to 25 pounds per acre of korean lespedeza seed should be sown, with about a third more of kobe. Good stands are often obtained with lighter seedings, but the use of more seeds generally profitable. Three to five pounds an acre will give stand enough to provide a full crop the following year by volunteer seeding, even if the first year's growth is pastured.

SEVERAL DISEASES RESEMBLE SLEEPING SICKNESS IN HORSES

Forage poisoning, or botulism among horses and mules in fall and winter. The symptoms are similar to those observed in sleeping sickness, a disease of summer and fall Other domestic animals, including chickens are susceptible to botulism.

As the name indicates, forage poison in feeds, especially in tightly packed materials in moist weather, such as silage, baled hay, oats and oat hay, and immature and moldy corn.

Symptoms of botulism in horses are depression, unsteady gait, and inability to swallow. As the disease progresses the animal is unable to stand, although it may live for several days.

A serum or antitoxin is used for protection against and treatment of botulism. Treated animals may safelybe given feed that that contains the boulinus toxin, according to the department of animal pathology at the Kenturky Agricultural Experiment Station.

In addition to botulism and sleeping sickness there are other diseases of horses and mules that produce symptoms in some respects resembling symptoms of these diseases, points out Dr. W. W. Dimock, head of the department of animal pathology. Positive diagnosis of these diseases from clinical symptoms is not an easy matter, he says. The time of the year that the horse takes sick and the feed that it is receiving help somewhat in directing attention to which disease the animal has.

In the case of botulism, feeding tests on guinea pigs and chickens will often give conclusive evidence. For sleeping sickness, the procedure is to examine the brain, and make animal inoculations.

THE ADVENTURES OF OZZIE

VERONA GIRL WED IN BEAUTIFUL CEREMONY

A beautiful wedding of the holiday season was that of Miss Dorothy Leathers, daughter of Mrs. Boyd Webster of Verona, Ky., and Mr. Charles Long, son of Mrs. Flora Long, which took place Saturday morning, December 31, at the St. Lawrence Catholic Church. The altar was beautiful with flowers and the church decorations of the Christmas season.

The nuptial High Mass was read by the Rev. Father Othmar Schroeder in the presence of many friends of the young couple. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. William Bansdbach sang "Ave Maria," accompanied by Mrs. A. J. Hassmer at the organ, who also played softly during the reading of the Mass.

The bride was charming in a gown of heavy white satin made on Princess lines. The neckline was high, with a collar of lace and the sleeves were the fashionable leg o' mutton style, ending in a point at the wrists. The skirt fell in graceful folds into a light train in the back and three inserts of lace in triangular shapes were the only trimmings. Her veil was of finger tip length held in place at the head with a tiny cap of lace matching that of the dress. Her arm bouquet was of white carnations and fern tied with white voile.

Miss Long wore a formal gown of wine colored velvet with matching hat. Her arm bouquet was of pink carnations and fern and she wore gold slippers.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of Mrs. Flora Long. Her covers were laid for thirty guests at a table completely appointed in white, pink and crystal. The centerpiece was a large two tiered bridal cake bearing the miniature bride and groom. A three course breakfast was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Long left during the afternoon for a short wedding trip to Lexington, and are now living in their newly furnished apartment at 130 Mary street. Mrs. Long chose for her going away trip a chic frock of beige crepe with brown jacket, beige hat and green coat with fox collar.

Mrs. Long has been employed at the King Hotel dining room the past year, having come here from Verona, Ky. She graduated from the high school in Central City, Ky. She is a charming girl and has made many friends here. Mr. Long was educated in St. Lawrence Parochial school and has been employed at the Jos. E. Seagram Co., since it opened. He is a young man of many sterling qualities.

Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Webster and daughters, Julia, of Verona, Ky., and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Fahey of Aurora.

REGISTRATION FOR SECOND TERM AT U. K. SCHEDULED

Classes for the second term at the state university will begin Thursday, February 3, and Monday, February 13, has been set as the last date upon which a student may enter an organized class.

QUICK, EASY LIFE FOR MODERN PIGS

The modern pig lives six months of a quick and easy life, according to a Kentucky College of Agriculture circular called "The Pig from Birth to Market in Six Months." Once time meant little or nothing to the hog raiser, as well as to the pig, but not so any more.

Up-to-date farmers push pigs along to maturity and then cart them off to market weighing 200 pounds or a little more when five to six months old. But in the half-year the pigs had a good time, received liberal feedings of balanced rations, roamed on luscious pasture, had comfortable quarters, and went to market, sleek and profitable.

The circular points out two annual peaks in hog prices—one in March or April and the other between late July and early September. It is good management to have hogs ready to sell in one or other or in both of these periods, the fall pigs in the spring, the early spring in late summer.

The value of pasture in reducing the cost of raising hogs is stressed. An acre of good pring pasture may save 14 to 18 bushels of corn and also tankage or other feed, it is said. Many hog raisers grow rape and sudan grass, in addition to mixed grasses, clovers and alfalfa.

Polar Bear 'Cub' Gets Chilly Initiation

One swallow does not a summer make—but one icy dip completes each winter for members of the Flint (Michigan) Polar Bear Club, whose members annually cut through the ice of Potter Lake for their January swim. Miss Ruth Rockafellow, newly pledged member of the Polar Bears, confessed she was thankful for her heated Chevrolet, which she ducked right back into after the dip. The other hardy members shown in the photo are, left to right, Harry McElyea, Lawrence Cook, and Walter Wawrezak

BASS ARE TRANSFERRED TO STREAMS IN KENTUCKY

A total of 62,022 bass were transferred from the Trigg Hachery, Glasgow, Ky., to adjoining streams and ponds during the Fall months of 1938, Frank Phipps' Superintendent of Hatcheries of the Division of Game and Fish, reported today.

Phipps stated that of the total number of bass removed, 37,309 were of the large mouth variety and 24,713 were rock bass. The bass were of the fingerling and fry size when taken from pools.

Several hundred brood bass were left in the pools and will be used for hatching purposes during the coming spring and summer.

The Trigg Hatchery is state-owned and consists of six large pools which are fed by several springs The hatchery is under the direction of Ed. Landrum.

With favorable conditions in the coming season, it is hoped that an even larger number of fish will be available for distribution, Phipps stated.

PICTURE HIGHLIGHTS

"What will become of the refugees?" is one of the world's big problems today. These two little ones have been living in a no-mans-land between Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

Group medicine is more expensive than it pretends to be, charges Dr. Morris Fishbein in his reply to Look's Open Letter to the American Medical Association.

Thus little beauty is one of the girls who model the new season's bathing suits in the current Look. Strapless suits are featured heavily.

Edward S. Grabacki, amateur photographer, was lucky to catch this scoop shot of a breaking scaffold at a manufacturing plant in South Bend, Ind. The two painters were rescued.

Prizefighting is sport's most vicious racket, charges the current Look magazine, submitting photographs of punchdrunk brains contrasted to normal ones. "For every Joe Louis, there will be 10,000 has-beens paid off in battered bodies and scrambled minds."

Before purchasing dresses, women should bend their arms and arch their backs to be sure that material will be loose (but not baggy) under the arms to eliminate strain on seams.

SAYS "WELL DONE" WAY TO COOK PORK

Cook pork "well done," warn the cook books. This means, say Miss Florence Imlay of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, to keep it cooking until it has lost its pink color, both in the meat and in the juice. Fresh pork is a tender meat and many people, therefore, cook it too quickly, especially such cuts as chops, tenderloin or sausage. Ham, bacon, smoked sausage and other pork products should also be cooked well done.

The danger in eating pork that is not sufficiently cooked is that it may contain parasites that cause a disease called trichinosis. These parasities are extremely small and are not seen except under the microscope. There is no practical way of inspecting pork to locate them. When pork from affected hogs is thoroughly cooked the destroyed organism is no more dangerous than the vitalized bobteria in pasteurized milk or purified water.

The necessary percautions are simple. It should be remembered that large pieces require much more cooking than small ones, because heat penetrates slowly into the center of the meat as it cooks. Cook approximately 30 minutes to the pound in a moderate oven, after browning the outside surface to develop a rich flavor. If a meat thermometer is used, cook to between 180 to 185 degrees. Particular care should be taken to cook pork chops well done to the bone. Make a small incision next to the bone with a sharp pointed knife to be sure the meat and juice are no longer pink or red. A good way to avoid drying out is to brown theo utside of the pork chops first and then cover the pan and cook them slowly.

Frozen or cold meat may require longer cooking time, whatever the cut, than meat of ordinary temperature.

WET LAND PROBLEM CONFERENCE SUBJECT

Management of bottom lands was discussed at a conference of Ohio river farmers at Henderson, Ky. More attention will be given to drainage, crop rotation, growing of legumes and the use of manure, it was said. Corn, a major bottom land crop is being fed in large amounts on the river farms, whereas a few years ago much of it was sold. In some instances constant corn growing has tended to reduce fertility. County agents and representatives of the State College of Agriculture interested in land use attended the conference.

ALFALFA NEEDS POTASH

If 120 pounds of potash are removed from the soil with 3 tons of hay then it is important that manure be added or some oher form of potash if we are to maintain good stands of alfalfa. This is one reason for allowing a good growth of alfalfa to stand on the ground for winter protection.

MORGANSVILLE
KENTON COUNTY

We are developed spiritually by giving to others.

Rev. M. M. McFarland recently resigned the pastorate of the Oak Island church to devote his entire time to Oak Ridge Baptist church, which now maintains full-time preaching service. Mrs. McFarland was the former highly efficient leader of the Sun Beam Band, and both are held in highest esteem and affectionate regard their many friends regret the setterance of the tie which bound them to our little church and sincerely wish them every success in their chosen work. Rev. W. A. Wood ably filled the pulpit Sunday.

The many friends of Rev. R. H. Tolle regret his removal from Falmouth, but their prayers and good wishes follow him to his former home in Maysville, where he will reside with his son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Rucker Tolle.

Mrs. John Ware was hostess of the W. M. U. on Thursday, who held an all-day meeting making a quilt for Clear Creek School.

Most gratefully do we appreciate the urgent appeal in our behalf in a recent editorial of the Walton Advertiser, and prayers fully trust that friends every where will respond to this S. O. S. call.

We certainly are passing through one of the most trying experiences that life can give, but conditions can be made less trying, if friends will not "pass by on the other side."

PLENTY OF POTASH

According to Professor Roberts most of the potash taken out of the soil by the crops can be returned to the soil if we take the proper care of manure and plant residue. It is important that plenty bedding be used so that the liquid part of the manure will not be lost because about two-thirds of the potash can be returned to the soil if we properly use the residue from plants and return the manure and liquid parts of the manure to the fields from which the crop was grown.

VERONA HOMEMAKES' TO HOLD REGULAR MEETING

The Verona Homemakers' will hold their regular meeting February 3, at the school house at 10:30 a. m.

At our last meeting, Miss Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent, mentioned many worthwhile things that we should resolve to do for 1939, among them was making a spending plan, and making our kitchens a more pleasant work shop.

At the business session a date was set for caneing chairs. A very interesting program was given on countries belonging to the Associated Countries Women of the World. Mrs. Lela Wasson gave a report on New Zealand Miss Lillian Harris, reported on Scotland and Mrs. Grace Remaker chose Japan to rher report. These reports are to be continued at next meeting Mrs. Frances McCormick reporting on Ireland and Finland by Mrs. John Myers. Miss Gillaspie continued our program on better speech.

Plans were discussed to attend the Farm and Home Week program at Lexington, Ky., January 26-27. We plan to have our club well represented.

The major project for our February meeting will be looper clip work.

DIXIE HIGHWAY MEETING TO BE HELD WEDNESDAY

(2.) Over the remaining two-thirds to be constructed, much of the present right-of-way is already available.

(3.) That part which is not available, we pledge ourselves to undertake to obtain as a condition precedent to the favorable consideration, of this memorial.

(4). The proposed highway should be so constructed, if possible, to throw traffic over the present state owned bridge across the Ohio River, rather than over a privately owned bridge.

(5.) Numerous enterprises have grown up and hundreds of thousands of dollars of Kentucky citizens money have been and are now invested in these enterprises, much of which will be lost should the present highway be abandoned.

(6.) The difficulty in routing traffic from the south end of the present state owned bridge crosswise through the City of Covington to intersect the proposed highway through Sanfordtown and vice versa is obvious and will of necessity result in increased congestion, while continued routing over the present highway will cost afford a free bridge, thus giving to Northern Kentucky as a whole, a chance for development along economic and industrial lines which have thus far been greatly hampered and impeded.

If for any reason the alignment of the present highway cannot be made to meet the requirements of the present engineering standards, then we would most respectfully suggest that you consider thoughtfully an alignment paralleling the present highway and as close proximity to the present highway as engineering requirements will permit, and we feel confident that in such an election, is necessary to be made all elements and factors concerning right-of-way and cheapness of construction can be met as well as in the contemplated highway leading south from Sanfordtown.

During the meeting officers were elected. Named were John T. Vest, Walton, President; C. S. Vallandingham, Walton, Secretary, Sivert Billites, Covington, Treasurer and vice presidents from each community on the road. They were William Simpson, Covington; R. L. Lucas, Fort Mitchell; Irvin Bramlage, Erlanger; W. R. Stith, Florence; J. O. Woodyard, Devon; James Robinson, Richwood; Powers Conrad, Walton; Ben Elliott, Bracht Station; Dr. J. S. Mann, Dry Ridge and R. L. Vincent, Williamstown.

Dues were tentatively set at $2.00 from now until July 1.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the Walton gymnasium next Wednesday night at 7:30 slow time. Public and property-owners are urged to attend.

Seven hundred andtwe nty-five farmers in 39 Kentucky counties tried growing Italian rye grass last year in an effort to add another pasture and cover crop. Most farmers broadcast rye grass seed on old fields, mainly on lespedeza. In some counties the State Highway Department sowed Italian rye grass on shoulders and banks.

Various methods were used last fall in harvesting rye grass seed, including combines and cradles. Henry Romines of Cork, Metcalfe county, gathered about 100 pounds of seed from a quarter-acre, with the use of a cradle. Combines are said to work well as rye grass seed harvesters. County agents in 48 counties reported a total of approximately 400 combines in operation last year.

POTASH IS AN IMPORTANT FOOD ELEMENT

According to Professor Roberts, Head of Agronomy Department, Experiment Station, Lexington, Kentucky, a soil improvement program is not complete unless the farmer includes the conservation of potash and nitrogen in his soil.

According to his statement of 50 bushel corn crop requires 40 pounds of potash and three tons of alfalfa hay requires 120 pounds of potash.

From the above statement it is very evident that if Kenton county farmers are to maintain a well balanced soil improvement program they need to give attention to their potash supply and to take every step possible to conserve this supply and to stop the wate which is taking place every year.

Ground limestone and phosphate are needed on most of our acid ridge soils but we also need to think about the potash and nitrogen requirement for crop production. If we continue to use lime and phosphate at the present.

Highway's for '39

An Editorial

Will Kentucky's 1939 highway building program to be announced in January, according to Major Thomas H. Cutler, State Engineer, be just another "hit and miss" expenditure or will it reflect or be guided by the Highway Planning Survey and traffic count which has been in progress for some two years in Kentucky incooperation with the Bureau of Public Roads? Thus far no real facts obtained by this survey have been made public and there is a real danger perhaps that the survey may be filed away in a dusty pigeon-hol and forgotten.

The orginal undertaking of the Planning Survey in Kentucky was thwarted several years ago for the reason, reputed to the Chairman of the Highway Commission that if such were done the commissioners might not be able to spend the money just as they wished. The American Automobile Association motor clubs favor every effort to make effective the highway planning surveys now nearing completion in most of the states throughout the nation. National club action will be undertaken as a result of a resolution adopted at the Annual Meeting of the A.A.A in Cleveland, last month calling for affiliated clubs and state associations to exert their power and influence" in making the surveys effective.

In addition it is urged that building under the plan be one by a highway department free from political control and influence. The clubs will continuity of office for for highway department administration and personnel and also adoption of stringent measures to prevent the use of higway personnel in political campaigns affecting motorists' interest particularly when the rate of motor taxes is involved.

Kentuckians were once presented with a comprehensive plan to main highways for the state to be constructed and completed with a fifty-million dollar bond issue. However, Kentucky elected to go on the Pay-As You Go Plan." Now the State Highway Department appropriates state and federal funds amounting to $50,000,000 each two years, and since the early days of the bond issue campaign approximately a quarter of a

NOTED BOXER IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Failing to remain at the scene of an accident Sunday night until the Kentucky State Police arrived started a hunt for Henry Armstrong, well-known Negro boxer, Monday. The pugelist was involved in a crash with a car in which two Covington school teachers were riding on U. S. 42 near Warsaw.

The teachers, Miss Sarah Reynolds, and Miss Hattie M. Brum back of Elsmere, were shaken up in the crash, and their auto had to be towed in to Covington. The other auto was able to proceed to Louisville after changing a tire.

Sergeant Roy Osborne, Kentucky State Police, Williamstown, reported both women suffered shock and bruises in the accident.

State Patrolman Charles Conrad was detailed to return Armstrong for questioning.

Osborne added that Armstrong had promised to call him from Louisville Monday and make arrangements for a meeting at Florence Ky., to make a settlement. No one called, he said.

The men reported to have been in the car, he said were Armstrong, his brother Harry, a Joe Lewis and a John Shepherd. The officer did not know who was driving.

Conrad, the Kentucky state patrolman, appeared at Central Station, Cincinnati, later Monday night and asked aid of Cincinnati police in finding Armstrong and his companions. Cincinnati police, when they asked what the charge would be, were told "reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

Walton Defeated Hamilton 35-30

Walton Still Tops Boone League

Walton-Verona Bearcats came from behind here Monday night to win their seventh straight Boone County Conference game. The Bearcats defeated the celler-dwelling Hamilton five 35 to 30. Hamilton held an 18 to 8 advantage at the end of the first half.

In a game that was not decided until the final three minutes of play Walton kept their conference record clean, as they scored five points in the closing moments.

Hamilton handed the Bearcats their toughest conference game to date. The Farmers found the range in the first period and led 10 to2. They increased their margin to 18 to 8 at the half. After the intermisson, Walton came back to outscore, the Farmers, 14 to 8 and whittle their lead to 26 to 22.

Chapman sent the Bearcats ahead for the first time with a field goal. Ransler followed with another fielder and McClure ended the scoring with a charity toss.

Hamilton gained some consolation by winning the preliminary, 26 to 22, over the Walton reserves.

REA PROJECT APPROVED

The Boone county REA project including 377 signers on 11.1 miles was approved as an Association Extension project by the Owen County R.E.A. association Board of Directors on last Wednesday night, January 25th, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. The directors ordered an engineers map be made immediately and forms completed for submitting to the REA in Washington on allotment for line construction.

Rev. Will Smith, Chairman of the sign up committee, Edward Rogers, secretary-treasurer, Dolphia Sebree, James Pennington, Walter King Harold Rogers and Jack Dye attended the meeting with the Owen board of Directors and completed arrangements for acceptance of the project. It is hoped to get allotment approval from the Washington office at the earliest possible date.

Only forty six signers were left off the proposed line submitted the past week. These signers were too far from the main line or else were on spur lines that would not average 3 signers per mile. These signers still have an opportunity to get electricity on the original project provided they act immediately and secure enough signers to meet minimum requirements.

The engineer preparing the project map began work on Tuesday of this week. Those not on the proposed line and would like to know just how many more signers are required should contact the county agent's office in Burlington immediately. The engineer is expected to complete the map of the line in four days. All lines on the original project must be on the engineer's map.

Northern Ky. U. S. 25 Continue Drive For New Members

The Northern Kentucky U. S. 25 Association held its regular meeting in Walton Wednesday night, with representatives from all towns along the route represented. In the absence of John L. Vest, president, who was contained to his home with illness, Powers Conrad, Vice President from Walton acted as Chairman.

A membership drive was decided on during the discussion, to raise funs to use in the fight to retain the present route. Dues were set at $2.00 until July, and it is hoped that no further assessment will be necessary after that date. The secretary reports that a large number of memberships were received at that meeting.

Several motions were passed to clarify the situation, and to learn were the "acceptable route through Boone County" would be located, so as to give the membership something to work on. If the actual route can be learned from the State Highway Commisson, the club can attempt to secure the necessary right-of-way, but until they learn this, they can do nothing.

The Club voted to invite the Chief Locating Engineer to confer with the Committe Monday, and to go over the route as far as practical, to give them some idea of the extent of land needed to meet the requirments set out by Highway Director Cutler in a previous conference.

To secure a visibility of 1,500 feet 6 per cent grades, and 100 foot right-of-way through the country, will be a tremendous task, but members of the highway group were confident that they could be met.

Petitions have been already signed through Florence and an alternate route behind Florence. Other petitions will be prepared as soon as the survey will definitely locate the necessary route. The Kenton County Fiscal Court, at a meeting held Thursday afternoon, is considering an appeal to the Highway Department for a flood-free re-routing of U. S. 42 into Covington, and this may change the picture at Florence.

The Walton Advertiser, through its owner, James H. Jump, donated a page in a forthcoming issue, calling attention to Boone county property-owners of the seriousness of the proposed change and that any change would tend to increase the tax set-up. The Burlington Recorder, through Pete Steven, owner, offered to print advertising stickers for the club gratis the club to furnish the paper. These will be used to bring the route before the public, and to encourage the use of the present road.

Towns along the route will be asked to do their share in retaining the route in its present proximity.

The next meeting will be held on call of the President, and will probably be held at Crittenden next week. However, it is hoped that it will be able to have an engineer come to Boone couny and go over the the route with the group before that time.

The Survey party on the proposed route through Sanfordtown are still on the job, and have progressed several miles since the re-routing first came to the attention of U. S. 25 enthusiasts.

Tobacco Growers Ask Majority Rule

Tobacco growers met at several points in the Burley belt recently and adopted resolutions asking that another referendum on tobacco quotas be held and that a majority vote shall determine the issue instead of a two thirds majority as the law now provides. In order for the majority rule to be adopter it will be necessary for Congress to pass an amendment to the Crop Control act which requires a two-thirds majority in a referendum.

Many growers are of the opinion that it not fair to the majority to permit a small minority to defeat a crop-control program and thereby make it possible for the growers to produce a big surplus which would lower the price of the crop to all of the growers.

Final returns from the tobacco referendum showed that Kentucky burley growers, who produce the larger part of the total burley crop, returned a majority of approximately 74 per cent for quotas. While the majority was not so large as in the previous year the sentiment in Kentucky is still a large favor of quotas to prevent overproduction.

Sixty tobacco growers visited Washington last week and in a two day conference with Agricultural Department officials asked that legislative action to taken to "strengthen" the tobacco control program. The delegation appointed a committee of sixteen to discuss the proposed changes.

If a decided majority of the tobacco growers agree on a desirable program the Department of Agriculture will doubtless support such amendments to the AAA as will be agreeable to the growers themselves. There may be strong opposition to more legislation as there is much opposition to embracing all the principal crops in a control plan. But the tobacco control program has worked well and is easier to handle than the control of other large crops. The tobacco control plan may have worked some injustices and caused some dissatisfaction to some individual growers, although efforts seem to have been made to make the plan fair to every grower. Further changes may be desirable, but the program has certainly made it possible to prevent the production of great surpluses of burley and it has been very profitable to the burley growers as a whole.

It is to be hoped that Congress may take such action as the burley growers themselves may endorse for it would certainly be a tragedy for present growers to largely increase their acreages and for other farmers to extend the burley area into new territory. This would mean such a big crop as to make certain a low price and financial losses to the new producers as well as the present growers.

The Penalty of Sucess

It is likely that almost everyone is addicted to occassional 'day dreaming," and probably the most popular dream of idle dreamers is tht some day they will be successful business men that worries willbe minimized; that they can just sit back and take life easy while the business carries on.

There has, however, a rude awakening. The successful business man has many more problems than most people suspect; with success his worries have increased rather than decreased, and life for him is any thing but a bed of roses. The awakening comes to the President on the subject of statistics, questionaires and, in general, red ape.

In one year, the Central Statisticial Board reports to the Cheif Executive, individuals and business concerns in the United States had to answer 135,000,000 questionnaires for various Federal agencies. (One concern had to fill out 141,000 forms.)

Some sets of questions are even duplicated as many sample," the report states. "a very large proportion of all as four times, the Board found in its study. "For exemployers are called upon four separate times to report the individual earnings of a substantial number of their employees during a given time." And the act that an employer has answered the same questionnaire two or three times doesn't relieve him of the responsibility of answering a fourth one if some government agent asks for it.

If successful business men, then, have any time for day dreaming, it is likely that they dream of the day when being a success won't be such a complicated state

REA Projects Approved

Three-hundred and seventy-seven Boone County farmers through their acceptance of REA contracts, have made rural electrification in this county a reality, where a few months ago it was a dream. Farm homes will be brightened, farm labors lightened, and farm living conditions heightened, until the joys of living "down on the farm" will be equal to city life.

Much credit, however, must be given to the few men who worked day and night without compensation other than seeing a good, job well done. It is now hoped to get allotment approval from the Washington office at the earliest possible date, and the work can start soon.

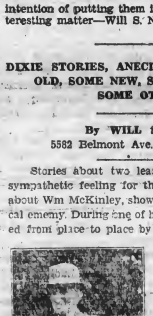
Newspapers In Kentucky

Recently the 00thanniversary of printing was observed, and in Kentucky the establishment of the first printing house was honored at Lexington. Printing and newspapers go hand-in-hand to mould and brief public opinion. The early settlers felt the need of a newspaper, and John Bradford, although not a printer himself, journeyed back to Pittsburgh and Philladelphia to purchase presses and type. On his return he established the Kentucke Gazette at Lexington, and the first newspaper in Kentucky soon made its appearance.

Today over 200 weekly and about 30 daily newspapers serve the citizens of our great Commonwealth. News of wars in foreign countries are flashed through headlines to an everygrowing public. Many of the weeklies are situated in towns similiar to Walton, and it is grateful to find the Walton Advertiser among the list of preferred newspapers.



A Live Wire Briar Hopper

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

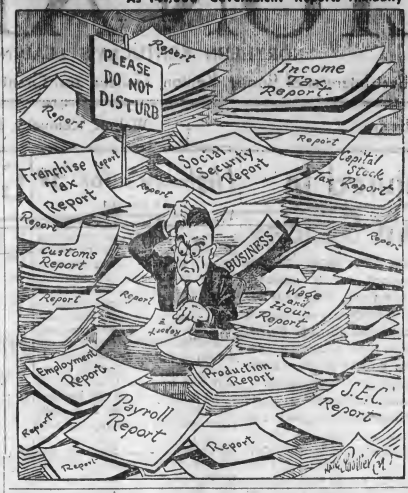
By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

Stories about two leading statesmen who had a sympathetic feeling for the other fellow. This one is about Wm McKinley, showing his kindness to a political emeny. During one of his campaigns he was followed from place to place by a reporter of the opposite political faith, who was described as being one of the most sarewd and persistent fellows, who are always at work, quick to see an opportunity and skilled in making the most of it.

While Mr. McKinley was annoyed by the misrepresentation to which he was almost daily subjected, he could not help admiring the skill with which he was assailed. His admiration too, was not unmixed with compassion for the reporter, who was poorly clad and had an annoying cough

One night Mr. McKinley took a closed cab carriage to a nerby town at which was billed to speak. The weather was raw and cold. He had not gone far when he heard a cough and knew the reporter was riding on top with the driver, exposed to the cold. He called to the driver to stop. He got out of the carriage and said to the young man. "You get down off the carriage seat." The reporter did as he was commanded, thinking the time had come for Mr. McKinley's rebuke.

Mr. McKinley, however, took off his coat and said: "Put this on and get into the carriage."



The reporter said: You want me to put this coat on and get in the carriage, when I have been following you everywhere you've been speaking and am on my way tonight to rip you and your speech to pieces if I can?"

"I know that" replied Mr. McKinley, "but put on this coat and get inside so you can do a good job."

The other story is about Senator Norris of Nebraska, given by the Clevelahd Leader. He was on a street car one morning going to church when there entered a white haired layd, a man about 20 and a well-dressed young lady. The conversation soon made it known the young man and his mother were from the country and were visiting Washington for the first time. The young man was leaving his mother who was to visit his sister for a while. When the man rose to say goodbye, the mother threw her arms around this neck with such a grip that he could not get loose, while she was giving him a motherly message. The conductor was waiting patiently with one hand on the bell cord. "Start the car," called out a man in a silk hat. "It is church time now; why can't people do this sort of thing before leaving home?"

This had gone far enough for Mr. Norris, who said, Young man take all the time you want to say goodbye to your mother. You do not known when you will say goodbye to her the last time. If any of these people are so worried and anxious over sins, that they must hurry to church, they might get down on their knees right here and pray."

News Item: Some Business Firms Must Fill Out as Many As 141,000 Government Reports Annually

by JAMES PRESTON

The Capital's unofficial side-line spectators are having their big "I-told- you-so" inning.

Weeks before Congress convened when words began to leak out that the strategists were going to wheel National defense into the legislative spotlight, these observers began making predictions on just why and what the defense program would embrace. It would include, they speculated, just about every pet project that could, by the farthest stretch of imagination, be pictured as a defense requirement.

First to be dropped gently into this classification was part of WPA. Other lesser lights have followed. Now, howver, the side-liners say they have detected the master stroke, to wit: Revival of two of the largest spending projects ever started, but which were dropped after a flurry of protests, charges and Congressional revolt.

One of the projects in the Florida ship canal, which would cost about 2000,000,000. The other is an experiment to develop power from the flow of the tides n Passamaquoddy Bay, Maine. This project called for an original expenditure of about $37,-000,000. About $7,000,00 was spent on each project before they were dropped, Congress sounded the death knell by refusing to appropriate further funds after engineers had called the Passamaquoddy project foolhardy and the Florida project impractical.

They are revive now as part of the national defense program and there is anything but enthusiasm in Army and Navy circules. The military services would rather see the money spent on necessities.

Another power project the one already completed, is in a delicate stuation incidentally. It is TVA, which is a finding it difficult to satisfy the comptroller General on a little matter of strawberries and cream. The Comptroller says he hasn't been able to get an intelligent answer as to why it was necessary to spend some six million dollars on strawberry patches, a freezing plant, a strawberry marketing boat, a dairy herd and other marketing boat, a dairy herd and other incidentals on the TVA project.

While this tussle goes on, a three-side scrap is on in another part of the Capital City. Participants are the Tresury and Justice Departments and the Intelligence Corps of the Army and Navy. The bone of contention is the business of rounding up spies.

The Department of Justice and the Treasury Secrets Service branch are at odds over which should conduct spy trails and thus get the public's nod of approval and the glory that goes wih it. Jealously has existed ever since the Department of Justice began publicizing its activities, in contrast to the silence of Treasury Secret Service agents.

On the other hand, the Intelligence Corps operatives would like to see all the fanfare of publicity that has marked recent spy trials stopped. It belives publicity hinders their work of trailing down spies. They contend the spies recently tried were "small fry" and that the publicity has caused the "big shots" to go into hiding until the "heat is off."

The city fathers in the National Capital the District of Columbia Commissioners) are learning a lesson that the rest of the nation already knows. They say they would be a lot happier thes edays if they just had a good big industry in Washington—an industry that is, other than politics.

Industrial plants have been discouraged—by law—from the District. In the first place industries could not meet stringent zoning limitations. In the second place the smoke of industry furnaces would dirty the white marble of government buildings.

Now, however, the Distrct Commissioners are struggling with a budget problem. Adding to the troubles are their very limited sources (government salaries are no taxable, the government owns a large portion of the land in the other property owners are already carrying a tax burden.) So, said the Commissioners last week, as they adopted a sales tax plan, "If we couldn't have to work out a sales tax plan."

Historic Hoaxes

By Elmo Scott Watson

"The Animals Are Loose!"

ON SUNDAY morning, November 9, 1874, a shiver of fear ran through New York City. Headlines in the New York Herald proclaimed that all of the animals in the Central Park zoo had escaped. The story, which ran to five full columns, said that 49 persons were dead, of whom 27 were identified, (their names were printed) and 200 were injured, 60 of them seriously.

The mayor had issued a warning for everybody to stay at home while brave citizens, including Chester A. Arthur, Samuel J. Tilden and other notables, who had killed most of the ravening beasts, rounded up the 12 animals still at large.

For several hours the city was in an uproar. Then somebody happened to read the last paragraph of the story. It as headed "The Moral of the Whole" and revealed that this was a gigantic hoax, the story of what MIGHT happen if better and stronger cages weren't provided for the animals in the zoo.

In fact, that was what Thomas B. Connery, the managing editor of the Herald, who ordered the story written, had hoped to accomplish with it. But he overshot the mark badly. He gave the whole city the jitters but the zoo didn't get stronger cages for its animals, at least, not until long after the excitement over his hoax had died down.

Fashions for 1939

"I can't go—I haven't a thing to wear!" Husbands often are compelled to hear wives make this complaint many times a year. It will not be fashionable for Kentucky's homemakers to say it after the Farm and Home Convention, because cloth specialists will discuss fashion trends the final day of the convention. SORGUM MOLASSES

As I write this article it is early fall, before frost but toward the close of the sorghum-making season. I have just eaten a breakfast of pancakes, butter and new molasses. The taste of the delicious syrup, made here from cane grown right in the heart of southern Kentucky, has brought up many a memory of a good-sized life, a life punctuated every fall with new sorghum molasses. In the absence of a major poet to sing the glories of sorghum, I must say a few words for a much neglected delicacy, as worthy of a place in poetry as maple sugar and cane sugar.

The sorghum cane is a rather large one as compared with that of sugar cane, at least in our country. For weeks now the odor of cooking sorghum juice has been abroad in the land. Out in the fields the mill has been grinding and the oven going. Skilled workers have been stripping the cane and hauling it to the mill. The patient man or woman who has converted the green juice into syrup is one of the uncrowned or unlaureled artists of our time. It is no accident that as unpromising a liquid as a sorghum juice becomes molasses; it takes skill that has been acquired from observation and experience.

While the workers at the mill and furnace toil through the day, it is usually at night that visitors come by to see the progress of the molasses-making. Unwary ones slip into the skimhole; all tate the newly-made syrup, using a split piece of can for a spoon. Gay young folks, with a lantern, come across the fields and watch the fascinating process. They never seem quite able to believe that such unpromising material can be glorified by a few hours of cooking.

But a new cycle begins when the syrup is made. Stored in kegs or barrels or buckets it forms a part of the farm resources for the winter; extra gallons find their way to city homes. All through the long winter we find molasses and butter and biscuits forming a major portion of many a breakfast and often of other meals. Some time or other meals. Some time or other I knew a name for the compound produced by stirring butter and molasses together, but I have forgotten it. Anyway, there are few better flavors in the world than this mixture has. At frequent intervals there will came molasses cakes or ginger bread and cider are eternally mated like turkey and cranberries and ham and eggs. Molasses cookies or cakes are stronger and more masculine than teacakes. I prefer the kind that are cut in long strips and baked in a big pan; this kind strikes a tender spot. Sometimes molasses has a way of sugaring in the barrel; then it is necessary to twist out quantities of it and reheat it with some water to make it syrupy again. When you are smoking the meat, nothing is better than chunks of this strong candy fished out through the bunghole of the molasses barrel. Then there is molasses candy, not so common, probably, as formerly, but still one of the delicacies. And popcorn candy where molasses and popcorn form a new unit, almost like a special kind of nut or fruit. From cane to candy is a cycle worthy of a whole poem of the quality of Whittier's "The Huskers" with its tribute to corn.

KY. LAGS IN HIGHWAYS

billion dollars have been expended by the Highway Department main federal higways, such as U. S. 31W, U. S.-25 and U. S. 60, serving the greatest demands of traffic have not yet been made modern and safe. It is to be hoped that with the aid of the Highway planning Survey and the towns and cities through which the highways run. The State and Federal government should a adopt a cons.ructive road program.

The proposed re-routing of U. S. 25 is a grave one indeed, which would deprive the merchants and businessmen of Northern Kentucky one of the nation's greatest industries. The re-organization of Northern Kentucky U. S. 25 Association, which at a meeting at Florence Jan. 25, elected delegates to go to both State and National Capitol to help to bring the better conditions to this part of a state and aid in boosting this great industry.

One of the greatest industries that dechoped in the United States in the present century is the tourist industry. It is the con-comitant of the automobile, which is a forty-five-year old fellow who has almost changed the entire course of the world.

The National Park Service estimates that tourist spent the enormous sum of $5,000,000,000 in the United States last year. Of this amount, New York State got the largest share, $846,000,000. California was second. Pennsylvania third and Ohio fourth. Kentucky was down in the $50,0000,000 class, but that is almost as much as its tobacco crop will bring this year. This comparison gives some idea as to the importance of the tourist business to the State.

But why should Kentucky, with its Mammouth Cave, Lincoln Memorial and beautiful Bluegrass country, get less than half as many tourist dollars as Indiana, and barely third as many as Missouri? There is nothing in historical lore in these States to compare with Lincoln's birthplace, a shrine of American democracy; nothing in natural wonders to compare with Mammouth Cave, and no pastoral scene equal to the Bluegrass country of Kentucky from May to October. The answer is found in the road systems of these states and of Kentucky. They meet the tourist at their State lines with ribbons of wide, safe, well-marked concrete, and our is a patchwork system of all kinds and types of roads, most of low type. If Kentucky would invest for two years about the funds that are necessary for woos, and spend $10,000,000 a year in the State up to the highest type, it would be repaid with compound interest by the tourist for many years to come.

Television At N. Y. World's Fair

Model of building where television will be introduced to the public at the New York World's Fair 1939.

RESPONDING to the rapidly mounting interest in the advent of public television, which is expected to coincide with the opening April 30 of the New York World's Fair 1939, the Radio Corporation of America has announced a decision to almost completely revise its exhibition plans at the Fair in order to increase the scope and effectiveness of the television presentation.

Original plans for the RCA exhibit building at the Fair, drawn up more than a year ago, provided six ground-floor rooms where television was to be viewed under conditions simulating those of the home. Because these accommodations are now looked upon as inadequate, it has been decided to redesign the ground floor arrangement to greatly enhance the utility of the available space. With architects working in collaboration with radio engineers, a style of television presentation wholly different from and far more comprehensive than the one at first contemplated is expected to evolve.

While detailed information about the new plans will not be available for several weeks, it is known now that two of the original viewing rooms will be retained for the purpose of presenting the Television Living Room of Today and the Radio Living Room of Tomorrow. The television living room will feature the type of home furnishing in common use today, but centering around a television receiver of the kind that will be available this Spring. The Radio Living Room of Tomorrow, decorated with the most advanced styles in modern furniture, will present in one cabinet means for receiving sound broadcasting, television, facsimile broadcasting, and for phonographic recording and phonographic record playing. This idea is from five to ten years in advance of present-day practicalities.

The RCA exhibit building, which has just been completed, is shaped like a huge radio tube affixed to a base and the whole lying on its side. Surrounding three sides of the building are beautifully landscaped gardens, where mobile television units, a motor yacht equipped with radio devices for communication and safety at sea, and a 250-foot radio antenna tower will be exhibited.

Woman Ignores Mule And Goes to Hospital

VISALIA, CALIF.—The relative degree of a mule's resistance to an automobile is still a disputed question here. The test was made when Charles Joyner and Miss Velma Cranfield, driving along a highway, encountered one which refused to budge.

Joyner ignored the mule, with the result Miss Canfield went to a hospital, the car to a repair shop.

'JEKYLL-HYDE' IS GIVEN PRISON TERM

Doctor Goes to Leavenworth On Narcotics Charge.

COVINGTON, KY.—Dr. Henry Logan Gragg, gray-haired country doctor, who admitted the role of a "Jekyll and Hyde," now is serving a five-year sentence at Leavenworth, Kan.

The 53-year-old physician, who attended child births almost daily among the poor of Boyle county, pleaded guilty in the federal court here to charges of supplying morphine to a small-time narcotics ring whose customers mostly comprised young men in their twenties.

Doctor Gragg was sentenced to five years each on two counts charging sale of narcotics and to two years on a third charge of conspiracy. The sentences are to be served concurrently.

Federal narcotics agents' records showed that the country doctor received more than 9,000 half-grains of morphine this year—more than a regular physician would use in over 150 years of legal practice.

In passing sentence, Judge H. Church Ford said he was taking into consideration the fact that Doctor Gragg virtually donated his services to his impoverished patients. It was indicated that the country doctor might have sold the narcotics to compensate for unpaid bills of his patients.

Five of six defendants sentenced with Doctor Gragg, four of them under 30, were given terms ranging from two to five years at the federal narcotics farm in Lexington, Ky. They admitted they were drug addicts. The sixth prisoner was sentenced to the federal prison for two years.

The court session completed a lengthy federal investigation that ended in the seven arrests in September. The arraignment proceedings took place before the United States commissioner in Lexington.

Bird-Eating Spider Is Discovered in Australia

MELBOURNE, VIC.—This country of strange animals, birds and insects has discovered a new freak in spiders that eat birds.

John Clark, museum entomologist, swears to the discovery and says he found the legs of a newly killed young turkey half-way down the hole occupied by one of these monster spiders, which are Mygales. The largest recorded specimen was about nine inches in leg span, with a body as large as a bantam's egg.

Another naturalist, Mr. R. Steed, states that in western and inland Australia there are dry salt lakes, on one of which he saw what he thought to be a large rat running and disappearing into its hole. He found it was an enormous spider, which sat back and showed fight.

Help! Snake Authority Has Rattler as Caller

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—An authority on reptiles which roamed the earth millions of years ago, Dr. Robert Karpinski, Indiana State Teachers college geologist, does not consider himself an expert on the Twentieth century rattlesnake variety.

But when he heard the sound of a snake in a hall outside his laboratory last night, he summoned John Helm, night watchman. Together they disposed of the four-foot rattler after a thrilling battle. The snake had escaped from a wire cage in the zoology laboratory.

Kitten Gives Alarm As Thief Cuts Wash Line

NEW ORLEANS.—Harpo, six-month-old Persian kitten, basked in the limelight here, after saving the family wash from a thief.

The kitten was tied to the clothesline when the thief entered the yard, cut the line and started off with the Monday wash.

Happy ran into the house, meowed loudly and jumped up and down to attract attention. The maid understood, called police and the thief was caught.

'Twas a Bum Steer

BELVIDERE, ILL.—One of Walter Gray's steers tried to leap a fence and alighted astride it. Gray grabbed the steer's tail and attempted to pull the animal off. The fence and steer collapsed on Walter and broke his leg.

Clears Conscience

ST. CATHERINES, ONT.—A solid silver communion service, stolen from St. Thomas' church in the night, was returned the next night by the conscience-stricken thief.

DAVIS CHEVROLET CO.
FIRESTONE TIRES

Introduced to the motoring public a few weeks ago, the new Firestone Champion Tire, a product of years of speedway experience and laboratory research, has already won the recognition of American Davis, Manager of the Davis Chevrolet motorists as one of the truly great of the motor car, according to Cecil safety contributions in the history rolet, local Firestone dealers.

Although smartly streamlined and ultra-modern in appearance, with a revolutionary new Gear Grip tread pattern, most of the major structural advantages of the new Firestone Champion Tire are not outwardly apparent", explains Mr. Davis. "Headlining these new structural features is a revolutionary new type of cor called "Saftey Lock". It is constructed of fine quality cotton fibre, tightly twisted by a new process into strands of high tensile strength. Treated by the famous Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping, the 'Safety Lock' cord is still further strengthened and each fibre is locked in every cord, each cord is locked in every play and the plies are locked together to form the body of the tire. The result is much stronger tire body that provides the utmost in blowout protection. In addition, the new Gear Grip tread is inseparably locked to the Safte-Lock cord body.

Because of the stronger cord body, tread thickness has been increased without danger of separation. This feature, adied by the use of a new and tougher tread stock provides a substantial increase in non-skid mileage. The Gear Grip tread of the new Firestone Champion Tire is distinguished by a "gear toothed" design and has six circumferential tread bars. Each tread bar has 676 sharp-edged, angled shoulders of safety to counteract skid tendency in any direction. Every revolution of the new Gear Grip tread brings a total of 3,456 of these sharp-engled edges in contact with the highway, during one complete revolution of the wheels.

"Even after thousands of miles of tread wear, Firestone Champion Tires retain their superior non-skid qualities, insuring maximum protection against skidding. The scientific design of the Gear Grip Tread, also precludes rhythmic contact of non skid elements with the road surface and, consequently, provides a new degree of silent operation. Road noise even when traveling over worn brick pavement is negligible."

HOT OFF FIFTH AVENUE

Despite January blasts costume jewelry designers already are thinking terms of spring Lapel ornaments suggestive of the year's gayest season are appearing in Fifth Avenue shops, one of the most amusing being a bird's nest of brown enamel perched on a green enameled branch, with a wee occupant fashioned of rhinestones in the center of the nest. Another appropriate conception for spring is a pin formed like a spray of apple blossoms with two love birds perched on a branch.

SUGGESTIONS FOR FILING SOCICAL SECURIETY

Confusion still exists among many workers who apply for Social Security numbers, according to Frank B. Decker, Jr., manager of the Covington, Kentucky office of this Federal agency.

Employes could save time for themselves, their employers, and our office staff if they would be more careful in filling out their applications for account numbers," Mr. Decker suggested.

"Out of a total of 7,972 applications for original account numbers received by the Covington office during the last 12 months, 874 of the appplications received by mail had to be returned for corrections."

The most frequent errors he listed in three groups: Ages not in agreement with dates of births; initials given instead of full names, and married names of mothers listed instead of the maiden names. During the last 9 months, corrections and name changes were handled by the office here.

Fewer than one-seventh of one per cent of workers who have social security numbers have applied for statements showing the wages credited to the accounts of these individuals during 1937 according to Frank B. Decker, Jr., manager of the Social Security Board's field office in Covington, Kentucky.

"Our office now has post cards which workers may use to get statements of credits on the wage records of these individuals for 1937," Mr. Decker declared. "But our records show that fewer than 50,000 of the 36,714,00 worker for whom accounts had been established up to last June had asked for wage information.

"In only a few cases, according to reports from Washington, has the Bureau received complaints from workers who believed that the wages credited to their accounts were less than they should be. In those few instance when a discrepancy is indicated, the Bureau immediately begin a search, usually through the field office for the reported missing wage items."

Mr. Decker added that during 1938, employers throughout the country, according to information received from Washington, not only filed their wage information reports more promptly than they did in 1937, but also used much more care in identifying the persons to whom wages were paid. "During the first year," he said, " a considerable number of wage information reports filed by employers contained wage items which, because of lack of identifying information, could not be posted immediately to the proper accounts. These difficulties were due in the main to the fact that some employes had failed to furnish their employers with their account number," Mr. Decker said.

EXPOSED TOBACCO STALK LOSE MUCH FERTILIZER VALUE

Tobacco stalks thrown out into the weather when stripping is done lost much of their fertilizer value, since the nitrogen and potash in them are partly soluble in water.

The Kentucky College of Agriculture says that a ton of stalks from Burley tobacco contains about 60 pounds of nitrogen and 65 pounds of potash, and a ton of stalks from dark tobacco about 70 pounds of nitrogen and 80 pounds of potash. At 15 cents a pound for nitrogen and five cent a pound for potash, a ton of Burley stalks is worth $12.25 and a ton of dark tobacco stalks $14.50 when used as fertilizer.

If stalks cannot be kept inside, they should be scattered on the land as soon as possible afterst ripping. If they can be sheltered from the rain, it is better to hold them until early spring. It is not advisable to use stalks, stems or leaf as a fertilizer for tobacco because of the danger of transmitting disease.

TO REVITALIZE PLANTS

Potted plants whose leaves take on an unhealthy yellowish tinge during the winter as result of steam heat usually respond happily to a dose of tea. When watering the plants add a portion of good strong tea to the watering pot. A mixture of half ea and half water is good.

SPORTSMEN OF KY. SUCCESSFUL SEASON

With a successful quail-hunting season behind them, the sportsmen are turning to the future and making preparations for the open season next November.

That season is a number of months off and many things can happen to either make it a successful one or make it very unsuccessful.

At present the quail are not getting any too much food and if snow remains on the ground any length of time and forms a hard crust or if sleet falls on top of a snow and forms a surface on all tree limbs, shrubs and grain, the birds are helpless as they cannot penetrate this surface to get their food and as a reason they starve.

Quail do not freeze to death when they have food, as their body temperature is so high that it protects them in almost any kind of weather, but in order to keep up this body temperature they must have food. Starvation will lower this body temperature to where they will fall victim to freezing. This can be prevented if sportsmen will feed the birds when snow and sleet locks them out from their food supply.

Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish makes the following suggestion to sportsmen who would aid in the feeding of quail:

"If the location of a covey of birds is not known, bird dogs may be used to find their feeding ground. After the birds are located, clean off a spot of ground and place either planks or flat rocks on the exposed area and scatter any sort of small grain, along with some sand to help in digestion, on the improvised table. The birds will be able to pick up most of the grain without losing very much of it in the snow."

If the Sportsmen Landowners and Farmers will cooperate with the Division of Game and Fish in the feeding and caring for the Bob White, the next hunting season will be greatly benefited.

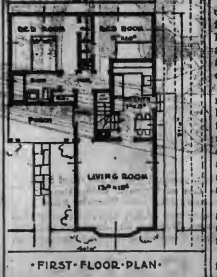
This Honey of a Small House Is a Work-Saver

What makes a GOOD house?

A good house is distinguished by four qualities.

1. It should be efficiently planned. 2. It should be attractively composed. 3. It should anticipate the present and future needs of the family that will occupy it, and 4. It should be well built.



This small house—a one story house with two story privacy—exemplifies all four qualities. It was designed by Randolph Evans, the well-known small house architect and was selected by the Monthly Small House Club at 257 East 45th Street, New York, as its house of the month.

And this is why the Club believes it to be a GOOD house:

1. It is efficiently planned. Both bedrooms and bath can be reached from the entry without passing through the living room. If necessary, they can be completely shut off from the rest of the house to provide "second story privacy."

Every major room has cross ventilation—windows on two or more walls that flood the house with sunlight and air.

2. It is attractively composed. Mr. Evans has pulled out the living room wing and added an engaging bay window to give this house a sprawling impressiveness. The roof is low-pitched and covered with mineral-surfaced, thick-butt asphalt shingles. He has used a wide projecting cornice to give a deep shadow line at the eaves, and added a husky chimney with none of the spindly characteristics of many small house chimneys.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

3. It anticipates the needs of its occupants. Need to accomodate a family of three, perhaps four, the house can be enlarged easily by adding bedrooms above the first floor, to be reached by stairs built above the present cellar stairs.

It is designed to require a minimum of housekeeping. A compact kitchen is within easy reach of the front door, bedrooms, and dining space in the living room. Ample closets will hold most essentials and a partial cellar has space for screens, awnings and such accessories.

4. It is well-built. Asbestos shingles on the side walls and asphalt shingles on the roof provide fire-resistance and unfading color.

The house is fully insulated with fireproof mineral wool in side walls and above the ceiling. Mineral wool bats, wall-thick, are fitted between the side wall studs and ceiling joists to provide permanent protection against both winter cold and summer heat. Screened vents under the eaves permit ventilation of the attic space.

Withal it is a low-cost house. It can be built in most parts of the country for $3,500, and it will fit on a 40 foot lot.

PATIENT TELLS OF HER FEELINGS AS HER MIND RETURNS

Quick Results Are Obtained By Use of Injections Of Metrazol.

MERIDIAN, MISS. — Shocked from insanity, a woman released from the East Mississippi state hospital here recalls with clarity the delusions she felt in that gray world.

The woman who prefers to remain anonymous, is one of 15 persons believed cured by the "shock treatment." It consists of convulsions and a 55-second coma induced by injections of Metrazol, a comparatively new discovery.

The 11 women and four men thus far released are part of a group of 62 treated. One of them had been insane for 20 years. Others of the group may be released soon. Only two failed to react at all, and only seven responded slightly. No deaths from the treatment have occurred, physicians said.

Looking back, the woman remembers that it was after the third injection of Metrazol that she began to recognize members of her family. Then she said she realized for the first time that she had been insane. She realized her position and saw her companions as they were. She also knew the reality of insanity and the possibility of her being cured.

Feared Poison Food.

This woman remembers refusing to eat anything not wrapped in cellophane for fear of being poisoned. At one time she said she thought if anybody touched her they would die.

Describing the treatment by Metrazol injections, she said:

"The first time I thought they were killing me, that they were planning to put me out of my misery. I hoped I would die. But after the third shot I understood what they were doing and I was glad. I prayed to live."

Great care must be used in its administration of the shock treatment, according to Dr. William J. Cavanaugh, staff physician and psychiatrist. The patient must not have any organic disease, acute infection or heart trouble which would make the shock too dangerous.

Dr. R. L. Rhymes, staff physician and surgeon, told of the thorough physical examination and correction of defects by surgery, the building up by diet, hydrotherapy and electrotherapy given patients before they are given the treatment.

Other Treatments Used.

"We are using the treatment, which is, of course, only one of the forms of treatment in this hospital, with encouraging results with the schizophrenic patients," Supt. John S. Hickman said.

This group includes the "split personality" class. The treatment has also proved effective in treatment of nearly all forms of insanity except those having organic causes or in which the brain tissues are injured or destroyed, Doctor Hickman said.

Describing the treatment, an educated patient, improving under the series of shock but still undergoing the Metrazol treatment, said:

"It's indescribable.

"I imagine a deadly shock of electricity is like it. It is like being stifled. It goes up my arm and then around my heart and in my chest. Then I lose consciousness. It knocks me out completely. It kills me. That's what it does. I can feel my eyes jerk and my jaws pound and that's all I know.

"When it is over, I sleep awhile and when I wake up I can't remember anything. Gradually it comes back and I begin to think of the time of the shot until I woke up."

Rugged Individualist Is Fined by English Court

BOURNEMOUTH, ENGLAND—Appeasement has cost Abraham Richard Hewitt, local hardware merchant, $82.50.

Hewitt deals in metal garbage cans, but for his own home he used a wooden box, thus violating a local ordinance. For 20 minutes the magistrate tried to persuade Hewitt to reconsider his firm stand and use a metal garbage can.

"Don't you ever change your mind?" the magistrate asked of Hewitt.

"No, sir," he replied. "My name is not Chamberlain. You can't Hitlerize me!"

As this was the third time that Hewitt was summoned for the same offense, he was ordered to pay $15.25 on the spot and $1 for each day he had violated the law.

MARTIN MAY RESIGN AS STATE TAX HEAD

Itwa s reported at Frankfort Wednesday that Dr. James Martin soon will retire as head of the Tax Commission and return to his duties at the University of Kentucky, and that Tate Hageman of Crescent Springs will be placed in charge of the distilled spirits department as Distilled Spirit Commissioner. It was rumored that when Dr. Martin resigns, it will pave the way for the placing of Hegeman in complete charge of the Alcoholic Divition. It is known that the Kenton County leader is one of Governor Chandler's intimate friends and that the Governor strongly desires that Hageman be given supervision over the distilled spirits department. It is believed Dr. Martin, who has made such a capable record at the head of the tax department, will resume his duties at the next semester at the university.

There have been rumors in circulation for some time that Hageman would be named Distilled Spirits Commissioner just as soon as Dr. Martin decided to abandon his duties in Frankfort and to return to the university, from which institution he was "borrowed" by the Governor to supervise the tax department.

FOLSOM

There was a gentle, but steady rain fall through out the vicinity Sunday, and Sunday night. The most rain we have had for some time. I know this rain fall was much appreciated by many.

Most of the farmers have disposed of their tobacco, around here and are contemplating their nineteen and thirty-nine crop.

We want to take this opprotunity to welcome the new neighbors which have moved into our community, and say good bye to those that have moved away. Wishing all a prosperous year.

The Rural electric, which has been placed into so many farm homes, is deeply appreciated. No home should be without this wonderful service. It not only makes makes home better, but happier. It will give to ladies that want more adequate conveniences, which most farmer women as well as men, need so badly.

Vivian Beach, as been very sick, and we wish her a speedily recovery. Mrs. Jeff Beach is some better, she has suffered from a severe attack of Quincy. Since Chas. Pettit, former Judge of Grant County is from Folsom, we want to express our sincere sympathy to him in his sickness, and wish for him to be able to battle his ills, in the courageous manner in which he handled his official duties.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Sipple, entertained Friday night, a number of friends in honor oftheir youngest daughters sixteenth birthday. Those present were Mr. J. T. Hall, Hobert Franks, Kenneth Vinlandingham, Mary Kemper, Anna Rae Pipes Eugene Lawrence, Marcella Lawrence, Virgina Lee Pettit, Chester Delf Virgil Hutton.

LOUISVILLE AUTO CLUB EXPLAIN TRAFIC CONDITIONS

Eighty-five hundred fewer persons killed in traffic is big news as the year 1938 draws to a cole. While the figures used are only approximate records available this far they indicate that there is something like a 20 per cent reduction.

That something can be done is an encouraging fact which is heartening to the Louisville Automobile Club and similar organizations every where that have given liberally of their time and resources towards reducing traffic hazards and saving human lives.

The Louisville picture is still better as a reduction of 50 per cent in traffic fatalities up to this time of the year is shown placing the city right near the top in its population group from 250 to place last year which is based on a computed record over a period of three years.

Traffic records, however, are insecure. Any relaxation of enforcement or eduction is immediately reflected in tragic results. The encouraging fact about Louisville's record is that it has been progressively good. With 71 persons killed in 1936, there were only 63 killed in 1937 and, as the Bulletin goes to press on December 10th here have been only 31 fatalities thus far for the year 1938.

Louisville is going after the safety record for the nation. Day after day this month has passed upti 17 days were gained without another death.

Louisville's efficient Traffic Bureau is right on its toes with strict enforcement and wholehearted support of the press and radio stations in public appeal and educational talks.

In child education the School Boy Patrols play an important part in safety and the acquirement of good safety habits. It is regrettable that the records this year show 6 child fatalities which is no improvement over the year 1934 when there was the same number, with 82 fatalities that year as a total.

School Boy Patrols are nod being established throughout the state.

THE opportunity to be of service to our customers and their friends is always welcomed by

New Tobacco Warehouse For Covington Planned By Business Men

Local Man One of Three Behind the Movement

Construction of another large loose-leaf tobacco warehouse in Covington is being considered by a group of Northern Kentucky, Southern Indiana, and Ohio men, it was learned Tuesday. Plans for the warehouse are expected to materialize at a meeting early in April.

The admission that a warehouse approximately the size of the Kenton Loose-Leaf Warehouse, Covington, destroyed by the flood in by Boyd F. Elliott, Crittenden, Ky., merchant.

V. P. Kerns, Walton, formerly interested in the Tri-State Warehouse, Second and Johnson Streets, Covington, destroyed by the flood in 1937, E. E. Bide, Harrison Ohio and others are said to be interested in the proposed new warehouse.

It was pointed out that the Covington tobacco market is large enough to support two warehouses and that delay now encountered in unloading an disposing of tobacco in one house might be remeided.

Elliott and Biddel have been commissioned to look for a site for the proposed new warehouse. This site, Elliott said, would be out of the flood area, but within the corporation limits. A report on the site will be made at the April meeting.

The amount at which the new warehouse company would be capitalized has not been determined, but it will be a stock company, Elliott eclared.

Afterthoughts

By George

After an absence of several months, this column is again going to try and maybe brighten up your outlook on several things and to have a little condensed news from time to time.

-o o o-

The Ohio river i sagain on the front page as it has overflow its banks. All up and down the Ohio Valley and its tributaries the melting snow and rains have swollen the various valleys of the country. We have ever lived in one of these flooded sections of the country but have read quite a bit about them, and our hearts goes out to these suffering people.

There will not be the danger of disease and unpreparedness as was during the 1937 flood. The different agencies that adminstered relief to these stricken areas have been drawn closer together, and have a fine organization that can work to aid the suffering with greatest efficiency.

-o o o-

Wednesday brought with it a very fine warm sun shiny day—it was quite welcome to this person as the sight of the snow and the howling of the wind had juist about gotten us down. We bet that some of you feel the some way about it.

-o o o-

In summing up these road discussions, we cannot help but that something be done real soon. The weather that we have had lately of rain and melting snow really plays havoc with any repairs that are made. While talking to one of the maintenance crew the other day he said that every Monday morning it was patch holes here and there. Then again following the weekends, the same things would happen. It seems that the money used in maintainence could be saved if the new project started soon.

-o o o-

A very fine organization has been recently formed that is composed of musical talent in and around Walton for the purpose of a choral group.

-o o o-

With all the talent here it seems to be avery fine move and it will also be worth while to listen to and you will be having this group soon.

-o o o-

Now that we are in the month of February, which is not only the shortest months of the year, but also the time when your pick up your newspaper and, after glancing through it, you notice that it won't be long before the baseball fans will be in their glory as the spring training season is almost upon us. Among the fans you will hear such discussions as this— will "Dizzy" Dean make a comeback this year for the Cubs? Are looked last wear and will they be the Cincinnati Reds as good as they in the running for the pennant? Will the Pittsburgh Pirates pull the folding act again this year and numerous other questions that you will hear where ever the rabid fan congregate.

George Burns of the Burns and Allen Comedy team after pleading guilty to a smuggling charge, drew suspended sentence of one year and a day. He was fined $8,000, so maybe the officials figured that a comedian that could pay that amount did not have any business being a guest of "Uncle Sam."

-o o o-

With this little tickler we will close our enlightening column—

Boogy—I'm not myself litely.

Woogy—Congratulations. —Pathfinder.—

The officers of The Boone County National Farm Loan Association have issued invitations to all Federal Land Bank Commissioner borrowers to attend the annual meeting to be held in the High school auditorium at Burlington, Ky., February 18, 1939 at 9:30 a. m slow time with a free lunch served in the basement of the school building by the ladies of the Parent Teacher Association.

In addition to the election of a Director for three years and reports on the activities of the Association for the past year, avery interesting program has been arranged.

The Association also services 122 Land Bank Commissioner loans totaling $258,900.00 Most of these loans are in Boone County with a few loans made several years ago in Kenton County.

This is one of 120 similar associations in Kentucky through which members obtain long-term farm mortgage loans from the Federal Land Bank of Louisville, with the cooperative association endorsing each loan.

The Boone County Association has teh honor of being among the class One associations of the state, which is due to a large extent to the close attention to the affairs of the association by its officers, and to the debt paying ability of farmers carrying these loans. Walton-Verona Cops Conference Title With Win Over Burlington

For the Second Time in Years the Bearcats Are Confrence Winners

With the unimpressive win over Burlington Saturday night the Walton-Verona Bearcats clinched the Boone County Conference title for the second time inthree years. Last year the Walton-Verona hoopsters shared the honor of co-champions with the Hebron aggregation. So far in conference play this season Shieldmen have not dropped a conference. Whether or not they will keep this slate clean remains to be seen.

On Friday night the locals were host to the Florence Knights, they have been coming along in fine shape this season and in a high scoring affair, won 42 to 41. McClure was high point man for both sides dropping through thirteen markers and two charity tosses that was good for 28 points. fl

The local quintet will journey to Erlanger, Friday to meet the strong Jauggernaut. After this game there will be but three more games for the bearcats before the District Tournament and all of these are away from home.

Ky. Congress of Parents and Teachers

Older and wiser with its experience of 42 years, the National Congress of Parent and Teachers will celebrate its 42nd birthday on Founders Day, February 17. Founders Day is set aside each year as a commemorative day—to honor the founders, to review the achievements of the national organization, its state branches and local units, and to deepen the appreciation of the significance and importance of the movement.

Organized in 1897 as the National Congress of Mothers the National Congress of Parents and Teachers has grown phenomenally in size and in breadth of interest. Today it has a membership of over two and one-quarter millions, in 27,00 local parent-teacher associations.

As the states join in celebrating the birthday, the aims, objectives, and ideals of the organization will be re-emphasized; tribute will be paid to the Congress Founders, Mrs. Alice M. Birney and Mrs. Phoebe a Hearst; tribute will be paid to national, state and local leaders. It will be an occasion for arousing new interest in the national and state program; an occassion for community gatherings in the interest of childhood and youth; and an opportunity will be given to share in the extension of the movemen thru the contribution of service and financial support.

The Kentucky Congress continues to keep pace with the other states in the nation in its efforts to promote a worthwhile congress program, and its influence is being felt in almost every phase of education, welfare an dgeneral community betterment. Some of the activities education, parent education, school education, youth activities library service home making, home education, rural service adequate legislation and Summer Round Up of the children.

A steady increase in membership is noted year after year in the Kentucky Congress—in 1937 there were 32,000 members, in 1938 there were 35,000 and the goal for 1939 is 38,-000. The campaign for membership will continue until every parent and every teacher in the state of Kentucky has had an opportunity to enroll and participate in the "Service of this nation wide Congress of Parents and Teachers."

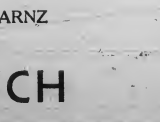
Kenton County Schools Reopen Monday

Because there still are 16 scarlet fever cases among students of the affected schools, the Kenton county Board of Education decided Monday night not reopen Simon Kenton High School or Visalia, Independence and Piner elimentary schools until Monday.

The schools were closed last Thursday and plans had been made to reopen them Wednesday.



Another factor considered by the Board, Superintendent J. A. Caywood said, was the fact that flood waters have blocked roads in the Visalia area and were thretening the Bromley and other districts.

SOCIAL SECURITY MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

The Vice President laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

Four years ago I sent to the newly convented Congress a message transmitting a report of the Committee on Economic Security. In that message I urged that Congress consider the enactment into law of the program of protection for our people outlined in that report. The Congress acted upon that recommendation and today we have the Social Security Act in effect thruout the length and breadt hof our country.

This act amply provided its essential soundness.

More than two and one- half million needy old people, needy blind persons, and dependent children are now receiving systematic an humane assistance to the extent of a half billion dollars a year.

Three and half million unemployed persons have received out-of-work benefits amounting to $400,000,000 during the last year.

A Federal old age insurance system, has been organized an dunder it there have been set up individual accounts covering 42,500,000 persons, who may be likened to the policyholders of a private insurance company.

In addition there are the splendid accomplishments in the field of public health, vocational rehabilitation, maternal and child welfare, an drelted services made possible by the Social Security Act.

We have a right to be proud of the progress we have made in the short time the Social Security Act has been in operation. However, we would be derelict in our responsibility if we did not take advantage of experience we have accumulated to strengthen and extend its provisions.

Therefore I recommend that the States be required, as a condition for the receipt of Federal funds, to establish and maintain a merit system for the selection of personnel. Such a requirement would represent a protection to the States and citizens thereof rather than an encroachment by the Federal Government, since it would automatically promote efficiency and eliminate the necessity for minute Federal scrutiny of State operations.

I cannot too strongly urge the disdom of building upon the principles contained in the present Social Security Act in affording greater protection to uor people rather than turning to untried and demonstrably unsound panaceas. As I stated in my message four years ago: "It is overwhelmingly important to avoid any danger of permanently discrediting the sound and necessary policy of Federal legislation for economic security by attempting to apply it on too ambitious a scale before actual experience has provided guidance for the permanently safe direction of such efforts. The place of such a fundamental in our future civilization is too precious to be jeopardized now by extravagant action."

We shall make the most orderly progress if we look upon social security as a development toward a goal rather than a finished product. We shall make the most lating progress if we recognize that social security can furnish only a base upon which each one of our citizens may build his individual security through his own individual efforts.

FEBRUARY TIME TO DIG STRAWBERRIES

It is considered best to dig strawberry plants before March 1, in order that the crawberer may not have time to lay eggs on plants. The best time to set plants in Kentucky is March, as cool, cloudy weather permits good growth before hot weather. Only healthy stock formed from runners the previous season should be used, says a statement from the horticultural department from University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

BAPTIST TRAINING UNION MAKE PLANS FOR 1939

The Baptist Training Union forces of Kentucky met at Campsbellsville, Friday and Saturday, February 3-4 for the fourth state meeting of associational officers and workers since January 1, 1936. This meeting will be held to review progress that has been made in the Five Year Promotianal Program of Baptist Training Union forces and to make plans for 1939, which is the fourth year of the Five Year Program. Kentucky Baptists Training Union forces and to make plans for 1939, which is the fourth year of the Five Year Program. Kentucky Baptists are undertaking to establish a graded Training Union in every Baptist church in the state. They are depending on the associational officers for this service.

The program of the conference will start at 10:00 o'clock on Friday morning, February 3, and close at noon on Saturday, February 4. Some of the speakers and conference leaders who will appear on the program are as follows: Dr. T. L. Holcomb, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Lamblin, W. A. Harrell, Clay I. Hudson, C. Aubrey Hearn, Miss Elaine Coleman and B. B. McKinney, all of the Baptist Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tennessee; Mrs. Hattie Petts Rogers, Knoxville, Tennessee; Mrs. Aurora Shumate, Birmingham, Alabama; Dr. J. W. Black, General Secretary and Treasurer Executive Board of State Missions, Louisville and Byron C. S. De Jernette, state Training Union Secretary ,Louisville.

During 1938 Southern Baptists issued 243,808 Study Course awards through the Baptist Training Union Department. There were more than four thousand new organizations reported during the year and the increase in enrollment was larger than during any previous year.

This record was made possible by the volunteer work of the Training Associational Officers in each state in the Southern Baptist Convention. Kentucky has 80 associations. It is expected that the officers from each association will attend the meeting in Campbellsville, February 3-4. These officers include director, pastor-advisor, associate director, secretary-treasurer, christer, pianist, group directors, and Story Hour, Junior, Intermeriate, Senior, and Adult department leaders.

The Baptist Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention is offering to finance the transportation expenses of one, two, or three cars bringing associational officers from each association at the rate of two cents per mile for round trip for each car.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE CHECKS ARE BEING MAILED

Unemployment Insurance is now an actual and going institution in Kentucky.

For the past four or five days small unusual sized envelopes have been traveling through the mails destined for almost every county and community in the state.

They are carrying checks from the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission to unemployed workers covered under the state's unemployment insurance law.

They are tangible evidence that Kentucky has a real weapon with which to combat unemployment and protect her workers during times of business inactivity and depression.

When the last mail left Frankfort Saturday, February 4, more than 5,000 of these checks were in the mails addressed to unemployed Kentucky workers qualified and eligible under the law to receive unemployment insurance benefits.

The smallest payment made by any of these checks will be $4, the largest $15, the maximum amount any worker can receive in any one week. Te average for the group of checks was $8.74. The total amount represented by the approximate 5,000 checks was in excess of $44,000.

The first benefit check came off the Commission's high powered ceck writing machine in its Frankfort offices Wednesday morning, February 1. It was payable to Malcolm Hollis, 29, of 426 West Liberty Street, Louisville. Hollis a carpenter has been unemployed since early in November, 1938. The amount of the check payable to Hollis was for $14.50 almost the limit allowed under the law.

Fourteen more such checks, each for $14.50 will be paid each week to Hollis if a job isn't located for him in the meantime by the Kentucky State Employment Service.

Hollis personally received his first check and the first check issued by the Commission. It was handed to him by Governor A. B. Chandler, who came to the Commission offices to participate in the ceremonies which marked the issuance of the first benefit check to be paid under the Kentucky law.

Grouped about the governor as he gave Hollis his check were V. E. Barnes, chairman and executive director of the commission; John C. C. Mayo, of Ashland and Omer C. Stubbs of Covington, associate directors of the commission; Wm. H. Fraysure director of the Kentucky State Employment Service and John C. Buckingham, state treasurer and also treasurer of the commission.

"It is a sincere pleasure for me to give you this check" the governor said" for it represents insurance which you and your employer created when you had a job."

"This insurance plan was established to aid you during the time when you might be witout work by you as a worker and by your employer. It represents contributions made by employers and has not been supplemented by funds from any other source.

"It is actually a dividend on an insurance policy on a policy you create when you began to make contributions from the wages you earned while you were employed. the law which made possible this insurance plan is a combination of federal and state legislation. This legislation I personally believe is among the most forward looking that has been enacted in many years.

"I am happy that it was during my administration as governor that Kentucky established such an agency as the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission and made unemployment insurance possible" the governor concluded.

'It sure helps a lot to get this check for 14.50 when a fellow isn't working" commented Hollis smiling, "but I hope I don't get it for the the fifteen weeks I'm entitled to—I'd rather have a job."

Those unemployed workers who have been mailed checks during the period between February 1 and February 4 represent the first eligible unemployed workers who have served an drequired three weeks waiting period before benefit payments can begin.

For a time, each succeeding week will see the number of checks issued increase as additional eligible workers complete the three weeks waiting period required of them by law.

There are already approximately 14,500 approved claims on file with the commission Though the claims are approved payments to approximately 9,500 of these applicants will not begin until their three week waiting period ends.

An insight of the huge task being carried out by the Sommission can be gained from the following example The average benefit check for claims which now stand approved is estimated to be $8.74 each. If all of the 14,500 already approved applicants should draw checks for the maximum fifteen week period to which they are entitled under the law te Commission will pay tounemployed workers in Kentucky within the next few months a total of $1,900,500.

Such is the instrument Kentucky is using to fight unemployment and bring security and confidence to its workers.

TVA PHOSPHATE AVAILABLE FARMERS UNDER ACP

TVA 47 per cent triple super phosphate for the use on soil conserving crops is availabel to Boone county farmers under the Agricultural Conservation Program and under similiar conditions to those of last year, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent.

Phosphate the past few years has given hundeds of Boone county farmers large increases in pastures and hay crops. Stronger stands of tree seedlings have also been secured where phosphate was used. Each exhausted before the end of the season year the available supply has been sown and many farmers had waited too late to file their applications.

Farmers are supplied the triple super phosphate in lieu of cash payments under the A. C. Program. The only cash expenditures to the farmer is the paying of $6.00 per ton cost on the freight and handling charge. Cooperators agree to use the fertilizer only on grass or legume crops and the program is more strict this year in this connection.

IT'S A HIT! The NEW Firestone CHAMPION TIRE

Because IT'S THE ONLY TIRE MADE WITH THE NEW SAFETY-LOCK CORD BODY and GEAR-GRIP TREAD

AB JENKINS
World's Safest Driver
Ab Jenkins, holder of 87 world records for safety, speed and endurance, who has driven more than a million and a half miles on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires without an accident, says, "On the speedway or on the highway, I insist upon the extra safety of Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires on my cars."

CAR OWNERS everywhere are acclaiming the extra blowout protection and non-skid safety of the new Firestone Champion Tire. And automobile manufacturers, knowing its outstanding performance, have adopted it for their new 1939 models. On every hand you hear, "It's the most effective tire we have ever had on wet pavement and in mud and snow!" It's the hit of 1939!

The Firestone Champion Tire is a completely new achievement in safety engineering and the result of a new and revolutionary means of locking greater safety into the cord body of a tire. This is accomplished first by the use of a new type of tire cord called "Safety-Lock," in which the cotton fibers are more compactly interwoven to give greater strength. And then the fibers in each individual cord, the cords in each ply and the plies themselves are all securely locked together by a new and advanced Firestone process of Gum-Dipping, which provides amazingly greater strength—and greater strength means greater safety.

The new Safety-Lock cord construction gives the added strength that makes possible the use of the new thicker, tougher, deeper Firestone Gear-Grip Tread, which provides remarkably longer non-skid mileage. This sensational new tread is called "Gear-Grip" because of its unique design which has more than three thousand sharp-edged angles that grip the road with a sure-footed hold to protect against skidding and to assure a safe stop.

Come in today and equip your car with a set of new Firestone Champion Tires, the only tires made that are safety-proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway.

Eating-Termed As Exciting Adventure

Eating should be an exciting adventure not a tedious chore, asserts William Allen White, distinguished editor of the Emporia Gazette and author of A Puritan in Babylon, in the current Rotarian Magazine. Despite a career chockfull of journalistic and political activities, he has noted the gastronomic interests of his contemporaries, even serving as the chairman of the menu committee of theRotary club in Emporia, Kansas.

"The average man off the street sits down before his food and eats it like a dog, generally not knowing what he is eating, which is my idea of an culinary mistake. For food always should be an adventure, and a wide dietary range in asign of wide culture," declaree America's Number 1 country editor. Any man who eats luncheons ranging from rice and curry to rare beefsteak and fresh mushrooms, he believes, will be just a little more civilized for having varied his diet.

Yet the average American business or professional man kicks like a bay steer the minute he is exposed to new food—even before he tastes it, laments the sag of Emporia. "This comes, of course from fool women trying to doll up food— like landscaping! I mean the kind of women who put panty ruffles on mutton chops and lay silly red strips of pimento across salad and make the ice cream match their napery.

"I never knew a woman-chasing man whose wife was a good and adventurous cook." says White, remarking that there is something in the proverb that says that the way to a man's heart rs through his stomach. Men—both as husbands and luncheon-club members—will eat—and like—beefstew in brown gravy with onions, green peppers, and carrots in it. They will learn to enjoy a New England dinner with corn beef, tongue, pigs' feet and a it frankfurter garnished with boiled turnips, potatoes, carrots and onions.

Commenting on his duties as a menu committee chairman in his own service club, White concludes' weakened so far. I'm gradually edging up to onion soup for some cold winter day!"

" It's a great life if you don't weaken, and I have not

This Week is Boy Scout Week

This week as many informed folk know already, is Boy Scout Week, celebrating the 29th birthday of the Boy Scouts of America, a Movement that has also died chiefly, aside from its inherent imaginative ap-

Such success as the Boy Scout scheme has had ready appealed to 8,400,000 American boys and men. peal for boys to the fact that thousands of devoted men have given time and money—but chiefly time—quite unselfishly in order that the boys who became Scouts might have the advantage of their Counsel and experience. No similar social agency in the history of the world has ever engaged so many men as volunteers and their willingness and desire to be of some use is a tribute to the sort of unselfishness which is a component of the essential American character.

These Scout leaders have not given in vain for there is ample evidence that the Boy Scouts of America have become among those consistently active in carrying out the service motive in our national life.This has always been amply demonstrated in times of emergency and is likewise to be discovered in ordinary days by many signs. Not the least of them is the fact that many, in fact, most of those becoming Boy Scout leaders in the past several years have previously been Scouts and are seizing upon some way of re-paying the debt due their own Scoutmasters. This is significant evidence that the Scout creed of helpfulness to others is a working doctrine.

Pull Your Town Together—Not Apart

(An editorial from the Rotarian Magazine)

This is true about neighbors the world around: you get along with them or you don't get along with them. Sometimes the fact that they are new to the community or that they are new to the community or that they are a different race or nationality rears an invisible barier between you which seems insurmountable. Yet this great wall—since it is one we ourselves build—is one which we can break through.

Look at your neighbor—even if he lives on the other side of town. Perhaps his name is unpronounceable, his language incomprehensible, his customs inexplicable, yet he is more like you than he is unlike you. If you hear him sing, or see him dance, or watch him work at his hobby, you will find he has something to contribute to the enrichment of community life. By sharing your cultural heritages, you and he—despite different social or racil backgrounds—can learn to live happily and harmoniously together, eventually helping to develop new and outstanding centers of thought and art.

Civic-Minded bodies, as Louis Adamic says, have done and can do much to bring together different national or racial groups in any community—in the New World or Old World. Members of these groups can become good neighbors, cross each other's threshold, enjoy each other's fellowship at festivals, programs, exhibits, and other activities in which all can take part. They can help each other to adjust social or economic changes affecting them. Differences which once loomed large disappear when people of different backgrounds discover how much they have in common. What they need is a chance to discover this fact for themselves.

A Live Wire Briar Hopper

An Explanation! Why I am having my Briar Hopper stories reprinted; all but a few of my original stories were lost in the flood, having a great many requests for the stories I am having them reprinted with the intention of putting them in book form with other interesting matter—Will S. Norris.

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5562 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

In one of my recent stories I promised to tell a story of two mothers who set bad examples for their sons. If possible, I try to always make good my promises. I say to my readers, especially to the boys and girls, this is a great asset in life.

The first mother lived in Lexington. She was a society leader and a church member. Her favorie pastime was bridge parties here they played for prizes. Among the many slings she won was an expensive vase. She had a promising son who bade fare to make a good man. Unfortunately the mother ught her son to play cards As he grew into manhood, bridge and card playing at home became to tame for him. He drifted into gambling and drinking which gave his mother a lot of worry

Like all good mothers she would not close her eyes in sleep at night until her boy came home, which was often early in the morning at 4 o'clock she heard him come staggering in. she knew the was in no condition to talk to. She got a few hours of worried sleep but let the boy sleep late so he would be sobered up when he arose She wanted him at his best when she talked to him. When he came down to his breakfast, like a good mother she had fixed him a good repast.

After hehad finished she said with tears in her eyes, "Son do you know you are breaking my heart, shortening my days with worry on account of the dessipated life you are leading as a drinker and gambler? "Don't you know you are doing wrong?"

The beautiful vase was on the sideboard. The son said; "Mother where did you get that vase?" She had to tell him she had won it at a bridge party.

The boy then said: ' When I was a boy you taught me to play cards and set the example for gambling with your bridge parties. Now I am a hardened gambler and drinker. Do not blame anyone but yourself for my leading a dissapated life. If you had set the example and warned me of these dangers then, of which you are telling me now, I might have been the pride of your life and have made a useful man, I am afraid it is too late now mother.

The other mother was a western mother who set the same example for her son who wandered east winding up finally in the State of New York. He went from bad to worse and finally landed in the Albany State Prison for a long term as a thief. The mother had a friend who was going to Albany on a visit. She gave the friend a letter and her picture to take to her boy telling her to say that his mother had sent them.

The friend called on the boy who met her in the prison reception room. The boy read the letter, which the friend delivered, then tore it to pieces and in a similar manner defaced the picture, grinding both under his heel on the floor. He said to the friend, "You can tell my mother I hope she goes to hell for she has sent me there with her example.

SO SAY WE ALL!

CHANGING STYLES OF HOUSE

How much our houses have changed, inside and outside, since the present century began! The old log house, our first American home, now so rapidly becoming a lost institution, was fairly common some forty years ago in many parts o the state. Some of the log houses were quite pretentious but the typical ones were very simple. They had been erected as the first homes in the wilderness and ,because of their ability to stand the wear and tear of time, had endured down to a time when no new log houses were being built but when a house of any former dwelling ouse, replaced by kin was too valuable to destroy. The former dwelling ouse, replaced by one of more modern type, was relegated to some menial position: smokehouse, corncrib, stable. In some places it survived for a generation as the kitchen or as the servants' quarters.

With the coming of aswmills grew up the boxed house, varying enormously in its size and value, but again usually simple and unpretentious. The patterns of log houses were repeated over and over with the boxed house: simple room, room and loom,to, two rooms with an open passage, two stories in front an L of one story, and so on. Even before the boxed house became common in some places, the more prosperious people graduated from a log house to a brick structure, from bricks made right on the plantation. Side by side for a generation of two stood the log cabin, the boxed house, and the brick house. The frame house came as the last early house, the one that was and is most typical in our own time, though every conceivable form of house is now being built.

On a typical street of a small town with some age can be seen all the beautiy and ugliness of a dozen styles of architecture, each of which carried with it a high tone in its earliest days. A recent fire in my home town revealed what very few had guessed: that the core of a large and fashionable apartment house was a log cabin, covered deftly with weather-boarding, ceiling, and plaster. Side by side stand overornate Mid-Victorian mansion and ultra modern bungalow, with an ever-changing form and effect. Colonial mansions or newer replicas of them may be flanked by the plainest cottage or the modern house,all windows and gables. A good museum of whot has been stylish in buildings is a residential street.

Earlier styles of houses became standardized, so that " two rooms in front and a hall between" meant something as definite as could be named. Our modern houses have only one likeness, in their being hopelessly individual. To call a house a bungalow merely gives a general idea; Heinz's pickles are not more varying than bungalows. While in most ways we are decidedy standardized in our American life, we must admit that of the making of many styles of house there is no end.

With three hundred seventy already registering Union College is opening the second semester with a thirty per cent increase in enrollment over the first semester, according to announcement by Dr. C. R. Wimmer. dean and regisar.

This is the largest enrollment since the new teacher certification laws went into effect and, with the exception of 1936, is the largest in the history of the school. Late registration by rural school teachers next week promises to bring the total carollment to over four hundred.

In addition mid-semester registration for the spring term of nine weeks is expected to add from fifty to seventy-five students, mainly teachers in the rural areas of the neighboring counties.

The increase points to the continued growth of Union College and Dr. Conway Boatman, the new president.the successful administration of Dr. Conway Boatman, thenew president, whose formal inauguration will be held in the spring.

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

by JAMES PRESTON

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOT

Lobbies are as old as the Capitol, but a new one has sprung up. For want of a better name, it has been dubbed a "back door" lobby. It is being different from most others because it is being carried on quietly by persons within the government who are opposing a goverment proposal.

Participating in the lobby are Navy and Army officers who do not want to see the Florida Ship Canal and the Passamaquody tide-harnessing projects, both called impractical by engineers, were abandoned more than a year ago when Congress refused to appropriate funds fo their completion. About 14 million dollars had been spent on the two when they were abandoned and more than 200 million dollars would be required for their completion.

They have been revived as part of the national defense program.

Reason for the lobby against these proposals by Army and Navy officials is that they feel this money is needed for more urgent national defense needs. Further, they are saying, neither of the projects would enhance the strength of our defense.

These military service lobbyists, of course, supposedly are expounding only their personal views and would find themselves in an embarrassing situation if it became generally known which of them were working against the proposal. That is the reason they are using the "back door."

The experimenters in the Agriculture Department are not bothering to deny a recent report that the "two price plan" for foodstuffs had been abandoned. On the contray they are quite happy to have this report generally believed.

Well informed sources, however, say the two-price plan has not been abandoned and that it will again appear in a more subtle form.

There is an old saying that "truth is stranger than fiction." Perhaps so, but in Washington fiction is sometimes more enlightening than the truth. For instance.

In recent years the complexities of life for the average businessman have been well known truths, but it has apparently taken a fiction treatment of these complexities to awaken and enlighten some of the capital spectators.

The fiction piece is the work of a well know magazine writer who writes occasional stores about the trails and tribulations of a tractor salesman and his boss. His latest story has the boss in Washington to straighten out his 1937 corporate income tax return. He is about ready to return to his home and office when he discovers that he must stay over to explain his refinancing to the SEC.

After weeks of postponing his trip home, he is about ready to leave when he is called to testify before a Congressional Committee. Then the Wages and Hours Administration beckons him. Then the Treasury digs up some bookkeeping mistakes in his Social Security taxes.

His home office begins to seem farther and father away, then the NLRB hauls him onto the carpet for firing a mechanic who distributed pamphlets at the tractor factory by wrapping them around a rock and throwing them through a window.

It goes on and on but he eventually does get home—just in time to o.k. the sale of a tractor to be used in helping a Federalized colony of beavers build a dam!

Government map-makers have "re-captured" about 400 acres of land from Canada without resultant international incident. The land was dent. The land aws unwittingly unwittingly "ceded" to Canada several years ago by an erring mapmaker. Now Barnhart Island, in the St. Lawrence River, is back as a part of New York State .... A belated Christmas gift of that amount has been received from an unidentified person in Boston. The money was for the Treasury "conscience fund."

A Washington editor complains in his editorial column: "It has been a long time since we've seen a letter to a newspaper signed "Taxpayer "Can it be that Taxpayer can't dig up the necessary postage?"

SANITAION NEEDED IN POULTRY RAISING

Cleanliness is a big factor in preventing or checking coccidiosis in poultry, writes Dr. T. P. Polk of the University of Kentucky College. Droppings in the feed or water is one way it is spread. Then it may be carried about by persons ,on feed sacks, water pails and poultry crates or by animals, birds insects and flies.

Symptoms are pale beak and shanks ruffled feathers, drowsiness and diarrhea which may become bloody. The sick chicken appears to be cold and should be supplied with more heat.

Control says Dr. Polk, include dry cleaning the brooder house each day. Do not use water nor antiseptics to clean the house. Keep the house dry, as moisture favors the development of the disease. Use only a small amount of litter and remove it daily.

The disease, he continues, may be prevented by raising chicks in clean brooder houses on clean ground and away from other poultry.

The brooder house should be cleaned and moved to new ground before using for chicks. This means ground that has not been used for poultry for the past two years.

Feed hoppers and drinking vessels should be so constructed that the feed and water will not become soiled with dropppings and other contaminating material.

Clean the brooder house three times a week and more frequently as the chicks become larger.

Avoid carrying the infection into the brooder house.

DEALERS JOIN IN SEED IMPROVEMENT

The work of County Agent J. L. Miller to ' educate" farmers to use good seed has the cooperation of seed dealers in Madison county, Ky. The program, launched three years ago has begun to bear fruit says Miller.

In December of each year, Miller sees seed dealer and ask them to cooperate by offering only good, clean adapted seeds. Then he begins 'to work" on the farmers, urging upon them the wisdom of buying good seed from reliable dealers

Because of the favorable price of red clover seed this spring, the county agent is advising liberal seedings where farmers have treated their land with lime and phosphate. The also believe that more bluegrass should be included in grass mixtures, where the land has been treated.

"As we improve our soils we can expect more of them to produce good bluegrass and red clover," Biller said.

CLEAN CLEANER CLEANS BEST

A vaccum machine with a clean dust bag and brushes free from threads and hairs does the best cleaning job. For best service the bags should be emptied often and brushed inside and out twice a month. Never wash the bag, as that destroys the finish that keeps it dustproff. Closely woven cloth, a smooth inside surface, and wide openings at both ends help to make the dust bag easy to clean.

Machines that clean not only by suction but also by brushing and agitating the rug are highly efficient in removing dirt. Straight suction machines may take longer to clean thoroughly but may have a lower initial cost.

How much dust a machine draws from a rug depends partly on how fast it is pushed back and forth Most machines clean best if they move at a speed of from 1 to 2 feet a second . For best cleaning, the nozzle of the machine should be about an eighth of an inch from the pile of the rug. Naturally, the machine should not be allowed to pick up pins, tacks, or glass because these sharp objects may poke holes in the bag or chip the fan blades. It is also desirable to keep the machine in a clean place protected from dirty, rust, or insects that might eat the bristles of the brushes or the felt padding.

Among the Reds---

Bill McKechnie likes Wally Berger, Wally Berger likes Bill McKechnie, McKechnie is manager of the Cincinnati Reds, and Berger is their leftfields, so the mutual admiration is something like Siamese twins. Reference is something like that figures into the possibilities of the Rhinelanders in the National League pennant chase.

Admiration of manager for player and vice versa, usually does ot mean much on the field, itself but in the case of McKechnie and Berger the connection apparently has considerable to do with the manner in which the big outfielder plays ball, for he has been successful major leaguer only under Bill.

At Boston, playing in a park generally conceded to be the toughest in the National League in which to hit Berger performed all sorts of batting heroics, including the leading of the league's home run parade, and runs batted in, but was slowed down to a whisper when he left the Berger today is a direct conthast Polo Grounds in New York.

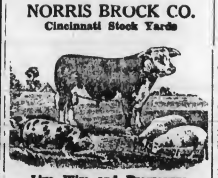
Berger today isa direct contrast to the Berger of a year ago, for he is full of high hopes, and recently in a letter to the club offices, said he expected the best season of his career in 1939. He has the confidence he lacked when playing for a team managed by somebody besides Bill McKechnie.

The impression is not to be gained that Berger has any animosity toward Bill Terry head of the Giants, under whom Wally played during his tenure in New York. That is not the case at all, for Terry rates high in Wally's estimation, but there is an unexplainable something that causes the man to feel more at home under the Reds' Skipper.

In studying Berger's record under McKechnie, when both were with the Boston Club, one can't pass by the proof of his offensive activities in the Beehive. He averaged more than 100 runs batted in per year in his six full years there, then dropped off immediately when turned loose in the New York Park that has the shortest boundaries, at the foul lines, in the circuit.

Regadless of whee he has playerd, Berger never has blasted less than 16 home runs, that figure coming in 1938 in the 99 games he played for in Reds after his acquisition from the Giants on June 6. He batted .307 during that period with the Reds, contrasted to the anemic .188 he hit for the Giants prior to the trade that sent him to McKechnie in exchange for Second Sacker, Alex Kampouris.

The placing of Berger in left field was a move that helped make the Reds a pennant threat for the first time in years. He was teamed in the garden with two long distance sockers Harry Craft and Ival Goodman, who knocked 15 and 30 homers, respectively. This total gave the three regular-Cincinnati outfielders a total of 61 homers for the season, an average of better than 20 per man.



The unit of Berger, Craft and Goodman also is one of the best in the league defensively. All three are fast men. Craft was the National League's leader in putouts and total chances accepted last year, while in 1937, he startled the International league by starting eight double plays from the outfield to lead in this department. He played only 83 games, slightly more than half the schedule.

The Reds are quite fortunate to be considering Berger in their 1939 plans, for recently on the coast he figured in an automobile accident in which his car was demolished, but from which he escaped without even a bruise. The manner in which he emerged from the crash caused Wally to figure that inasmuch as fate was with him on that occasion, this probably is his year and that he's in for the good season he expects.

When in the best of condition, Berger weighs 198 pounds. His weight today is an even 200. He perspires so freely during a ball game that he lost as many as twelve pounds during a single afternoon of activity.

Bobby Wallace, chief scout for the Reds, predicts that Einar Sorenson rookie second sacker, who was chosen as the most valuable player in the Tree-eye League last year, will be the man to watch among Cincinnati's infield candidates.

FISH AND GAME REPORTS

Judging by reports of theConservation officers of the Division of Game and Fish during the year 1938 crime did not pay for 439 violators of the Game Laws.

A total of 542 per sons were arrested by the Conservation Officers but only 439 were convicted. Jail sentences were served by 89 who were unable to pay their fines. Ten were given one year sentences in the penitentiary while the remaining 340 paid a total of $6,0001.00 in fines for the error of their ways.

The month of December was the buslest month for the Conservation Officers with 88 arrests, 72 convictions, no penitentiary sentences, 6 jail sentences and a total of $923.50 in fines.

The month of August saw the smallest number of arrests and convictions while July saw the fewest jail sentences and the smallest amount of fines was paid during the month of February.

Powell Bosworth, Lexington, Ky., is superintendent of Wardens and has 47 Conservation Officers under his direction. The 120 counties of the Commonwealth are divided into districts which are served by tese 47 officers. Several of the men are stationed at Harrington Lake during the fishing season while groups of the men make trips up and down the river checking anglers for their licenses all types of nets for their licenses and confiscating those that do not have a license tag and all illegal fishing devices.

Major James Brown, Director of the Divison of Game and Fish, instructs all Warden to assist in the education of the general public to the problems of wildlife, conservation of game and obedience to the Game and Fish Laws. They distribute law books, literature of educational work type, make talks in school rooms, before Game and Fish Clubs, Lions, Rotary, Kiwanis and other clubs and organizations always stressing cooperation of the sportsmen with the Division of Game and Fish and with the farmer and landowner, obedience to the Game and Fish Laws and the Conservation of the Wildlife.

The Officers are instructed to assist farmers and landowners in any way possible in the protection of their property from trespassers and violators. They will also help in the stocking of farms with wildlife and will help in any other way possible to further the program of conservation and the building up of a hunter's and fisherman's paradise in Kentucky.

The "Seining Crew" is one of the branches of the Divison of Game and Fish and is under the supervision of Frank Phipps, Superintendent of Hatcheries.

The words "seining crew" tell the whole story of the work that is done by this group of men. They begin their work the later part of September and continue through the Fall Winter and Spring months, up until warm weather sets in. The transferring of fingerling fish from state hatcheries, and rearing pools to streams and ponds, open to the public, that are understocked, is the work allotted the crew during the fall and winter months. Reservoirs, ponds and streams that are over stocker are also worked by the men and the first that are seined are transferred to adjoining streams The large fish—commonly known as brood fish—are usually returned to the body of water from which taken in order to raise the next year's batch.

During the spring months the crew goes to work cleaning out the hatcheries and rearing pools and getting them in shape for the season's activities. fter the thousands of small fish, measuring an inch or less in length—commonly known as fry—have filled the hatcheries, they are then removed to the rearing ponds. During the approximate five-month period in which they remain in the rearing ponds, these fish attain a growth of from three to eight inches in length.

State hatcheries are located at Glasgow, Williamsburg and Ashland.

Figures on the number of fish that have been transplanted this past fall are not available at present, but Mr. Phipps stated that a total of 69,068 fish were distributed in 14 counties of the 120 in the state over a period beginning last February 9 and ending May 1. The number distributed during the fall and winter months should far exceed the spring total, Mr .Phipps stated.

The Division of Game and Fish depends a great deal upon the support of the sportsmen and for that reason are being stocked for the Game and Fish clubs which are cooperating with the Conservation work of both the Division and the League of Kentucky Sportsmen, Mr. Phipps pointed out.

The crew is composed of the following men: Frank Phipps, Superintendent; C. C Haley, Supervisor of seining crew; Elbert Conway; W. G. McConnell; John "Buster" Harrod; Bob Raiser, and Leon Atha.

The State Fish Hatchery located at Ashland is also becoming known as a Quail hatchery and is making real progress along that line.

Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, stated that approximately 400 quail were hatched at Ashland last year and that the number could be more than doubled this year.

The hatchery has1,000 birds on hand at present. A large number of these birds are known as the Northern Bob White Quail and are native to the northern part of the quail country in the United States. These birds are almost a third larger than the native quail and will beused as brood stock at the hatchery this spring. The hatchery contains an incubator which will hold 2,000 quail eggs.

THE GARDEN PLANNING I

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

The ground broken, the garden may lie until the time comes to get ready the seed bed, some time in March. The gardener, however, may not be idle but he should improve this interval by putting his plans in order. On how well this is done depends much of the satisfaction that should come from the garden.

The first step is to determine just how much garden space there is, for, on its size obviously hinges its output. In making measurements, irregularity in outline should be noted so that a wholly accurate map can be drawn. On the map should be shown walks, treeshade, possible tree-root competition the almost inevitable grape arbor down the middle, "early" and wet spots, in fact any feature that might affect the vegetables. Also shown, should be the location of last year's tomatoes and cabbage, so that these vegetables can re "rotated" to avoid 'yellows', and wilt.

Next comes making a "budget" of the vegetables the family will use throughout the year. This is an individual matter, as families vary in size, and in their tastes. A last year's garden dairy would help, but if ideal budget is desired, the page of Kentucky Extenson C 314 may be consulted. Here a list of bushels and cane tables a family of 5 shou the winter. Those amoun constitute an all-year's ing these, fair idea may be got from Table 2, Kentucky Extension Circular 309. In this same table are found also vegetable row-spacings, and seed information. It may now develop that the garden is too small. This may be only apparently so, as will be seen on consulting the "days to maturity" column, again in Table 2. By its aid, some crops may be sandwiched between others, and some made to follow others, increasing the 'size" of the garden by just that much.

If the garden is found still too small, some of the vegetables must be dropped. Obviously, the first to be deleted should be those that give the least return for the space they occupy. Next, should be those of which the family is not over-fond, but sound judgement should prevail, for there are many vegetables whose taste is worth cultivating, if for no other reason than that they represent new flavors to mitigate the monotony that obtains when only a few kinds of vegetables come to the table. The temptation might be to omit some vegetable it has been found difficult to raise, but that is no valid reason; a garden is made the more exciting by a brush or two with insects an dvegetable diseases with the outcome successful for the gardener, of course.

Finally, with the ed to its utmost, t be worked out ag the seed purchas of planning is

Boy Scouts of America Are Celebrating 29th Anniversary

Responding to the theme "Scouting carries on American Ideals" more than a million and a quarter Scouts and Scouters (adult leaders) will today launch a series af activities in celebration of Boy Scout Week, marking the 29th birthday of the Boy Scouts of America, first incorporated in the District of Columbia on February 9,1910 and later granted a Federal Charter by Congress. Since the earnest Scouts were enrolled a total of 8,400,000 boys and men have been members of the Boy Scout Movement in this country and have participated in its constructive program of participating citizenship activities of which the current plans are typical.

The Scout Birthday today, will according to Scout tradition, be the time when former and active Scouts and Scouters will be expected to re-pledge themselves to the Scout Promise in their own homes or in their Troops and Patrols, as a demstration of the way Scouting and Cubbing both seek to supplement and support the influence of the American home. It is expected that important national broadcasts will mark this phase of the Scout celebration including, it is hoped, one from the White House by President Roosevelt who is likewise Honary President of the Boy Scouts of America.

Tomorrow has been named Scout Citizenship Day, when in school assemblies and at other civic programs will domonstrate the contributions they are making to the civic life of public and parochial schools throughout the nation and leading educators in all sections are cooperating to that end. Dr. Dan Kelly, Superintendent of Schools in Binghamton, N. Y., is chairman of the special national committee on "Scouting inthe Schools."

Friday February 10 will be Scout Brotherhood Day, when every Scout Troop meeting that night has urged to have Scout guests from one or more other Troops especially for the purpose of demonstrating the Scouting truth that a Scout is a brother to every other Scout, regardless of race, creed or class. Hosts and guests alike will vie with each other in creating conditions designed to breed permanent friendships as a living manifestation of the American way of living together in harmony and cooperation.

On Saturday February 11 Troops and Senior Scout groups, including Sea Scout hips, will carry out useful project illustrating the well-established fact that "A Scout is Helpful". These events will mark Scout Service Day, on which Scouts will be alert to discover and execute service enterprises of value to their own communities or to dramatize, in store windows or on prominent street corners the sort of services that mark their pledge to "Do a Good Turn Daily" as a part of their Scout Promise.

Scout Church Day, Sunday, February 12 or, inthe case of Scouts of the Jewish faith, the previous Friday or Saturday will offer each Scout and Scouter an opportunity to fulfull his solemn obligation to the twelfth part of the Scout Law "A Scout is Reverent, he is faithful in his religious duties and respects the convictions of other in matters of customs and religon." More than fifty percent of all Troops, Cub packy and Sea Scout Ships are sponsored by churches religious bodies and societies and Scouting recognizes and actually supports the place of religon in Amirican life.

Scout Dedication Day, Monday, February 13 has been planned especially for Senior Scouts, including Sea Scouts, Explorer Scouts and Rover Scouts. For this group there has recently been written a "Senior Scout Citizenship Dedication" by Chief Scout Executive James E. West and so they are planning ceremonies of dedication either in their meeting places or at convenient patriotic shrines or points of historical interest. In many cases these formalities will take place as part of an outdoor campfire at the climax of a one or two-day hike or camping trip.

The final day of Boy Scout Week, Tuesday, February 14 will be devoted to events showing Scouting's contributions to American life as a leisure-time program offering boys and young men wholesome recreation and has been designated as Scout Fun Day. In addition to Troop parties and Senior Scout social activities many other ways of further in the so-called "play way" of Scouting are bing planned by leaders' groups.

This, as many informed folk know already, is Boy Scout Week celebrating the 29th birthday of the Boy Scouts of America, a Movement that has already appealed to 8,400,000 American boys and men.

Such success as the Boy Scout scheme has had is due chiefly, aside from its inherent imaginative appeal for boys, to the fact that thousands of devoted men have given time and money, but chiefly time quite unselfishly in order that the boys who become Scouts might have the advantage of their counsel and experience. No similar social agency in the history of the world has ever experience. No similar social agency in the world has ever engaged so many men as volunteers and their willingness and desire to be of some use is a tribute to the sort of unselfishness which is a component of the essential American character.

These Scout leaders have not given in vain, for these is ample evidence that the Boy Scouts of America have become among those consistently active in carrying out the service motive in our national life. This has always ben amply demonstrated in time of emergency and is likewise to be discovered in ordinary days by many signs. Not the least of them is the fact that many, in fact, most of those becoming Boy Scout leaders in the past several years have previously been Scouts and are seizing upon that way of re-paying the debt due their own Scoutmasters. This is significant evidence that the Scout creed of helpfulness to others is a working doctrine.

The Northern Kentucky Council, Boy Scouts of America, comprising the counties of Kenton Campbell, Boone, Mason, Fleming Robertson Bracken Pedleton Owen and Grant has been awarded the coveted Walter W. Head Acorn Award, Scout Executive O. R. Harader announced today. This beautiful plaque is awarded annually by the President of the National Council to every local Council that achieves its approved objectives for the past year in terms of new Troops and Scouts and which has a net increase of total number of Scouts over its record of the previous year.

This is the first time the Northern Kentucky Council has won this award. The award to the Northern Kentucky Council was based on its 40 per cent increase in mambership during 1938 when the number of Scouts registered grew from 994 to 1401. uring the year 24 new troops were organized of which 17 were in towns not previously having Scout Troops.

KENTUCKY OLD-AGE PENSION NOTES

Persons who receive unemployment compensation benefits under the job insurance law of the State of Kenfits these workers or their heirs will receive later under the old-age insurance law of the state of Ky., Act.

This statement was made today by Frank B. Decker, Jr., Manager of the Social Board field office in Covington.

"Now that Kenutcky is paying job insurance benefits some persons have the idea that this money is coming wholly or partly out of funds which workers and their employers pay under the old-age insurance plan," Mr. Decner said.

"The two sets of benefits are entirely different. The fact that a person receives job insurance benefits has nothing whatever to do with payments which will be made later under the old-age insurance plans None of the money contributed for old-age insurance benefits goes towards the payment of job insurance benefits. Job insurance benefits are not deducted from old-age insurance benefits and the workers, accounts set up by the Social Security Board are in no way affected by any benefits drawn under the Kentucky unemployment compensation law," Mr. Decker added.

He said money payments due under the old-age insurance plan are paid direct from the U. S. treasury while job insurance benefit checks are issued by the State of Kentucky after it has withdrawn money from the state's unemployment compensation trust fund which on December 1, 1938 amounted to more than $10,000,000.

Erlanger Seeks Account From Bond Pledge

Russell N. Victor attorney for the defendant in answer and cross-petition filed Saturday asking for an accounting of money realized from an alleged pledge of $150,000 worth of sewer revenue bonds under a previous administration.

Victor, representing Fred Lenhoff, filed suit last week, attacking the proposed issuance and sale of $135,000 worth of sewer bonds. This, the plaintiff charges, would create an indebtedness in the excess of the limitset out by the Kentucky constitution, and in excess of actual requirements.

The Erlanger Trustees have entered a general denial, setting out a list of expenses said to be necessary to complete a sewer system that was constructed partially by another administration. Ervin L. Bramlage, Erlanger City Attorney, representing the present Trustees, charged that the $150,000 bond issue was printed and delivered to Victor when he was City Attorney, and that the former board "unlawfully authorized" Victor to pledge the bonds for a sum of not less than $75,000. Victor received the bonds, but never has accounted to Erlanger for the proceeds, Bramlage said.

The answer pointed out that the $135,000 bond issue was to be used in paying $81,000 indebtedness on the part of the sewer system and indebtedness incurred by a precious administration.

113.2 Miles of REA Line Surveyed

In County, With 374 Customers on Map

One hundred thirteen miles with 374 signed customers were placed on the map of the proposed Boone county REA electric lines by the REA engineer the past week. seventy-one applicants on approximately 35 miles of line that did not meet the minimum requirements were unable to be placed on the map at the present time.

The engineer's map with the membership agreements and right of way easements will be submitted to Washington for approval in about a wek or ten days. It is hoped that allotments to begin line construction will be ready in the next few weeks.

A few signers on prospective lines that are too thinly signed up at the present time still have possibilities of having their lines constructed provided they can bring their number of signers up to the minimum of three per mile. The engineer advised that it still may be posible to include a few miles of folks on these lines through saving on the allotments used in construction of those lines in the original project.

THE GARDEN

By John S. Gardner, Kenteky College of Agriculture

Among the items that make up garden planning, maaking out the seed list has been named. This will bear being amplified, because the varieties differ enough in behavior for th success, or failure of the garden to depend on their correct selection.

A good garden is one that begins producing erly and that continues until freezing weather puts an end to everything. To achieve earliness, obviously an early start must be made, requiring intelligent soil management, but also the choosing of the varieties that mature in the shortest order.

Among the earliest crops to go into the garden are peas. Likwise, they wane at the first coming of warm weather. Obviously, with a March start, the list would be: Alaska, Gradus, Telphone named in their order of earliness. Supposing, however, there is delay the latest, Telephone should be struck off, and dependence place din the other two to mature before pea-growing weather is past.

Another item is cabbage. The earliest sorts are those whose heads are pointed: Early Jersey or Winningstdt, but these burst early. The round head is Golden Acre; the earliest list should include a few, by all means. Next come the oblong-heads, Charleston Wakefield, or the round heads Copenhagen Market; there should be some of each of these to take up after the earliest sorts are spent. Next in season, comes Early Summer, All-Seasons Succession or Early Flat Dutch maturing in September. An orderly program should contain cabbage of all those "speeds," as it were, to assure usable cabbage all summer.

In the event that "yellows" has cut cabbage yields, or in fact, prevented cabbage growing altogether none of those named should be used but the varieties, yellows-resistant Early Jersey should be used, but the varieties, yellows resistant Early Jersey Wakefield Marion Market

For Fingerprinting Everybody

A bill has been introduced in Congress to require all foreigners living in or entering this country to have their fingerprints recorded in the great file of millons of similar prints in the Department of Justice in Washington.

An inquiry made by the foremost experts in sounding out public opinion shows that 84 percent of the American people favor this procedure.

The idea is not new.

For the use of fingerprints as a means of identification in China and the Orient generally is as old as civilization. A merchants thumb-print is accepted as his signature on bank checks in some part of India fingerprints are sufficient signature on receipts for wages or promissory notes elsewhere in the Far East.

Another pending bill would require fingerprinting everybody.

The idea that everybody ought to be fingerprinted by preference immediately after being born and the prints record for identification at any later time was first popularized by Mark Twain in his novel "Pudd'n head Wilson" man yyears ago. Long before that scientific men had worked out the system now in use by which everybody's fingerprints can be compared with the files in Washington and almost instantly either indentified or prove that they have been recorded.

The growth of public sentiment in favor of fingerprinting everybody is indicated by a recent report of the institute of Public Opinion showing that 71 percent of Americans are in favor of it. It would seem to us that the only person who have a right to object are those who have done something they don't want anyone to find out about.

Aiming At The "Little Fellow"

It is reported that there is a growing belief among Congressmen that the revenue derived from the income tax must be increased. It is also reported that Treasury officials are extremely dubious as to the possibility of raising any substantial additional amount of revenue by "soaking the rich" further. Big individual incomes are already subject to surtaxes ranging up to 80 per cent and the point of diminishing returns has been reached.

Therefore it is argued additional income tax must be raised by increasing the lives on persons in the lower and middle tax brackets—and by dropping those brackets so as to reach income levels which are now exempt fro mdirect taxation.

If tih comes to pass—and it is obvious if we continue to spend two dollars for every dollar we take in that tax revenue must be upped—those citizens who have taken small interst in government fiscal policy on the theory that the rich must pay the bills will be due for the rudest sort of an awakening. The fact of the matter is that today the rich could pay but a small part of taxes required even if the total incomes were confiscated. The great bulk must be paid by ordinary citizens through indirect hidden taxes which constitutes part of the cost of everything we buy and use. But relatively few of us seem to realize that—and it is that blindness to fact which has created our almost criminal indifference toward the tax and debt policies of our government.

A Democratic Sport

Baseball is the most democratic sport in this country in the persons to whom it appeal both in numbers and their position in life but backetball is the most democratic with respect to the environment of the players themselves. More aristocratic than either of them is football. In it only the larger colleges and universities have good teams. The success of the elevens is usually in direct proportion to the size of the student body. That accounts for the great sensation caused tweny years ago by the defeat by Centre College with less than 300 students of Harvard University.

Yet some of the smallest towns and hrady towns at all have produced State basketball champions Inez the county seat of a county to which until a few years ago entrance had to be gained by going through the State of West Virginia was one notable example. another was the Carr Creek's team which had the wide open spaces for a gymnasium in which to practice and still other teams from little places that won renown were from Sharp, Heath and Corinth.

Baseball is largely professionalized and a Cincinnati team for instance means men hired by the Cincinnati club owner. None of them may have their residence in the city. There is therefore less reason for home town spirit in baseball than in sport where the boys all belong to the team at their place of residence. If baseball were not much the best game of the three it could never have survivedthis handicap.

Basketball performs another distinct service in bringing sports home to millions of country and small-town residents. Games played on the floors in Boone and surrounding counties are comparable to those seen among high school teams anywhere in the State. Basketball is essentially a small town game and perhaps that is the reason why it is so popular in them.

There Is A Difference

Two news dispatches were sent from Moscow, Russia on the same day recently. Both are interesting to every American and shold be especially interested to anyone who might have an idea that Communism isn't as bad as it is painted and that Communism is the ideal government of the working man.

One of the stories concerned the beginning of prosecutions under the new labor regulations. Thefirst person put on trail was an employer accused (believe it or not) of being too lenient with one of his workers.

Under the new regulations it is a criminal offense if any employer fails to discharge a worker who is absent or late without legimate reason. In this particular case secret police found an absent employee at home in bed. They said his excuse wasn't legitimate so the employer now faces a prison sentence of six months to three years.

The other story concerned a new speed-up of the work system. By official government decree factory workers must now do 25 per cent more each day and be paid 14 per cent less for it.

It would seem therefore that soap-box orators who shout 'down with the American way" and advocate the Communist way" are not giving all the facts. between these facts it isn't hard to choose. We'll stick to the old American custom of living and working the American Way.

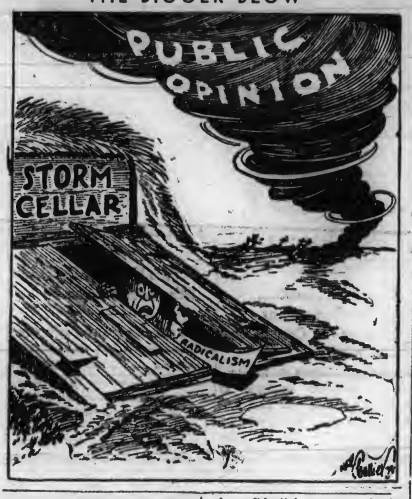
DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5562 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio



A railroad story. In the good old days my good friend William Arnold at Richmond, Ky., was one of Madison county's most prosperous farmers and stockraisers. He owned valuable farm land near the prosperous town of Richmond. The time came when it was decided to build a railroad from Nicholasville to Richmond, Irvine and Beattyville. The road was surveyed through Mr. Arnold's farm. He protested with a suit for $40,000 damages. It became a very important case and it attracted very much attention, with the best legal talent that could be had. On each side, railroad lawyers laid a plan for a long drawn out fight for a judgement and appeals or hung the jury, which is often the case. They came up to the trial properly equipped to make Mr. Arnold an offer, believing he would reject it, which would prolong and weaken the case into a compromise. They arranged with one of the banks to loan them $20,000 in legal tender money, which they brought into the court room in an old-fashion wash basket, which made quite a bundle of money lying on a table it attracted a lot of attention from the leading business men of the town and county who were on hand to hear the Arnold vs Railroad case fought by an army of legal talent. Finally the leading lawyer for the railroad made the closing speech and tndered Mr. Arnold $20,000 in legal money.

Most everyone expected Mr. Arnold to refuse. But to their surprise as soon as the railroad lawyer sat down, Mr. Arnold put a basket under the edge of the table, rolled the packages of money into the basket, saying; "I accept the money." He called Mr. Thomas Smith, Sr., to the basket telling him to hold his arms and he would turn the $20,000 over to him for the amount he borrowed to pay for 200 acres of land which adjoined his other lands. This land has remained with the Arnold estate, and is now very valuable.

Mr. Smith walked out of the court house and up the street with the bundle of money in his arms and placed it in the bank, which would be rather risky in these days of banditry. The railroad contractor that built the railroad married Mr. Arnold's only daughter Betty. Mr. Arnold congratulated himself on not only winning the $20,000 but also a railroad builder for a son-in-law, who afterward was to become one of Madison county's richest men.

But Mr. Arnold lost a case with his wife, who was a good Methodist and devoted to her church. They were building a new church and like all churches, they needed money. Mrs. Arnold had inherited $1,000. Mr. Arnold was planning to invest it in mules to make more money. Mrs. did not see it that way, feeling that the church needed the $1,000 more than Mr. Arnold, believing in laying up treasures in heaven while going through life. She gave the $1,000 to the church. I have heard Mr. Arnold tell this with tears in his eyes, saying he beat the railroad but his wife beat him; she was right for she was a good woman.

THE BIGGER BLOW

By JAMES PRESTON

Demands upon the six weeks old Congress for legislative experimenting, regulation and planning by new fangled theories have been at a minimum. A lot of talk is heard, therefore that the "it-probably-won't-work-but-we'll-try-it-anyway" era is past.

But there is talk to the contrary, too. Those that say otherwise are in that—a breathing spell between experiments. And thenext experiment, it is predicted will hit hard at States rights.

In support of this prediction, the predictors point to several recent activities and events that got little publicity, apparently because usually cautious observers take the lu too seriously. Two lines ina recent speech by one administration spokesman are pointed out as examples of significant doings. The speech concerned States' rights, and the speaker after saying the Federal government is better equipped to "influence our social order" made this declaration: "Above all else, we want to go forward as one American people. NOT AS FORTY-EIGHT TRIBES."

This, then indicates potent circl to try to get Congress to do away with State lines and set up a single unit of government—in Washington—to run the whole nation.

-oOo-

Another example is a bill recently dropped in the legislative hopper (very quietly) to create a Government corporation that would be directed to take over the ownership and operation of all oil, gas and mining industries and power plants, also the products of these industries. United States," meaning that it would be tax free and have the free use of the mails etc.

To States, cities and counties this would mean the loss of millons of dollars annually in tax collections.

Still another exampleis a bill to do away with State charters and controls of businesses. This measure would centralize the charter and license authority in Washington.

The meaning to States would be the same, again: loss of fees.

A confidential report on foreign trade was placed on the desk of a toprung Federal official. And it is giving to top-runger and his aides a lot of mental exercise. The report says, in effect that America's foreign trade is falling off but not because of the circus antics of dictators.

The report was written by a delegate to the recent Lima conference. He points out that although foreign buyers prefer American-made goods because they are better made increasing prices due to economic planning, labor unrest and higher taxes are putting U. S. products out of reach. As long as American prices are continually forced higher and higher, the delegate points out, in his report we can expect a continued decline in the sale of American goods in foreign lands.

Sometimes when Washington officials want to meet secretly for a confiab they go outside of Washington. Such was the case last wee. when a group of officials oppoeed to the Dies un-American activities probe, journeyed to Alexandria Va. to meet with Dies to try to reach an agreement. Here is what happened:

When the pressure was put on the Congressman to end his investigation he offered to resign from Congress and continue the investigation independently. There would be no problem of funds, he pointed ou. for the Dies Committee received thousands of dollars in contributions from citizens aroused by the disclusures by the committee of Communist and Fascist activities in the U. S. A. All of th money of course was returned but an appeal would bring more.

The offer of resignation frighte ed the opponents. The outcome was agreement to appropriate $100,000 more for continuing the investigation by by the Dies Committee. Those opposed to Dies were afraid to l him take the issue to the country.

With rural electrification well on its way, Larue county farmers have held several meetings to consider wiring.

One hundred and fifteen flashlights were among prizes given Carroll county 4-H tobacco winners.

Meetings to discuss farm account keeping attracted a large attendance in Ompbell county.

SHOW YO' RAISIN'

The best sermon I ever heard was not intended as such, but, by accident it was given by a preacher to be more exact, a colored preacher, some forty years ago. It was summer in the Fidelity neighborhood. For weeks a protracted meeting had been going on at Mt. Zion, where the numerous Negroes that worked in Marse Jeffy's tobacco factory and other farm hands belonged. Several visiting preachers aided the regular pastor, and some thirty-six additions to the church rewared their efforts. Since Mt. Zion is true to its name and stands on a high, dry hill it was necessary to bring the converts to the creek in our neighborhood for the baptising. All the colored people for miles around and fully as many white people were there; the colored ones on the side where there was a sandbar and hence access to the water, the whites on the steep bank among the trees. Just why all the white people went I cannot recall ,for it was not often that so many would steal away to Negro meetings.

Since so many converts were to be baptised, it took some planning, in order not to rush things but still give dignity to the whole event. One preacher stood in the middle of the creek and performed the rites, another stood half-way to the sandbar and another stood at the edge of the water to pass the candidates for baptism in and out. Massed on the sandbar stood the others, led in song by Bill Palmer, a local preacher and exhorter. Bill would line the hymns in the old fashion often inserting lines of his own coining. For example, when a particularly large girl gave a shout just as she reached the sandbar and fell with a flop Bill appropriately intoned, "Jesus heal my broken bones." Sounds of suppressed laughter came from the steep bank, laughter reproved by glances from the older people. Oure, the colored boy who worked on the farm next to ours pretended to be afraid of the water, in spite of the fact that he had been in a washing in that hole every day since early spring. He aparently tried to climb the preacher. Actial laughing broke out at this, but the singing and shouting continued unchecked. One funny thing followed another until the whole group of white people, young and old, were actually laughing without any restraint. Then came the sermon. The preacher out in the middle of the stream held up a long, bony finger and in the deep voice tones of one of the major prophets said, "Show yo' raisin', white folks; show yo' raisin'."

And then the noise on that bank subsided. If there had been anything to drop a pin on one could have hear it. The people on the other bank, unruffle by the rudeness of the visitors, kept on their way singing moaning, shouting gesticulating, clapping their hands until all the thirty-six candidates had been properly inducted into the rites of the church. From then on we who were there have remembered the unexpected sermon of the colored preacher, a sermon that I have wanted to hear many times when so-called superiority is acting in a very inferior way. I have repeated Brother Blanton's sermon to hundreds of highly favored students in college, hoping that the stinging words might find lodgement and we of old Fidelity expressed on that make a part of the impression that summer day in the woods by the creek.

EARL LESPEDEZA SOWING SUGGESTED

Sowing lespedeza in middle winter or else waiting until late March or April suggested by the Kentucky College of Agriculture circular, "The Lespedezas in Kentucky." If sowed in late January or early February freezing and thawing and rains will cover the seed sufficiently, the stand will become established early and the plants be in a better position to withstand copetition from nurse crops and weeds

If not sowed in middle winter, then it is considered better to wait until late March or April, when the seed can be covered with a harrow or other implements. Late sowin may be safer where lespdza is sowed with small grains. With oats or alone on prepared ground. It is better to sow the sed on the surface and allow rains to do the covering. On hard bare ground,the use of a harrow or other implement is advantageous. After middle April, moisture conditions are usually less favorable and it becomes increasingly difficut to get a stand.

For maximum yield the first year, 20 to 25 pounds per acre of korean lespedeza seed should be sown, with about a third more of kobe. Good stands are often obtained with lighter seedings, but the use of more seed is generally profitable. Three to five pounds per acre will give stand enough to provide a full crop the folowing year by volunteer seeding, even if the first year's growth is pastured.

DISCUSSING THE BLUE MOLD DISEASE OF TOBACCO CROP

In discussing the blue mold disease in tobacco plant beds, at the Farm and Home Convention at Lexington, Dr. W. D. Valleau, plant pathologist at the Agricultural Experiment Station, suggested five practices which will reduce injury from the disease.

The first one is to use a new bed site every year, so as to avoid danger of carrying over the disease in the bed.

The second is to avoid woods or shaded places in locating the bed. Sunshine prevents or delays the development of glue mold

In the third place, treating small plants in the bed with a bluestone- lime stone solution, a practice recommended for the control of wildfire and rust or angular leafspot, seems to delay the development of blue mold ,according to the experienc oerience of growers in the last two years. Where this material was applied, farmers reported that beds remained free from the disease a week to 10 days longr than where it was not used.

The fourth practice suggested by Dr. Valleu is that of removing the tobacco cotton early in the morning and leaving it off until the leaves are well dried. The disease rarely develops on leaves kept dry.

Finally, it is not necessary to discards good-size plants, if they are needed just because the bed has become infected with blue mold says Dr. Valleu. Apply nitrate of soda, followed with clear water to prevent burning, and most of the plants wille recover and be ready to set in a week or more.

The desire to make a car reflect its owner's individuality is a potent factor in the average motorist's choice of accessory equipment. And it would be hard to find a more thoroughly "personalized" car than this new Chevrolet in which Mary Pickford is shown applying a touch of makeup. As if the handy illuminated vanity mirror were not enough, the car has a special kit of Miss Pickford's own famous beauty aids, now on the market under her name. NEWS OF INTEREST ON UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

"No difficulty has been experienced by the commission's staff in handling applications for benefit payments under the Kentucky Unemployment Insurance La or in the task of preparing and mailing the benefit checks to those entitled to receive such insurance payments", V. E. Barnes, chairman and executive director of the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission announced after the cimission's staff had for more than four weeks been engaged inthe task ofaccepting application and completed the first week of paying checks to those eligible to receive payments.

"We have had less trouble than we anticipated", Director Barnes said, "and whole we had expected a larger number of claims than were received all have been handled with dispatch and checks are already in the mails to those entitled to receive benefits during the first payment week under the law.

It was explained that while a considerable number of applications had been rejected by the commission, the greater majority of such application should not have been made, as the applicant was not eligile under the law to receive benefits. Most of these cases were instances in which the aplicant hand earned less than was required in employment covered by the la wto qualify him to become eligible to receive benefits.

A delay in issuing checks to a number of applicants which also occured was not the fault of the commission or its staff but due to the employers of such applicants. In most cases the employers were delinquent in filing their indivdual employee wage reports with the commission and for this reason the worker's benefits could not be computed. This situation is rapidly clearing itself up and will be eliminated in a short time.

Other delays were cause when employers themselves protested payment of benefits to former employees. Examiners of the commission have disposed of such cases rapidly, most ofthe employees being found eligible to receive benefits. Less than applicants are now being penalized by delays in the payment of benefits because of charges brought against them by their former employers.

"Everything has gone along in a most satisfactory manner", Director Barnes declared, "and the commission is confident its staff can efficiently and speedily handle any situation that might arise from a sudden deluge of applications and the subsequent necessary payment and distribution of checks.

With the organization created to handle payment of unemployment insurance benefit claims function- ing satisfactorily officials of the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission have turned their attention to the general problem of unemployment in the state.

A program to find work for the jobless, whether they are entitled to unemployment insurance benefits or not will be inaugurated thruout the state within a short time. The commision's branch offices located in various parts of the state will be the spearhead in the offensive to fight the unemployment problem.

"With the payment of unemployment insurance benefits progressing most satisfactorily the commission now intends to devote a major part of its time tothe procuring of jobs for the unemployed people of Kentucky. This work will be carried out under the direction aof William H. Fraysure director of the Kentucky State Employment Service," V. E. Barnes, chairman and executive director ofthe commission declared.

Mr. Fraysure declared it was the intention of the employment service to exert every effort to locate work for all unemployed person in Kentucky regardless of whether they were entitled to draw unemployment insurance benefits or not.

It is hoped that every unemployed person in the state will register with our service. Persons drawing unemployment insurance benefits, of course are required t odo so under the law. It cannot be too strongly stressed, however, that the services of the employment service are aallable to everyone who is without a job and not restricted to any class or group" Director Fraysure said.

"Within a short time all of the commission offices in the state will begin an intensive campaign to contact all employers in their area to ascertain their needs as to employees. A registration of all unemployed workers at one of our area offices or with the itinerant services each county in the state will do much to assis tus in supplying whatever needs the employers may have. It will also find jobs for many of the unemployed who depend on their own resources to locate a job.

Employment service offices operating under the commisson are located in Paducah, Owensboro, Bowlingfreen, Louisville, Covington Newport, Frankfort, Lexington, Ashland, Pikeville, Corbin and Somerset. Any unemployed worker can register on any of these offices or with the itinerant service of the commission which visits his county one day each week.

REDS DISCUSSING PROSPECT. FOR 1939 SEASON

Discussions about the 1939 possibilities of the Cincinnati Reds usually contain pointed comments about the infield situation. It is a condition that will not be remedied until the setup of the Reds' inner defense is acceptable to the critics, and this won't happen until definite worth is proven in National League competition.

While all the shouting goes on about him, Bill McKechnie, who manages the Reds, is touring the Florida countryside with his family, saying very little, but thinking plenty about the problems he and his team will have to face during the season to come. His opinions of ball players differ vastly from those of the critics, favorable, of his team. He goes under the theory that a manager never knows a ball player until he lives with him and he's willing to risk his judgement in the cases of men with whose ability, habits and temperament he is more closely associated than any body else.

It is not necessary for Bill to put out information. He lets others do that. He belives it is necessary, however, to absorb as much news about players with whom he is not very familiar as possible. One of his chief sources of informations is the club's scouting department, of which Mr. Rhoderick J. Wallace is the head.

Wallace, who played 25 years in major competition, more than any other man in history except Eddie Collins, is a conservative gentleman of about 65, who hesitates to step off on a limb in his estimation of the possibilities of players he scouts. It was he who recommended Harry Craft for a trial in Class A two years ago after that outfielder batted less than .300 in Class C the year before. It was he who a year ago, told McKechnie that Frank McCormick was ready to go in the big show. And, it was he who recomended the purchase of Willard Hershberger.

Wallace's appraisal of these men was seconded by McKechnie, after Bill had an opportunity to judge for himself.

Now the scouts comes through with what he hopes will be his next successful prediction. It concerns a shy 25 year old Danish boy, Einar Sorensen, who was considerable of a hero at Wateloo, Iowa, last year. Sorensen led his team's hitters with a .328 average, led the second baseemen in the Three-eye Lague in fielding averages, stole 24 bases and was selected as the most valuable player in the circuit.

Wallace is high on Sorensen. He was highh last spring, and expressed himself so at the time the Reds Wally Berer. That deal meant giving up Alex Kampouris, and when this was mentioned to Wallace, he remarked, "We've got a better second baseman than Kampouris at Waterloo right now."

The foregoing is a means of leading up to the expectation by the scout that Sorenson will be the Reds. 1939 second sacker.

Let's look a little deeper into the past of the newly found infield dark horse. He's had four years of professional experience. He started with Mt. Airy inthe Bi-State League in 1935, moved to Macon in the South Atlantic League in 1936, to Durham in 1937, and to Waterloo in 1938. He's 5 feet, 10 inches tall, weighs 155 pounds, bats and throws right and comes from San Francisco.

And, why does Mr. Wallace like him so? Because he's smart. He picks up things for himself and doesn't have to be told more than once when he makes mistakes.

Twelve of the 14 pitchers on the Cincinnati roster are six feet in height, or taller . . . Although he is only 26 years of age Lonny Frey is ready for his seventh major league season . . . Bucky Walters batted .376 as a third baseman in the Pacific Coast League in 1933, and batted in 92 runs in 91 games . . . Dick West promising Redleg rookie hit 22 homers in 43 games for Dover inthe Eastern Shore League last year and compiled a batting aver. age of .434.

HARRY CRAFT MAKES GOOD WITH THE REDS

Cincinnati:—A year ago Harry Craft was an unherald Cincinnati rookie whose name broke into print when Bill Terry of the Giants asked for him in part consideration in a deal in which the Reds were attempting to land Wally Berger.

Today this same Harry Craft is an established major league outfielder with the Reds, is considered as one of the young men most likely to rise to the heights of top stardom reached by some of his team mates of last season, and Berger is a Red leg outfield mate, having finally reached the Rhineland in a deal engineered during the season, that sent Alex Kampouris to the Giants.

The 1939 optimism of supporters of the Reds is due partly to the expected improvement in the play of our hero, Mr. Craft, whose career rivals any plot conceived by Horatio Alger in his palmies days.

Only four years ago Craft played his first professional baseball game with Monessen in the Penn State Association, and only eight years ago he played his first game of amateur baseball. His participation in baseball came as an accident, and as means of escaping from the rigors track and drills prescribed for him by the football coach at Mississippi College.

It all happened this way because Craft, an outstanding grid player at Throckmorton, Texas high school went to Mississippi to major in football and minor in the work connected with obtaining an A. B. degree. When he matriculated to college, he never had played a game of baseball, not even the extreme sandlot variety of one 'o oat.

Craft was a football sensation in his freshman year such a prominent figure that he was being watched the year round because of his prospects of developing into a star varsity player in 1932. That's why a spring form of athletics was decided upon for him. Because he never had playe baseball, he was assigned to the track.

Two days of it were enough. "I'll try baseball," he told the coach on the third day. Right to the diamond he moved, track suit and all, and in a few days he was given an opportunity to play on the freshman team. Here's where Horatio Alger enters the picture: Craft, despite his lack of experience, lead the freshman team's hitters, played three successive years of varsity baseball, leading in home runs or hitting each season, and finally wound up as a professional ball player, and not as a paid football athlete.

As recently is 1936, Craft, then with El Dorado did not hit .300 in the Class C. Cotton States League. His record that season was quite similar to the one he compiled in the National two years later. He batted .286 in Class C. in 1936, .270 in the majors in 1938. He had 21 doubles, 13 triples and 15 homers, for a total of 51 extra base blows in 1936, and batted in 80 runs. In 1938, he had 28 doubles, nine triples and 15 homers, for a total of 52 extra base hits and knocked in 83 runs.

Following his mediocre 1936 season he advanced to Class A. Waterloo of the Western League, led the circuit for the first half of the schedule with .358, moved to Class AA, Syracuse of the International League, batted .311 then reported to the Reds to finish 1937.

If he improves in 1939, as he did in 1937, the Reds will have one of the leading batters of the circuit. Right now they have in him one of the best defensive men, and to prove it, we point to his achievements last year. He led all the league's outfielders in putouts, 436, and total chances handled 459. He played the shortest centerfield of any gardener in the circuit because of his speed and ability to turn and go back on fly balls.

Historic Hoaxes
By Elmo Scott Watson

"CAN the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?"

About 30 years ago a great many people evidently believed that the first half of that question could be answered "yes" and, for a time, this belief threatened to give Tulsa, Okla., the largest negro population of any city in the United States.

It came about when J. Barr Gibbons, a reporter for the Tulsa Democrat, wrote a news story announcing the discovery of a negro having an oil lease near Sapulpa who had succeeded in making a white man out of himself by drinking from a mineral spring on his lease. At first, white spots began to apear on his body. Then they gradually spread until he was as white-skinned as any Caucasian.

When this story was widely reprinted in other papers, an avalanche of mail deseended upon the Democrat. It almost swamped the Tulsa post office. It came from negroes all over the United States who wanted to know more about this magic spring, what were the chances for finding employment in Tulsa so they could bathe in it and enjoy its wonder-working powers.

Of course, they were doomed to disappointment but it was a long time before the last inquirer was convinced that he had been hoaxed

TEN BILLION PAID IN TAXES HIGHWAY TRANSPORT

That highway transport in the United tates has been subsided to the extent of more than ten billion dollars by those who pay taxes on homes, farms and other property, is the conclusion reached by three of America's most eminent and experienced highway engineers, in a special study for the Association of American Railroads made public today by John J. Pelley, president of the association.

For public carrier trucks of three-ton capacity and up, the subsidy ranges from $876 to $2,047 a year according to the report of Clifford Older, C. B. Breed and W. S. Downs, the engineers making the study.

Mr. Older, as chief of the Illinois Highway Department, had charge of the famous Bates Road Tests in which the fundamentals of present day highway design were developed. Professor Breed is head of the School of Civil Engineering of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Professor Downs is professor of highway engineering at the University of West Virginia. All three engineers have had wide practical experience in highway construction, maintenance and finance in various sections of the country

In their study, Messrs. Breed Downs and Older consider the system of streets and roads as a great public utility, of which every road open for traffic is part. "Each road and street in this public highway system of a state receives or delivers most of its traffic to or from some other highway," the engineers said. The state system as a whole, they said, "is not one like a railroad system" in that the main trunk highways are dependent for their traffic puon the use of city streets and secondary rural roads as terminals and feeders.

The cost of improvements on this system made for the use of motor vehicles in the view of the three engineers should be met by "an equitable charge upon the mo tor vehicle which use them just as the cost of telephone, electric power, water and gas, railroads and other public utilities are met by those who use their services."

That this cost has not been met by highway transport in their conclusion, after an examination of the period 1921-1932, for which complete data are available, with close approximations for later years. During the twelve years ending in 1932, the study finds that highway users failed by almost ten billion dollors to pay fully for the facilities provided for their use. For the one year 1932 the deficiency amounted to $662,000,000 a subsidy which was not diminished for the succeeding years up to and including 1937, according to the report.

The report also deals with the question of whether the "different types or classes of motor vehicles pay imposts commensurate with the cost of facilities required and provided for the special benefit of each class." The study points out that the overwhelming majority of vehicles have a maximum load of less than 1800 pounds per axle and an overall width of not more than six feet.

Additional costs incurred in building roads thicker, stronger, wider straighter and flatter than would be needed for vehicles of this class, and additional maintenance costs incurred because of the operation of heavier and larger vehicles, should be met b yclasses of vehicles whose operation makes necessary these added costs, in the view of the engineers.

From complete figures for the year 1932 they find that the subsidy for heavier vehicles ranges from $876 a year for three ton truck or a twenty-passenger buss up to $2,000 a year for the heaviest premissible truck. Complete figures are not available for later years, the engineers report, but fair approximations for the year 1937 show similiar results.

"The reports of Messrs. Older, Breed and Downs," Mr. Folley said in making it public, "does not apply in detail to any particular state. It does show the highway picture as a hole, however, and demonstrates beyond any doubt that highway transport is being substantially subsidized by those who pay taxes on homes, farms and property in general."

CUBA LOWERS DUTY ON MEDICINAL SPECIALTIES

Medicinal and pharmaceutical specialties in pill or tablet form are now subject to a lower duty on importation into Cuba, according to a 1939 received by the Louisville District Custom Circular issued January 12, trict Office of the Department of Commerce. The customs circular states that medicinal pills and tablets which are pharmaceutical specialities are to be classified under Item 100-A of the Customs Tariff and those which are not specialities are to be placed under Item 99. In order to qualify for consideration as specialities, products should be packed in small and uniform containers be registered for sale in Cuba, be labeled to show the name and trade mark of the manufacturer, etc. This new ruling reverses a practice which had been established in Cuba since 1900.

It is understood that the process envisaged is the one already in use in Germany and Italy, which has been uder experimentation for some time past in the subsidiary of the Cooperative Union, Nordisk Silkcellulosa already manufacturing rayon yarn. FARMERS ARE URGED TO KILL THE BLACK CROW

According to the Fish and Game Commission, the farmer of Kentucky is now playing host to one of the worst predastor known to wildlife, namely, the black crow. Their destruction does not stop with the out into the crops of the farmers, carrying of diseases to the domestic animals of the farmers and unmerciful other petty offenses that are traced back to tem.

Major James Brown, Director of Games and Fish, stated this morning a menance to our song and insecting that the crow has become such tivorous birds in Kentucky that numbers must be diminished to an equality with the rest of the feathered wildlife.

"In bringing up the problem of the crow, Major Brown stated that beginning February 15 and continuing through March 15 all sportsmen throughout the State are urged to hunt the crow and decrease the numbers as much as possible before the nesting season begins. Once the nesting season gets under way the numbers of the crow will increase still more and will be a still greater menance to the wild birds.

Gun Clubs, sportsmen's organizations, all other types of clubs or organizations and individuals are urged to cooperate in this drive against the crow.

Several clubs have already begun campaigns against the crow and are offering prizes of various kinds to the sportsmon bringing the most crows over a set period of time.

Crows are more or less clannish and when feeding usually place two or more guards at strategic points to protect them and this makes hunting the mall the more difficult. Large wintering flocks become a problem in some localities as the birds feed upon crops left in the fields, and if food is scarce they sometimes become regular visitors at livestock lots. They feed on dead animals and if an animal has died of some disease, they will carry this disease into ither sections and cause its spread. They kill kill and eat other birds rob the nest in the spring where they contain eggs and catch young rabbits, squirrels and other animals of this type. A crow can destory the making of a covey of quail or other birds in just a few moments.

"Every sportsman and individual cooperates in this drive against the crow, all wildlife will be benefitted considerably and especially the song and insectivorous birds," Major Brown said.

Abundance

IT WAS a desert place and there were five thousand to be fed.

A lad had brought five loaves and two small fishes. But a disciple said (John 6:9), "What are they among so many?" How different was the view taken by Christ Jesus! The disciples' thought was fearful and their outlook limited. They saw a hungry multitude. Jesus saw hungering hearts: his thought was spiritual. With supreme confidence in the affluence of good he looked to heaven, harmony, and gave thanks.

What a glorious proof was then given that divine law is ever operating in human affairs! The Master knew that supply is primarily spiritual, not material. In obedience to divine law he turned away from sense testimony and demonstrated the truth of present abundance.

It is to be noted that in the demonstrations of Christ Jesus there was no hint of insufficiency or of incomplete demonstration. The need was always met. There was food left over after the five thousand had been fed.

The impotent man was so completely healed that he was able to obey the command (John 5:8), "Rise, take up thy bed, and walk." At the command of the Master, Lazarus came forth from the tomb, "bound hand and foot with graveclothes." And to those who stood by Jesus said with authority (John 11:44), "Loose him, and let him go." Thus every remaining evidence of the claim of death gave way before Jesus' recognition, in Science, of the perfect man, God's image and likeness. . . .

What is the human need? Food, shelter, clothing, money—these are legitimate human needs. The Master promised his followers that these necessary things should be added to those who sought first "the kingdom of God, and his righteousness" (Matthew 6:33). They were to be added, but these things in themselves do not constitute the fundamental human need. Humanity needs to understand God. There is need for spiritual knowing, spiritual living—for holiness. We need to labor to the end that sin, greed, fear, envy, and dishonesty will give place to honesty, unselfishness, purity, and love. We need to know that, in reality, we are God's children, and that we are held in the arms of everlasting Love.

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, says (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, p. 494), "Divine Love always has met and always will meet every human need." We have only to be obedient to divine law in order to experience the fulfillment of this promise. The need may be for patience, strength, moral courage, honesty, confidence, or more kindness and gentleness in our daily contacts. Love supplies these needs. We can turn to Him in full assurance that the realization of Love overcomes envy, greed, cattleism, doubt, and fear, which have no place in His kingdom.

Lack of any good or needful thing evidences error of belief. All lack arises from the belief that life, substance, and intelligence are material, hence circumscribed and limited. Limitation is always connected with the belief in matter. We need to acknowledge this fact and all that it implies. No amount of material goods will free us from the belief in limitation. The remedy for lack, want, and insufficiency lies in gaining the spiritual understanding of ever-present good.

The real man is spiritual and perfect. He is conscious only of limitless good. Understanding this, one can deny the material supposition of lack. In denying lack and insufficiency and acknowledging the presence of spiritual abundance, the seeker is conforming to God's law—the law of good, which is ever operative and available in human affairs.

So long as we look to matter for our supply, we find lack. Jesus looked away from the evidence of the senses to Spirit, God, when he fed the five thousand. The result was that there was enough and to spare. When we look primarily to a pay envelope, a bank account, or any other material thing for our supply, we throw the weight of our thinking on the side of limitation and lack. In managing our human affairs, honesty demands that we balance our budget; but we can claim persistently and joyously that our real income is not material, but spiritual. We can look away from a limited sense of supply, and thank God for the affluence of good. . . . —The Christian Science Monitor.

KENTUCKY FARMERS USE BIG TONNAGE OF LIME IN 1938

Kentucky farmers used nearly a millon tons of lime materials in 1938 according to a summary of county agent reports to the College of Agriculture at Lexington. A total of 35,496 farmers in 119 counties used 810,314 tons of ground limestone; 3,486 men in 55 counties used 95,725 tons of marl and 1,349 farmers in 38 counties used 10,037 tons of burned lime.

Only one state uses more lime materials than Kentucky and Kentucky for several years has applied more lime per crop than any other state. Boyd county farmers last year used 841 pounds of lime materials per crop acre.

The largest tanniage of limestone was used in Christian county last year 1,102 men applying 50,400 tons. Hardin county came next with 35,027 tons applied by 1,850 farmers, and third place went to Logan county where 700 farmers used 30, tons.

Henderson couty led in the use of marl, 420 farmers applying 7,000 tons last year. Other counties using large quanities of marl were Lincoln, 6,800 tons; Montgomery 6525 tons; Marion 6,133 tons; Garrard 6,000 tons; Allen 5,300 tons and Green 5,200 tons.

Johnson county used 2,400 tons of burned lime; Knox, 1,956 tons Breckinridge 1,317 tons.

Washington county farmers have organized a dairy club to promote dairying in the county.

TOBACCO STALKS NOT GOOD BED FERTILIZER

Because they carry disease, tobacco stalks should not be used to fertilize tobacco beds, says Prof. E. J. Kinney in a circular of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture on the production of Burley. He recommends the use of fertilizers, however even though extra fertile land has been selected for the bed. The fertilizer should contain at least 3 percent nitrogen. Little or no potsh is required where beds are burned, but is should be included where beds are steamed. Three to four pounds of fertilizer per 100 square feet of bed is a liberal application; it is not advisable to use more than 5 pounds on any soil in Kentucky. The fertilizer should be applied after the bed is burned or steamed and raked into the soil. The circular, which deals with all phases of growing and curing burley tobacco, has been revised, and copies may be had from county agent or by writing to the college.

DRAINAGE BRINGS GOOD CORN YIELD

Fifty bushels of corn to the acre where only swamp grass grew before tile drainage was installed is reported by J. H. Wolfe of Rockcastle county, Ky. Seventeen hundred feet of tile were laid in 1935 at a cost of $130, plans being furnished by the extension division of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The land then was treated with limestone and superphosphate, and for two years planted to corn. Each year's production veraged 50 bushels to the acre. In 1938 the filed was seeded to oats and korean lespedeza. The oats were cut for hay, nd 18 cattle pastured on the lespedeza from July until frost, with the exception of two weeks in August.

TIME TO BEGIN TO FEED TURKEY HENS

It is time to begin to feed a laying mash to turkey hens, in order to increase egg production for the hatching season says J. E. Humphrey of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. There are good laying mashs on the market, or one can be made at home of 200 pounds of mixed wheat feed, 200 pounds of ground yellow corn, 100 pounds of meat scrap or high-grade tankage, and 5 pounds of salt. Keep in a self feeder before the birds. Better fertility and hatchability will be had if a quart of fish liver oil is added to each 100 pounds of mash. An average sized turkey hen will eat about a half pound of mash and grain daily, and a mature tom about pound. Oysterahell or limestone should be kept before the turkeys.

Creating "U. S. of 1960" for Fair Exhibit

A SPECTACULAR and life-like miniature cross-section of the United States, as it may conceivably appear twenty years or so from now, is being constructed as a feature of the General Motors Highways and Horizons exhibit at the New York World's Fair. Covering an area of 35,738 square feet and extending for a full third of a mile, the "futurama," as it is called, will be the most ambitious, animated scale-model ever attempted. Norman Bel Geddes, widely known industrial and theatrical designer, is responsible for the idea.

Visitors will tour the "futurama" in comfortable chairs, traveling on a continuous escalator-conveyor system which will give the sensation of viewing the countryside from a low-flying airplane. Each of the moving chairs will be equipped with its own sound device describing points along the ride. No detail of realism has been overlooked in planning the spectacle. There will be approximately 50,000 scale-model automobiles, 10,000 of which will be in actual operation over a system of superhighways of the future. Designed to stimulate interest in highway and transportation progress, the exhibit will show traffic-control towers, automatic highway-surface lighting, speed lanes, superhighway intersections, multi-decked bridges and other innovations.

A half million houses and buildings and over a million trees of 13 species are being used to create the scenes. The superhighways will trace over the "futurama" replete with a metropolis of a million population, two companion cities with a combined population of 800,000, and 6 smaller towns. There will be farming, university, resort and industrial towns; vineyards, orchards, mountains and pastureland; country club, airport at night, tunnels, dams, civic centers and parks, all in life-like design, color and motion.

Choosing early root crop varieties is simple; the small beets, turnips, carrots and radishes are the ones to sow in June and July for winter-storing, except carrots, Chantenay sown no later than May.

As to what bean variety to use to start the season, some confusion may arise, for in the seed catalogues that state the number of days to maturity all look much alike. If a gardner is fortunate enough to have his bean land ready in April, he should use Valentine or Tennessee Greenpod, as being more hardy than Stringless Greenpod, the variey to us from then on. If the ultimate in yield is desired, change may be made in July, but not before to Stringless Refugee or 1000_to-1.

Afterthoughts

By George

Overheard a conversation the other day while two people were talking about "jitterbugs"—as they kept talking about the modern music called "swing" a third person wanted to know j st what a jitterbug was—the third one said that they knew what 'Mickey Mouse' was and if the "jitterbug" was anything like the famed mouse—after seeing some of these bugs we sometimes wonder.

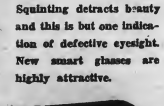
This is the month of president's birthday's and bank holidays as they go hand in hand. George Washington was noted for his honesty—Abraham Lincoln for his kindness and acts of courtesies—wouldn't it be strange if you would meet some men of their merits—or maybe if they would come back to this earth and see the improvements in the different fields and along the modern lines of transportation—It would be worth watching their reaction.

Inthis issue of the Advertiser will be the ad of the dance to be given by the Young Men's Democratic Club—this affair has been very successful and very well attended—in the past all who have attend have enjoyed themselves along with giving to a very worthy cause—come and let's make this a real affair—we'll see you there.

The average American in industrial or commercial life divides his 168 hours a week approximately like this —40 hours work, 56 hours sleep and 72 hours leisure—some people might not believe it, but nevertheless facts are facts.

Do you know the following slogan? "The pauses that refreshes" "Covers of the world"—The skin you love to touch"—this is not a contest as there are a lot that we do not know—do you? So long until next week.

Calling all car owners, calling all car owners, if you haven't your 1939 1939 auto license you had better get busy as you have but five more days in which to get under the wire.



Some people believe that the machine Age is the cause of so much unemployment—inthe least mechlized occupation the unemployment is the greatest—this occupation is agriculture—thefolling lead in order—personal and domestic, and domestic, and building occupations.

This game created a lot of interst among the other conference schools as Walton-Verona and Hebron are favored in the district tournament which is to be held at New Haven It was a preview of the play of these two teams.

As the set-up of all the teams in the county, it is going to be tough, picking the team that will win this years annual affair, any team in the county could win this tourney with the breaks. Lately all of these teams have shown fine spirt and played good basketball. If you want to go out on the proverbal limb just try and pick this year's winner

In the reserve game at Hebron, Walton-Verona defeated the Junior Cardinals 30 to 22. This was the best game of the two played, as far as the spectators were concerned, for the game was interesting thruout and it featured some nice basketball.

Six Boone county teams will play at New Haven; six Kenton teams at Simon Kenton; seven Campbell teams at Highlands; and Covington and Newport play at the Newport floor.

In each elimination tournament in districts throughout the state, both the winning and second place team will move on to the following regional tourney play. Sixteen regional champs lster will meet at Lexington to vie for the state crown.

The Covington region will find Covington and Newport, seeded under the 1939 system, in the competition along with winners and runners-up from the New Haven, Simon Kenton and Highlands tournaments.

Taking season records and the drawing of competing teams into consideration, the following seem favored to join Covington and Newpart in the regional play:

Boone county, District 33, Walton-Verona and Hebron; Kenton county, District 34, Erisnger Lloyd and Ludlow; Campbell county District 35, Dayton and Alexandrie.

After all district championships have been decided, those schools still in the running will meet at Dixie Heights to draw for places in the regional tournament the second week in March.

Grant County Man Acquitted by Jury

For the Murder of His Tenant, Jas. Markesberry

A Grant Circuit Court jury deliberated only 25 minutes Tuesday before acquitting R. D. Salyers, Grant county farmer, on a charge of wilful murder in connection with the slaying in August 1938 of James Markesberry, 35, Grant county.

The verdict ended the two-day trial that had drawn wide interest in the Grant county area. Eighteen witnesses testified.

Markseberry was a former tenant on the farm owned by the defendant. Witness said they had been "at outs" for several months and that the fatal shooting climaxed an argument over a coke stove.

Witnesses also testifed that the victims had threatened to kill Salyers.

The two met when Markseberry was driving his auto and Salyers walking in the opposite direction on the Warsaw road. Testimony introduced was that Markseberry stopped his auto and called to Salyers to stop.

Salyers continued walking but when Markseberry got out of the auto and followed him, with "his hand in his pocket in a threatening manner," Salyers turned on him and shot him five times.

Who Owns A Company

One often hears the remark, I wonder whom that company? This question is answered as the result of a recent survey by a typical American company to find out just who its owners are. It is known of course that the company president was no more the sole owner than is the President of the United States the sole owner of the country he administers. The company learned it is owned by the average citizen living average lives, investing their money in averag companies because they have faith in American industry and the American plan of producting wealth and dividends from honest work and honest products.

Many persons might be called indirect shareholders. They enjoy returns with actually owning stock of the company. It comes about, for example through them having insurance policies on their lives, or home or places of business issued by insurances companies that are part owners through shareholdings in the average company. Such investments of paid insurance premiums safeguard the ultimate payment of an insurance policy. Thus each policy holder benefits indirectly by the advance of the companies in which the insurance compan has its investments. The same is true in other companies. Likewise this may be said of those using the facilities of universities, hospitals, and clinical foundations. These institutions keep going onthe earnings of their endowments, realized from holdings in stock of average American companies. Partnerships in estates are another example.

A breakdown of stockholders of this average company showed that 4,300 of them are men. Some are wealthy. More are not. Then, there are 4,084 women —mothers, wives, sisters, daughters, sweethetrs widows women who are in business for themselves, teachers, secretaries clerks office managers doctors.

Thus an average American company is owned mostly by ordinary citizen engaged in the regular pursuits of life. But as the result of the ownership shared by institutions as universities, hospitals and charitable organizations the benefits are passed on to those of the general public who enjoy their facilities and services. This indirectly shares with non-stockholders the fruits of ownership. Thus it is not hard to believe the statement that the general public is far better off when juts the average business or company progresses.

The Local Newspaper

A recent bulletin of the American Newspaper Publishers Association carries word of the newspaper advertising views of Safeway Stores, Inc.; a large Western food chain. These views could be profitably emulated by industry and commerce in general.

In brief, the Safeway Company believes that newspapers of regular publication large and small, perform an important public service and that advertising revenue is essential to keeping price charged the subscriber low enough to bring the paper within financial reach of every possible family.

The company believes that when the so-called free circulation newspaper attempts to lure advertisers, using a lower rate as bait it is he beginning of a vicious circle—first, depleting the established publication; next through bankruptcy de priving the community of such news service; encouraging the free distribution paper into becoming a paid circulation news distributing publication followed by additional free circulation papers and thus completing the cycle."

Finally the safeway Company instructs it division managers to avoid using handbills and free distribution papers except when absolutely necessary, and then to use the job shops of local regular newspapers where possible.

Here is a logical and progressive policy. The local newspaper fills a vial place in the American scene. It is more than a business—it is a record of the times in which we live. Through news and comment it brings its readers knowledge of what is going on at home —as well as what is going on in the far-flung capitols of the world. Measured by the rigid yardstick of dollars-and-cents alone, the newspaper advertiser get full money's worth—and at the same time makes possible the existence of an irreplacable institution.

Postalizing The Railroads

The plan put forward by John A. Hastings, a former New York state senator, for "postalizing" railroad transportation, is said to be receiving serious consideration among railroad men in Washington.

The idea briefly, is to charge a flat rate for a passenger fare over distnce of say thousand miles, twice as much for 2,000 miles etc. Mr. Hastings' idea is that it would pay the railroads to carry full loads of passengers between New York and Chicago, or Chicago and Denver, or Denver and San Francisco, for a dollar a head. The same rate would apply to passengers who got on and off anywhere along the line.

If it pays to carry a letter anywhere the three cents, whether to the next twon or the other end of the continent why can't th esame idea work with passengers? They are easier to handle than letters because they load and unload themselves and don't have to be stamped and postmrked.

The railroads have already discovered that reduced passenger fares increases revenues. They made more money while the two-cents-a-mile rate was in effect that they have made since it was raised to 2 1-2 cents. They have learned that the cost of hauling a passenger does not depend directly on the number of miles traveled. If the train is going through, it can carry excess passengers without and appreciable cost.

Without going into figrues, it seems to us there is something in the Hasting idea. It would at least enable men looking for a job or going to a new one to travel farther and cheaper.

Spain And America

So many different points of view have been widely expressed about the rights and wrongs of the civil war in Spain that most ordinary Americans have not been able to find themselves sympathizing very strongly with either side.

The average citizen of this country looks upon the Spanish conflict as a war between two opposing political dogmas—"ideologies" is the modern fancy word for it.

The Loyalist government which seized power and drove the monarchy out of Spain is definitely Communist in its point of view while the rebels under General Franco whatever their motives may have been in the beginning of the war have had the support of the Fascist powers of Germany and Italy.

The ordinary American feeling that he wants none of either philosophy has said in effect "a plauge on both your houses" and gone his way feeling that the outcome did not concern him at all. Spain is such a long way off and hasn't been a figure in world affairs since she was defeated in war by the United Stes in 1898.

But there is an angle about the Spanish conflict which does in the light of recent events seem to concern the United States. If Mussolini who has helped Gen. Franco to win the war demands as his price the indoctrination of Spain with Facist policy and at least partial control of the Nation's destiny in his effort to restore the old Roman Empire he will have a ready-made sounding board from which to preach Fascism to all of Spanish America.

J. Lyter Donaldson, former state highway commissioner under the rule of the Laffoon administration, will be Lieut. Governor Keen Johnson's campaign manager when the annuonces for the office now held by Governor Chandler. Although Donaldson was ousted from his job as commissioner by the Chandler regime, he has been friendly with the administration. Political leaders seem to beleive that it is a good move by Johnson as Mr. Donaldson has friends on both sides.

A Live Wire Briar Hopper

An Explanation! Why I am having my Briar Hopper stories reprinted; all but a few of my original stories were lost in the flood, having a great many requests for the stories I am having them reprinted with the intention of putting them in book form with other interesting matter—Will S. Norris.

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

In the good old days when Kentucky gave large Democratic majorities the men who would havesuggested it to do otherwise would have been subjected to ostracism or disfranchisment. A good old-time evangelist was traveling thru Kentucky and met a riproaring Democrat on the train. The Democrat being an inquisitive fellow asked the evangelist is business

The evangelist answered, 'I am an embassador of the Lord and we will conquer and carry the world."

The Democrat said, "I'll bet you 10 to 1 he'll never carry Kentucky."

That reminds us of one of Kentucky's best stump speakers, Col. Ed. Turner who lived at Richmond; the Republicans like to hear him speak and would get front seats in the Amen corner. In closing his speech he would say; " In closing his speech he would say; "I now open the doors of the Democratic church and will further say as long as the lamp holds out to burn the vilest sinner may return. Come, my Republican friends, come."

If Col. Turner was here now, he would have a good many back-sliding sinners to get back into the fold.

HOLDING THE RUNAWAY

CONSIDER MERITS OF ST LAWRENCE SEAWAY PROJECT

Shall the United States and Canada build the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway? Yes, asserts Han for MacNider, former United States to Canada in the symposium in the current Rotarion Magazine. If a seaway is built counters Frank L. Bolton, president of the New York State Waterways Association it should be over the all-American route. A Canadian point of view is expressed by B. M. P. Coghlin, president of the Montral Board of Trade, who asserts the seaway is needed neither for transportation nor power.

"Mid-continental North America suffers from hardening of its transportation parties," contends Colonel MasNider. "Here is a great natural water route—extending 2,687 miles from Duluth, Minn. tothe Atlantic Ocean. By constructing eight or nine looks deepening connecting channels, and developing incidental power, the United States alone will extend its coastline 35 percent and enable 66 percent of the ships now entering its seaports to go directly to more than two dozen Great Lakes cities."

"I ame not an alormist nor am I given to shadow boxing every time I hear a sword rattle," declares Mr. Bolton, who favors the All-American route from Lake Ontario to the Hudson River. "Netheless, the cries through which some nations have been passing have compelled pacific minded Americans—believers in international goodwill and understanding—to give more thought to national defense."

If the United States were en broiled in a war, it would need a waterway over which it could exercise complete control, he believes, maintaining that if a seaway is built American money should be spent on American soil where it will benefit American producers and customers, American engineers and labor, American manufacturers of building materials.

Presenting a Canadian viewpoint on the St. Lawrence project, Mr. Coghlin asserts that it is commercially and economically unsound, pointing out that to the extent that it would be successful it would diver sorely needed raffic from other transportation facilities. In Canada, he says, it would result in an inordinate tax burden without commensurate benefits.

"So far as Can ada is concerned," says the president of The Montreal Board of Trade, "we may dismiss the power feature completely because there is now more hydro electric power available, developeda on undeveloped, in the two central provinces of Quebec and Ontario than will likely be required for our own use for generations." —From THE ROTARIAN MAGAZINE.

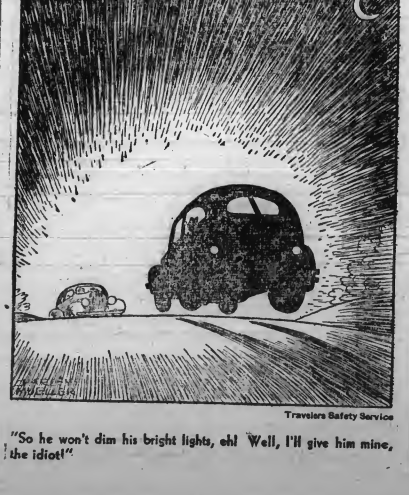
FISH AND GAME

The "Seining Crew" of the Division of Game and Fish handled 1,035,131 fry fingerling an dadult fish during the year 1938, according to the annual report handed in by Frank Phipps, Superintendent of Hatcheries and in charge of the Crew."

The state hatcheries located at Glasgow, Ashland, Herrington Lake and Williamsburg produced 325,286 fry and fingerling fish. The Federal Hatchery at Louisville contributed 121,000 fish and 25,000 small mouth bass fry were purchased from Calhoun, Georgia.

The seining crew also transferred 563,845 adult fish from over-stocked ponds, reservoirs and streams to public fishing waters that were understocked.

Te species of fish that were handledby the Division's seining crew were the large mouth small mouth and rock bass; newlights; blue gills; cats; log perch; bream, and crappie.



PPhipps stated that a more extensive stocking program was being planned for the 1939 and with favorable weather conditions, Kentucky would realize one of its best fishing years during the coming fishing season.

Mrs. Hom O'Conner Fleming county, has improved her poultry flocks to where she averages 23 eggs per hen monthly.

Preparations are being made in Wolfe county for the buying of 500 western ewes and 25 registered rams.

ALMOST A PIONEER

Muss Lucy Furma the famous Kentucky author once asked me whether I had collected the folk experiences I discussed in this column from my immediate ancestors. When I told her that all of them had happened to me hse could not believe me. The same thing has happened over and over again since I began these articles. This little essay is to show the doubters that I have lived through what would have ordinarily be called two or three generations, even though I am middle-aged now.

The Jackson Purchase, where I was born and reared, was opened for settlement in 1819. Much of it remained in primitive wilderness down to my own time. Lrake areas had been treeless plains, or "barrens." After the whites settled there and stopped the fires from burning off the praire every year timber soon grew and the hills and flats, just as it has alkays been found along water courses. When I was a very small boy, some of the older people pointed out to me the stumps of the first trees, trees that had been cut to build a milk-dam acrass one the small rivers Wolves occassionally were reported in the Tennessee River bottoms and were driven to the hills by high water. Wild turkeys were fairly common inthe Coalings timbered areas that were cut over periodically for wood to make charcoal for an old-fashion "hillside" iron furnace. Wild turkeys sometimes came by our home. On one occassion, mother got out the old muzzle-loading shotgun, laid it across the yard fence, and aimed at a wild turkey; not until after the hammer fell did she remember that there was no load in the gun.

Primitive pioneers were quite common among the population. I have never read of any kind of odd character in history or fiction that did not have his match in our section. The lank lean, hungry-looking fisherman and trapper, fond of tobacco and corn liquor, was a type that would have felt at home in one of Cooper's novel. The gunman was unknown, ranging from a dapper youngster with a new pistol to shardened old-timer who may have had a court record. Covered wagons passed through the neighborhood, going West. Ox-teams were common, especially in the bottoms when logging was going on Buck and Bawl,Tom and Jerry,and other names for ox-teams were as ordinary as the names of tractors or cars today.

Wasteful extravagance of natural resources was the common thing. enough valuable timber was wasted to make the present owners rich, even if only the less valuable lands had been left in timber. Hillsides that never should have been cleared soon washed into gullies. The little streams filled up with sand and mud, making hundreds of valuable farm acres worthless. The actual pioneer spirit was no worse there than elsewhere, but I could see the whole process of wastefulness from the beginning the tragic thing about much of the Jackson Purchase laid is that the sub-soil of sand and gravel needs the protection of timber to keep the hills from crawling away. The raising of tobacco on fresh newground caused much of this erosion, now so far advanced in many places. In my boyhood I often played in gullies some of them big enough to bury a dozen houses in. A few of the smalled ones have been stopped by wise farming especially the use of lespedeza, but some are too large for that sort of thing.

PROGRESS DEPENDS ON LOVE OF WORK DECLARES POLLOCK.

The United States' greatest contribution to life is the conception that labor is something dignified and desirable for everyone declares Channing Pollock, distinguished playwright, author and publicist in the current Rotarion Magazine. Work is its own reward, he believes, for nobody ever did naything well or got anywhere without joy in his job and that is as true of little jobs as of big ones.

"We can have neither progress nor prosperity, neither opportunity nor democracy," says Mr. Pollock, "while any considerable number of us regard work as an enemy, but what is more to the point, we shall find our dignity equally lessened, and our selfrespect, and our pleasure is living.

"There are dirty jobs, dull jobs devastating jobs, but I think there there can be few, even of these that do not give much return outside of the pay envelope," he continues. 'It really must help to know that you're pulling your weight, doing your bit, and holding your place in the world—at least it must help the man whose vision hasn't been distorted."

The man who doesn' find his job too devastation isn't likely to hold it very long, the playwright, says, for the majority of successful men started at jobs that may have seemed uninteresting, yet of which they were unashamed and unresentful.

"They were banking on themselves; playing a thrilling game; keeping one eye on the bolts, or the wastebaskets, and the other on the gold—notnecessarily materia lgold—at the foot o fthe rainbow," Pollock points out. They could say, as J. M. Barrie one did. "The most precious possession I ever had—my joy is hard work."

"I can't remember any good job I ever did that didn't leave me thrill ed, exultant, and almost hysterically happy" he observes. Of course there's no happiness in the other kind, though, mercifully we often mistake bad work for good while doing it. But when one perseveres, and bad work becomes good —that's the thrill that, luckily comes more thon once in a lifetime."

TON-LITTER CONTEST WON BY HARDIN MAN

Twelve purbred Chester White pigs that weighed 2,064 pounds when 180 days old won the 1938 Kentucky ton-litter contest for Jesse Shipp of Hardin County. In the following he relates how he raised the big liter.

"From breeding until about two weeks before farrowing, the sow was fed a small amount of corn, ground oats, tankage and a home-mde mineral and let run on rye pasture. At farrowing time she was receiving only ground oats and plenty of good water.

"Four or five days before farrowing an 8-by-10 shed was cleaned and disinfected. A rail 8 inches from the wall was put all around the pen to help keep the sow from laying on the pigs. By putting the sow in the pen several days ahead of farrowing she became accustomed to the place.

"A few hours before afrrowing, the sow's udder was washed. Thirteen pigs were farrowed, 12 of which were saved. Little feed other than a small amount of ground oats, and plenty of water were given the sow for four days. Then I gradually increased the feed until the pigs were about two weeks old. By that time the sow was getting about all she would clean up of corn, ground wheat and oats and some milk with rye as pasture

"When the pigs were about three weeks old I fixed a creep and put shelled corn and ground wheat in it. The pigs soon learned to eat and their feed was increased to all they would eat of corn, ground wheat and milk. A mineral feed recommended by the county agent and tankage were kept before the pigs.

"When eight weeks old the pigs were weaned and epmitted to run on pasture. They were hand-fed three times a day, giving them corn morning and night. After they ate corn they were given milk and slop. At noon they received ground wheat. The feed was increased as they grew, so as to give them just what they would clean up and be ready for more at the next feeding."

The Safety Sensation of 1939!
THE NEW
Firestone CHAMPION
The Only Tire Made with the
NEW SAFETY-LOCK CORD BODY
and NEW GEAR-GRIP TREAD...

NEVER before in our experience has a tire met with such instant and unanimous approval as the new Firestone Champion Tire. It's the Safety Sensation of 1939! Our customers have started a word-of-mouth campaign that is making this the biggest selling tire we've ever had. Motor car manufacturers have been so impressed by its superior performance that they have adopted it for their 1939 models.

Why? Because the Firestone Champion Tire is an entirely new achievement in safety engineering.

Stronger Cord Body. This is accomplished first, by the use of a completely new type of tire cord called "Safety-Lock," in which the cotton fibers are more compactly interwoven to assure cooler running and provide greater strength. Then, the fibers in each individual cord, the cords in each ply and the plies themselves, are all securely locked together by a new and advanced Firestone process of Gum-Dipping which provides amazingly greater strength. And greater strength means greater safety.

LOUIS MEYER
Only Three-Time Winner Annual Indianapolis 500-Mile Race
Champion race drivers, whose lives and chances of victory depend on tire safety, know tire construction and that is why they select and buy Firestone Tires for their cars.

More Non-Skid Mileage. The new Safety-Lock cord construction provides the extra strength needed for the use of the new, thicker, tougher, deeper Firestone Gear-Grip tread which delivers remarkably longer non-skid mileage. This sensational new tread is called "Gear-Grip" because of its unique design — it has more than 3,000 sharp-edged angles which grip the road with a sure-footed hold to protect against skidding and assure a safe stop.

Firestone LIFE PROTECTOR the Tire within a Tire
This amazing new Firestone development makes a blowout as harmless as a slow leak.

Should a blowout occur the exclusive Firestone Safety-Valve holds sufficient air in the inner compartment to support the car until it is brought to a safe stop.

Drive in today and equip your car with a new set of Firestone Champion Tires — the only tires made that are safety-proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway.

Panel an Alcove With Mirrors

MANY bedrooms have alcoves which it is sometimes difficult to make use of effectively. One of the most interesting treatments one can devise is to panel the alcove in mirrors of polished plate glass and thus convert it into a high point of glamour for a dressing table group. Illustrated here is a small alcove which became the focal point of interest in the bedroom through use of mirror panels. The cost of the above installation was approximately $35. It is permanent, requiring no redecorating from year to year.

WITH THE REDS

Paul Derringer to Bill McKechnie and the face of the manager of the Cincinnati Reds beams with a satisfied look that mades one realize that makes one realize tha Mr. Derringer rates pretty well with his boss.

Derringer was bulwark of the Cincinnati pitching corps last season, winning more games than any other National League hurler with the exception of Bill Lee of the Chicago Cubs. He also was second in the earned runs averages, and he was quite a guy in a number of other respects.

The splendid 1938 season enjoyed by Derringer, the best of his eight years major league career, came after a disappointing 1937, in which people were of the opinion that the big boy had started a downward slide that might force him from the ranks of the National League's outstanding men.

Bill McKechine was not one of these people. He told Derringer in he south a year ago, "Paul you can pitch for me. Now go ahead an do it."

Reason for the refusal of McKechnie to waver on his confidence in Derringer, despite the bad season, was that McKechnie is partial to pitchers who have control. A study of Derringer's record produces the most amazing record of control in recent Cinnati Cincinnati baseball history.

Said McKechnie, shortly after he assumeed the reign of the Reds, "I'll stick with the fellow who can get the ball over the plate. Look at Derringer's record and see who in the league can get the ball over than he can."

So that statisticians went to work and discovered that very few players ever to perform in either major league boasted of the control record of the big boy.

This record was improved upon during 1938 when Derringer walked only 49 men in the 307 innings he pitched. That's less than one base n balls every six innings. To date, his life time major league record, compiled in eight seasons of activity shows only 446 passes in 2,043 innings, an average of less than two per game. In 1936, he walked 42 men in 282 frames.

Added comfort to McKechnie was provided by the manner in which Paul was able t ocomplete his own ball games last year. No player in the circuit was able to match his total of 26 complete contests. That's quite a feat in itself, but not an usual as the most substantial part of it.

Twenty-one decsions were won by Derringer, and on every one of these victorious occasions, Derringer and on every one of these victorious occasions, Derring er hurled a complete game. He also went the route five of the times he was defeated, which indicates that he did pretty well some of the times he was on the losing side.

No wonder McKechnie smiles when Derringer is mentioned. Why shouldn't be, when Derringer won more than 25 percent of the victories credited to his team, and hurled more than a third of the 72 complete games turned in by all the Cincinnati pitchers? He figured in more than 40 percent of the victories in which only one Cincinnati hurler participated.

Charlie English Redleg third base candidate has batted in 100 or more runs during four of his last five seasons—Last year he drove home 143 men for Las Angeles in the Pacific Coast League—Prior to 1938, Frank McCormick played 26 major league games and averaged only one point less thn the .326 he hit last year—Jim Weaver has the best lif-etime won and lost record of any Redleg hurler, 57 victories and 36 defeats for a percentage of .618—The late Garry Herrman served as president of the Reds for 25 consecutive years, from 1903 to 1927.

BURLEY OUTLOOK IN HANDS OF GROWERS

Returns from burley tobacco this year are largely in the hands of growers, says the annual outlook report of the University of Kentucky College of Arigculture. If growers decide to keep plantings in line with last year's acreage, prices may compare favorably with 1938.

"Shifts to the use of lighter types of tobacco, military operations in Spain, trade restrictions and substitution of colonial produced types of dark tobacco all combine to pain, an unpleasant picture for dark tobacco growers."

Numbers of cattle, hogs and sheep are increasing, as a result of good crops. Dairy production also is expected to continue heavy. Colt raising, while increasing, still is inadequate to maintain present numbers of work horses and mules. Increased hatching indicates that the poultry and egg situation will become less favorable from the farmers, standpoint.

Strawberry acreage in Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri is larger than last year, and increased production may offset improved consumption.

"Farmers of Kentucky can look forward with greater confidence than they could a year ago," says the report. "Factors causing the depression that started in he mid-year of 1937 had spent their forces by May of the past year. Almost immediately there was a rebound in industrial activity and except for some hesitation at the time of the international crisis in September, the wheels of industry moved forward rapidly until the end of the year."

HOMEMAKERS MARKET STANDARIZED GOODS

Members of homemakers' clubs in Kentucky now are offering standardized products of their farms at curb markets in five towns. The products must score 90 or above and bear the official label assuring purchasers of high quality. At present products offered under the official homemakers label include butter, eggs, poultry bread cake and cottage cheese.

Through the extension division of the College of Agriculture at Lexington, farm women desiring to sell on the homemakers' markets are given products. Only good ingredients are used in making bread and cake. Eggs must weigh 24 ounces or more to the dozen. Chickens must be well-finished, tender and properly dressed. The cottage cheese is of good quality. Butter is made from fresh sweet cream.

The homemakers, markets are operated Saturday morning at Bowling Green, Frankfort, Franklin Henderson and Hopkinsville.

This plan of selling has a two-fold educational purpose: the production of products of dependable quality and assistance to farm women who desire to develop outlets for their products. The program is designed to be helpful to all elements of the community, and in all instances has the endorsement of all interests concerned.

Late for Trip to Gallows; 'So Sorry'! Commuted

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—Sentenced to death for shooting a tribesman in New Guinea, two native policemen almost missed the boat that was to take them away to be executed. They arrived breathless as it was about to sail, and apologized profusely.

The two were officers of the New Guinea native armed constabulary, and had killed the tribesmen when they found them suffering after a skirmish.

When the two arrived at Port Moresby, Papua, where they were to be hanged, they learned their sentence had been commuted to imprisonment.

GUIGNOL THEATRE DIRECTOR AT U. K.

Hundreds of letters are received annually by Frank Fowler, director of the University of Kentucky's Guignol thretre, the first University Civic theatre in America, asking advice on some phase of little theatre work. Most of them come from high schools and smaller communities in Kentucky and other states according to the little theatre director.

Typical questions asked of Kentucky's central source of theatrical information are: 'how shall we build the set for this type of play? "what play should we select for this number of people?". "we don't have much money so how can we best utilize the materials we have?"

"In Kentucky our effort has been to bring to as many people in the state as possible, the experiences of dramatic participation and play writing," said Professor Fowler, and "we have been trying to educate the audience of the state to theatre-going; and we have, for this reason in these early years of our career placed an emphasis upon achieving a high goal of production thus setting a standard for the drama of Kentucky."

Guignol theatre points the way in production, teaches direction, acting and advises in all fields of the theatre, following the policy of the theatre to lead, not only in organization and standard of action and choice of ply but also in method of production.

Elementary problems that arise in all production groups can be solved by writing the University's little theatre and stating your difficulties to Professor Fowler. Drawings of sets are sent to production groups that request them.

Stock For Whitley County

Whitley county's improvement program has included a little more than a year the importation from other states of 300 mares. The establishment of several herds of Milking Shorthorns, and the introduction of sheep on many farms.

Twenty-seven mares were recently brought in from Oklahoma, and previous purchases were made in Virginia, Tennessee and other states. The dual purpose cattle came from Virginia and Ohio.

To assure an abundance of homegrown feed County Agent Wilmot Carter arranged in January for the cooperative purchase of 40,700 lbs. of lespedeza seed with additional purchases to be made in February and March.

DISCUSSES MINERAL NEED OF LIVESTOCK

A new circuair of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture discusses the mineral needs of livestock. The first observation is that farm animal should have salt before them all the time instead of being salted once or twice a week. If the salt is mixed with other mineral elements the animals may eat too much of he mineral material in order to get enough salt.

The second observation is that complex mineral mixtures are not only unnecessary but may be harmful. If farm animals are fed a balanced ration or if pastured on pasture with some leguemes mixed in the grass they will need no minerla supplement. In Kentucky, practically all the mineral supplements ever needed are calcium and phosphorus. When needed or when the feeder is not sure his feed contain as much of these two minerals as h. livestock require, ground limestone can be kept before the stock in self feeder or steamed bone meal or both. If the animals need the supplements they will eat it.

Grains are rich in phosphorus and legume hay is rich in calcium. If both are fed no supplement is needed. Grain and grass hay require a calcium supplement. Grain alone requires a calcium and phosphorus supplement.

Distillery slop is low in carbohydrates and calcium and rich in phosphorus and protein. Alfalfa legume hay will supply the deficiency of calcium but there is danger of the animals getting too much protein as the legumes are rich in protein as well as in calicum and phosphorus. Feeding trials have shown that the best results are obtained, in feeding distillery slop to cattle, by giving the animals access to finely ground limestone and by feeding a grain to supplement carbohydrates of the mash. Thousand-pound steers will eat two to three ounces of ground limestone perr day.

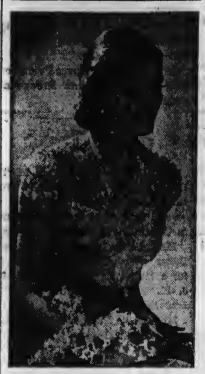
PUTS BIG VALUE ON FARM MANURE

A ton of far mmanure put on tobacco land may be worth $5 to $10, says S. C. Jones of the Kentucky College of Agriculture in a leaflet discussing the value, conservation and use of manure. At the Greenville Experiment Field manure increased the yield of dark tobacco by 510 pounds to the acre increased the value per pound by 42 per cent, and more than doubled the increased the returns from corn value of the crop. Manure also inwheat, clover and other crops.

Jones places the annual value of the Kentucky farm manure crop at 40,000,000. However he believes that $16,000,000 worth of manure is wasted annually. Manure is the farmers' cheapest and best fertilizer, he declares. Its use should be supplemented with phosphate.

A meeting of farmers interested in dairying attracted 200 person in Calloway county.

Oldham county farmers have placed orders for 180 tons of triple superphosphate for soil improvement.



HYBRID SEED CORN ADVANTAGES FROD GROWIN

With recent years the growing of Hybrid corn has increased by leaps and bounds. Better than 80 percent of the corn grown in the corn belt is Hybrid. Local growers of Hybrid corn have had 15 to 40 percent increase in bushels per acre over open pollenated types of corn.

Hybrid corn develops a still strong stalk with two or more sets of brace roots and stand up well a against wind and rain. I develops a strong root system, frequently to a deepth of eight feet and gathers moisture and plan foot from the subsoil, making a better drough resisting crop. It also produces healthier plants and superior quality, more uniform ears with practically no barren stalks and few nubbins. It matures earlier as the moisture content reduces more rapidly at the proper time. The stalks are more uniform in height and the eras more on a level and easier to husk.

Hybrid corn can be planted earlier as it resists cold weather and other unfavorable conditions such ts extremely wet or dry weather at any stage of the growing season. Hybrid corn will carry more stalks to the hill or closer drilling than over regular varieties.

★ FASHION PREVIEW ★

IT was black lace this winter. It's to be white lace from now on forecast the fashion experts of Harper's Bazaar. This evening gown pictured in the February issue, molds the figure gently and is made with a V-neckline and tiny sleeves.

Hybrid corn is obtained by crossing inbred strains. Greatly increased production is usually the result because the crop has greater resistance to plant diseases, insect pests, and unusually wet or dry season. The first year the process is started by selecting plants that stand up well, show resistance to disease, etc.

Instead of letting nature (the air wind) pollenize the silks from different tassels in the open fields this function is controlled by man. Paper sacks are used to cover the silks and the tassels, and the pollen from the tassel is placed by hand on the silk of the same stalk. This proces is repeated year afater year intil the undesirable equalities which show up in inbreeding have been eliminated and the plants become as much alike as "peas in a pod," being of the same size, same characteristics. This is inbred corn used for crossing to produce Hybrid corn. Inbred corn may look like poor corn because the yield decreases as inbreeding continues. It is also a slow painstaking process requiring the skill of specialists in that line of work.

First cross or single cross Hybrid seed is obtained by crosing two of three inbreeds and is too costly to produce corn for commercial purposes; therefore, a double cross is made by crossing two of these single crosses. Thi is done by planting every fourth row to one single cross or 'male strain," and the other thre erows to the second single cross or "female strain." Then the female strain is detasselled so that it must be pollenated by the one row of male stroin. The ears of the male plants are not used for seed. All of these steps must be undertaken in plots isolated 40 rods or more from any ohter corn and the detasselling must be throughly done rain or shine, or the corn is rendered worthless for seed. The Kentucky Seed Improvement Association inspects all fields of its members to assure growers that "Certified Seed" meets these requirements. The Kentucky Seed Improvement Association also tests samples for moisture content, germination and proper grading into four grades and issues a certificate only after the corn has met the rigid requirement of this organization.

The Extension Service recommends that all seed produced by commercial producers should be certified and that no corn be recognized as Hybrid unless certified. Only six varieties which are adapted to Kentucky are recommended to Kentucky growers by the Experiment Station and Seed Improvement Association.

The Garden

PLANNING III

By John S. Gardner,
Kentucky College of Agriculture

Last week was begun a discussion of the vegetable varieties, to fit them into a gardening schedule, basing their choosing on their various growning schedules and on ther other peculiarities. Peas, cabbage beans the root crops were so discussed; the discussion is continued with tomatoes.

As tomatoes are customarily grown the plants produced in the tobacco plant bed, and late varieties used; it is rare that many tomatoes are had before August 1, whereas commercial gardeners begin moving tomatoes full a month before. This is not beyond the scope of any home gardener.

If a hotbed or scol mearidDA. If a hotbed or a cold frame is at hand even of modest improvised construction (and it may be surprisingly modest) seed may be started a month before outside sowing is posible and the first-tomato picking date hastened just that much. Obviously, an early variety must be used. Incidentally, any gardner may learn of the possible ties of a hotbed or a cold frame, in Kentucky Extension Circular No. 276, obtainable from the county agent or by mail from the College of Agriculture at Lexington.

The earliest variety is Earlina, but it is not particularly a good tomato, the fruits being "eat-faced and fibrous. Scarlet Dawn is bette. However if tomato wilt has ever given trouble in a garden, the resistant Break O'Day should be used, or li a really fine tomato is desired, one that ripens evenly to a rich color, Pritchard. If there were only five plants per person, thit would be enough.

The main season tomatoes should be produced as heretofore, and if there were no wilt to the garden, Stone or Greater Baltimore could be used. If wilt is suspected, Marglobe should be the variety.

Too often, however, there is dearthe of tomatoes toward the end of the season or at least the quality becomes poor, the fruits small and acid. To remedy this, another lot of tomatoe plants should be coming on to begin bearing about September . To have these seed should be sown, in an outside bed, about May 1 and the plants should be ready to set a month or six weeks later. Again, Stone or Greater Baltimore may be used, or Marglobe or Pritchard. The Ponderosa is the sort that many gardeners use for the late-summer tomatoes, but Ponderosa is not resistant to wilt.

Sweet corn, really sweet corn, is missing from quite too many gardens. This may be remedied easily. The season may begin with Adams, which though not sweet, is about the most dependable early garden corn. With it, may be made the first planting of a sweet varity as Black Mexican, Golden Bantam or Indian Gold. Or, because most garden soils are infected with Stewart's disease, or wilt, which stunts these ing up one of the best dairy herds in splendid sorts the variety should be any of the Golden Bantam hybrids.

Good white varieties are Stowell's Evergreen and the new-comer, Aunt Mary's. Country Gentleman is too much likely to be spoiled by the corn ear worm, which enters freely through the short shucks of this variety.

Sweet corn does not stay in good condition long; therefore plantings should be made every two weeks through May and June and to the middle of July, beyond which there is not left enough time to mature corn before frost.

W. C. T. U. News

Solution of ancient social problems through research and education in the effects of narcotics on human beings is the goal which will be before women of Kentucky during national Frances E. Willard week, February 17 to 24.

Four years ago the Kentucky Woman's Christian Temperance Union set $9,000 as its quota toward a national milliondollar Scientific Temperance Education fund to be used exclusively on research into scientific facts concerned narcotics and on widespread distribution of these facts to the public.

The Kentucky union now is over the halfway mark, having totaled $5,350.50 or 59 per cent of its quota. Mrs. Ludie Day Pickett of Wilmore, state president hopes to see much of the remainder pledged during Willard week.

February 17 is observed annually by W. C. T. U. members as Temperance day marking the death of Miss Willard in 1898. As 1939 is being observed [illegible]ally as the Centenary of [illegible]ard's birth, the week's observances are to commemorate her work.

Beginning with city wide luncheons or teas on Friday, February 17, observances are expected to continue throughout the week. Many Protestant ministers will speak of Miss Willard or devote their entire sermon to her on Sunday, February 19th.

As usual, $2 of all money pledged by each local union during the week will go to the Willard organizing fund which will be used this year to help achieve the national goal of 50,000 new members. The remainder will go to the education fund.

A five-year Frances E. Willard program will be concluded on September 28, at Rochester, N. Y. when the National W. C. T. U. convenes near her birthplace.

Begun in 1934 immediately following repeal this program concentrated principally on narcotic education. One broad phase of the work divided jointly between national and state groups, was to provide scientific facts and trained instructors to carry out the laws of 47 states which provide for temperance instruction in public schools. These instructors now are working in many states, confining their efforts largely to teaching at normal schools. Material for use in rellgious education also has been furnished.

BIG BONE CHURCH ORGANIZED IN 1886

Boone County Churches Mark Progress of County

There are those living in the world today who continues to claim that the world is getting worse instead of better; that the church has failed in its mission; that the church people are hypocrites and some of these blatant folks have not been within the walls of a church for more than a dozen years. Despite all this, more thoughtful people continue to look at the facts in the case. The old saying, "By their fruits ye shall know them," is a good form for any cause to which human beings devote their interests, theirmo ne yand their prayers.

The churches of Boone County continue in their mission; their work goes on and not altogether in vain. From the earliest church found in the country, back in the early part of eighteenth century, the membership, power and good influence of the churches has increased and regardless of creed or doctrine Boone county's church fraternity has helped greatly in the building of a greater county and a nobler citizenship.

The churches of Boone county have advanced from am ere spot where there was a dog fight while our ancestors told of trips thru th ehappy hunting grounds and offered prayers for its growth, to many building noted for their splender, yet serving their purposes comfortably and well.

Rev. Froh came to America from Germany. He served throughout the civil War. After the war he served his church nearly forty-five years.

Burlington Baptist Church was organized in 1802.

We find that the Union Baptist Church was organized in 1866 with thirty-five members. Rev. Lafeyette Johnson was thefir at pastor.

The Florence Baptist Church was organized some time before 1855. The first building was erected in that year and the present building was dedicated in May 1930.

The First Baptist Church at Walton was organized at 1868 in a school house on the Beaver Lick Road at the forks under Rev. German as pastor. The site of the old church was where the cemetery now stands on Church street. In 1912 the property for the new church was purchased and one year later the work was begun on the new structure totaling a corner stone which is dated 1913. Rev. W. H. McMillian was pastor. The subscribed that day to cencel the debt.

The history of church organizations in Boone County is indeed an interesting survey and it is noteworthythat ourfore fathers in their hard-fought battles of existence and establishment for themselves homes in the early days of dear old Boone, devoted a mighty effort in establishing congregations and plans for worship forthe future.

In 1826 Alexander Campbell came from Virginia on horse back, blazing the trail with his preaching of the gosphel, along the banks of the beautiful Ohio, and organizing the first Christian church at Petersburg.

The available date onthe Lebanon Presbyterian church is limited. However, it will be interesting to note that it is the oldest church of that denomination in Northern Kenucky.Thi s church is located about half way between Crittenden and Verona on the pike and is more than 103 years old and still active.

In tracting the early church life in Boone county there is to be found only brief sketches of pioneer churches in all the settled communities of the county. Years haveb rought verysatisfactory progress in the church phase of community life in the country, its diary, of which we can only give you a portion.

In January, 1835 a protracted meeting was carled on by holding meeting at the various homes thruout the Richwood neighborhood. When we think of the old country rads in that season of the year we can appreciate the interest that must have been evidence to carry on such a meeting. The first Richwood church was started by Rev. Samuel Lynn about 1842. Like the United States, this church was organized with thirteen members. The first organized church was in a school house and Rev. J. C. Harrison was engaged on half time on a salary raised by popular subscriptions. In 1866 the church was served by Rev. W. G. White who organized a school called White Haven where many young people for miles aroundwe re educated.

Hughes Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church located at Beaver Lick was organized in 1878 by Rev. George Buffington, a local preacher while Big Bone Methodist Episcopal Chure hat Big Bone Springs was organized in 1878 by Rev. GeorgeF roh who preached in a bar room and organized and built the first church.

Boone County, Thirtieth In State, Formed In 1798

County Named for Famous Hunter of Early Period; Contains 160,640 Acres and Assessed Half Million

SHEEP, HORSES, POULTRY

EARLY SETTLER IS LEADER IN CHURCH AND COMMUNITY

BY E. D. SARGENT

Boone county, the northmost county of the state, and thirtieth in order formed, who orginized in 1798, being taken from Campbell County.

The first authentic history relative to the seed sowing civilization in Boone County was in 1739 when a Frenchman by the name of Lanquell, discovered Big Bone Lick, where wild animals congregated to lick the morass sediment of the great springs that figured so prominently in Kentucky's history as being one of the chief supply points for salt, by both the Red men and our pioneer settlers.

Daniel Boone, after whom the county was named, was among the first white men to try to establish permanent citizenship. His knowledge of the Indians, his fearless nature and craftness were self-installed arguments of his supremacy. The Big Bone Lick (Salt Springs) were inducements not to be overlooked by the frontierman, for from the water salt could be distilled, a commodity that in those weird days was listed with life's luxuries.

Early settlers found here earthenware vessels and utensils of Stone, also an old fortification left by oborigines and a large number of Mastodon bones, the place possibly being back in the miocine and pleotocine ages a lick, for these huge and now extinct animals, large mastodon bones and tusks were unearthed by Captain John Bullitt, in July 1773 and now repose in the British Museum, London, England.

One of the first permanent settlements of the county was at Petersburg, called the Tanner's Station, named in honor of Rev. John Tanner, the first Baptist preacher to trod Boone county soil as far as it is known to history. In May 1790, John Tanner, a boy of nine, was made prisoner by the Indians, and in the following year, Edward, (a brother) both sons of John Tanner) was captured and escaped two days later, but thru the Indians he learned the news of his brother, whom spent his life with the Indians and 1818 became an employee of the government as an interpreter.

The first white woman to visit the territory of Boone County was Mrs. Mary Ingles, who with Mrs. Mary Draper and her two little boys were captured by the Shawnee Indians and carried to Big Bone Lick from here by strategy she escaped, and by living on grapes, herbs and bark she managed to get back to her old home, having traversed a trackless forest, not even daring to follow a trail for fear of again falling into the hands of the savages. One of the little boys died in captivity and the other after thirteen years of life with the Indians was ransomed by his father. One of the important highways of the state has been named in her honor.

Pass from the picture of the vast forest, teeming with wild game of every kind, the few log cabins at trading stations, Daniel Boone playing a game of hide and seek with the Indians with chances of losing his scalp, to the tranquil scene of today, with the wonderful stride of progress as contract, it is a far cry and hard to comprehend.

Boone county contains an area of 251 square miles and approximately 160,640 acres with 149,169 acres in farms. The assessed value is of twenty million, half of which valuation of land without improvements included.

Two railroads and many line of scheduled buses furnish transportation. U. S. highway 25 and 42 and State highway 18, 20 and 16 together with a fair system of county roads give the county a good means of travel. The water course of the Ohio is available on the north which as also the receiving stream for the drainage of the county through it principal waterstreams, Gunpowder, Woolper and Mudlick. The yearly cash crop is estimated at nearly $40,000. Limestone suitable for rough building, road and railroad ballasts, clay, sand and gravel are found.

The farmers, with the exception of a few, are in excellent financial condition, the percent of indebtness being quite small in face of the years of depression that the entire nation has felt in the last year. There is eight banking institution in the county that can boast of a growing dividend paying condition. The county shows a record of fewer mortgages than sister counties of the entire state. This one fact speakes volumes for the prudence, sagacity and high standard of our citizenry.

The county is represented with several towns of commercial strength. Burlington was made the county seat at the time of the organization was incorporated in 1834 it then being as large if not larger than Cincinnati at that time. Today it is a hustling trading center for the farmers, boasts of the largest and strongest bank to be found anywhere in that size city, the usual run of stores, garages and business houses to be found in a city of around 500 population. Walton situated on the Dixie highway and served by the Southern and L. & N railroads is the countys largest city with nearly 1,000 population. Other towns are Florence, famous "Stringtown on the pike", Petersburg, Union, Hebron, Verona, Belleview, Beaver Lick, Hamilton, Normansville, Talbott Hash and Richwood.

The churches of the county show the predominating and powerful strength of the Christian faith of Boone county people. Nearly every community is represented with commanding church edifices, each being presided over by able and influencial pastors, who work in harmony for the good of our citizenship.

Along with its many good features Boone County may well be proud of its schools which have been capably directed by Superintendent, D. H. Norris, who is serving his second complete term as director of education, having finished the uncompleted term of deceased J. C. Gordon. The enrollment of the county schools near the 1700 mark and are distributed with first class schools at Burlington, Hebron, Florence, New Haven and Hamilton. Three room schools at Constance, Petersburg and Belleview, a two-room school at Taylorsport and a "little red school house" One room with sixteen pupils enrolled at Garrison. There are are two colored schools. One at Burlington and one at Beaver Licks. The Walton-Verona school at Walton. The St. Paul school at Florence and parochial schools. Boone county schools have been the winner of trophies given by the University of Kentucky in a number of years. In 1934 they won the first award cup for general excellence which indicates superiority of the schools in athletics, music, drama and scholarship over all other county schools entered in the contest. They also won the scholarship award for excellence in 1934 and again in 1936.

The schools of Boone County are fully up to the standard of any rural section of the state. The buildings are very good and every facility is employed—quite different from the old roomy log schools with log fires and slab seats, such as our forefathers used. Great care is exercised in the selection of competent educators, thus the best possible results as being obtained.

The picturesque scenery of Boone county is beautiful to the extreme. The pleasing story of the noted novelist, John Uri Lloyd, called "Warwick of the Knobs" was inspired by the rich landscape views of the southern portion of the county, and the silvery brooks and creeks that send forth sweet notes as they ripple to the river of nature. Big Bone Springs with its old style hotel and water known far and wide through their great curative power, is a place of great interest to the traveler and tourist.

A few miles from Burlington along the cleifs, one comes in contact with ornate creation of diversified scenery. Here, too, is found sparkling springs, with water pure and remarkable cold, set out seemingly without support and gushing clear as crystal is the great "Split Rock."

Criminal courts seemed to have pasts from the limelight of Boone county in the last decade of years. Legal business is the light in a much as litigation is concerning. But Boone County can boast of a county officials without exception

CARPENTER FAMILY HISTORY CLOSELY INTERWOVEN WITH EARLY BOONE COUNTY

NORTHERNMOST COUNTY IN STATE IS NOTED FOR

Kentucky was organized as a seperate territory in 1790 and was admitted as the second state to the union in 1792 and our family lineage of today can be easily traced to those years. Rev. V. William Carpenter the son of Jonathan Carpenter, an early Virginia colonist, was pastor of the church at Madison, Virginia, but made journey trip to Boone county in 1804 to preach the gospel to settlers. In October 1813 he moved here and became a regular minister. He was born in Virginia May 20th, 1762. When only sixteen years of age he entered the army and served as a soldier until the close of the Revolutionary War. He was a man of good education and worthy character, quiet and dignified, but always had a pleasant greeting for everyone. This must have been much of a soldier militant in his appearance as he wore knee breeches and gold buckles as long as he lived. He was a man of means, but very kind to the poor and the very soul of honor. He is buried in the old Carpenter cemeon the old homestead near Richwood.

Rev. Carpenter's journal now before us records the expense at 18 pounds or say ninety dollars, but he is silent as to the object of the visit. As several families from Virginia moved here the year afterwards, we are, no doubt, right in assuming that he came to Kentucky on a tour of investigation, and that those who came twelve months afterwards came at his suggestion and approval. Rev. D. Harbaugn, in history of Hopeful Church, says that "On the 8th of October, 1805, the following brethren and sisters left Virginia: George Rouse, Elizabeth Rouse, John House, Milly House, Frederick Zimmerman, Rose Zimmerman, Ephrain Tanner, Susanna Tanner, John Rouse, Nancy Rouse and Elizabeth Hoffman. They with their families arrived in Boone County November 25, 1805. It is difficult for us at this time to conceive the trails and hardships of these early pioneers. They could bring but a small part of their meager possessions with them and they must submit to a long, slow and dangerous journey. They gathered with their wagons on the banks of the Rapidan and first went to New Market, Va. Thence they traveled down the Shenadoah Valley until they struck The Daniel Boone path that he had made through the forest from North Carolina to Lexington. From Lexington they took the ridge route (the old Lexington pike) to Kennedy's Ferry (Covington).

who are gentlemen of the highest standard and many of them serving additional terms because of the high esteem with which they are held by their fellow citizens.

The greater part of the country then was wildnerness. These families however were furnished with cabins, with the exception of Geo. Rouse, who pitched his tent in the dense forests near where Hopeful Church now stands. Burlington, the county seat of Boone consisted of a few houses, a log court house and a log jail. Florence was not in existence. Covington was a farm and an orchard. Cincinnati consisted of two brick houses and two frames with a number of log cabins.

Here amid the beech forests, these hardy pioneers set themselves to work to help bring about the great results of the after years.

Along in the same period of time we find the Rice family and later day records show of the intermarriage of the Carpenter and Rice families. The pioneer, Benjamin was the father of Rev. Buford Rice, a Baptist minister born in March 1807 and died may 13, 1858, and is buried on the old Rice homestead between Richwood and Florence. His son Louis Rice married Mary Rogers and their daughter Lucy Anna Rice was married to John W. Carpenter to which union was born three children, Ben L., R. Whitford and Johnnie B., now Mrs. R. F. DeMoisey of Walton. Mrs. DeMoisey has in her possession the family and personal Bible used by Rev. Buford Rice, in his circuit riding preaching among the pioneers of his country. It contains the birth, marriage and death records of the family and is preserved in excellent condition together with the communion glasses and the saddle pocket bags that carried it. An undying memento of the pioneer of hundred or more families of Boone County present generation. Mrs. Lucy Ann taken as her second husband William J. Carpenter, Kentucky's pioneer minister.

'OLE MAN RIVER STAY 'WAY FROM MY DOOR

Thousands of dollars in damage was suffered by citizens of the Ohio River Valley during the flood of 1937. The above picture was snapped from the hill overlooking the home of Ross Athis, northeast of Big Bone Springs. The house in the distance, on the hill, is that of Col. Esch Baker. The Ohio River rose to a crest of 56 feet. Trains on the L. & N. were held in Walton until they could be re-routed. Many of the public schools in Northern Kentucky were closed, and mail service was suspended for several days. Many Boone County citizens aided in rescue and relief work, and towns were prepared to care for thousands of refugees. Warsaw had several feet of water, but more Boone county was high and dry.

Renaker, a resident of Grant County, was elected as the first Cashier, which position he has held ever since. In those days the Cashier had no assistant and was the executive officer as well as teller, bookkeeper, and janitor. The late Judge C. C. Roberts had a desire to learn the banking business and he was permitted to work in the bank for several months without pay. The bank prospered from the very beginning and paid a 3 per cent dividend the first year. The deposits the first day amounted to $10,297.98. After the first two years of operation the business had increased to where it was necessary to provide additional help and Miss Nell H. Martin was selected as part time bookkeeper and later as full time bookkeeper, her salary being paid by the Cashier. After a year or two under this arrangement Miss Martin was elected a regular Assistant Cashier and her salary paid by the bank was $30.00 per month, the Cashier only receiving $70.00 per month the first year.

It was not long until a second Assistant Cashier was necessary and L. T. Utz and D. B. Carpenter each served in that capacity a year or two, then L. C. Beemon was elected Assistant Cashier and served in that capacity until his health failed and he retired from active duty in June, 1937. In 1919 the capital stock of the bank was increased to $50,000.00, a portion of the increase being allotted to the old stockholders and the balance sold to new stockholders.

The first President B. W. Adams, served from the beginning of the bank until his death in 1912 at which time W. L. B. Rouse was elected to the Presidency and served until his death on March 10, 1927. At this time C. H. Youell was elected President and served until his death May 26, 1930 and on June 2, 1930 Judge N. E. Riddell was elected President and is now serving in that capacity with this institution.

Judge Riddell was the former President of the Boone County Deposit Bank, which institution was merged with the Peoples Deposit Bank in February 1927. From 1905 to 1927 Burlington had two strong banking institutions until the two were merged into a million dollar institution. The late W. D. Cropper was Cashier of the Boone County Deposit Bank with G. S. Kelly and C. L. Cropper as his able assistants and when the merger took place, G. S. Kelly and C. L. Cropper remained with the merged institution as Assistant Cashiers, along with Miss Martin and L. C. Beemon, which positions they now occupy with the bank, with the exception of the retirement of Mr. Beemon as stated.

The Officers and Directors now are N. E. Riddell, President, A. W. Corn, Vice President, A. B. Renaker Cashier, Miss Nell H. Martin, G. S. Kelly and C. L. Cropper, Assistant Cashier, with the Directors being N. E. Riddell, A. W. Corn, R. S. Cowen, S. B. Nunnelley, C. F. Blankenbeker, F. L. McGlasson, W. P. Beemon, Henry Clore and Al Rogers.

Of the original directors, but three remain on the Board, they being A. W. Corn, W. P. Beemon and Henry Clore. Two members of the Board, Mr. Corn and Mr. Cowen are over 90 years of age and continue to take an active interest in the affairs of the bank, seldom missed a board meeting each month.

The late L. E. Castleman was one of the original stockholders of the bank, serving on the building committee and treasurer for the Board while the bank building was being erected, which building is owned and occupied by the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

Two years prior to the merger of the Boone County Deposit Bank with the Peoples Deposit Bank, the Boone County Bank had erected a modern two story wire cut brick building with modern equipment including a 27 inch concrete reinforced steel vault with a Mosler Don-Steel ten inch vault door weighing about 20,000 pounds and the Peoples Bank moved from its old building on the corner of Jefferson and Union Streets to the new building located opposite the Court House on Washington Street. This new building is modernly equipped, well lighted, with ladies and gents rest rooms and large lobby, besides comfortable officers' space and Directors' room.

The second story was originally designed for a lodge room but at present it is occupied by the County Agent and his organization in serving the farmers of Boone County.

The Peoples Deposit Bank, the largest financial institution in the County, is said to be the largest small town bank any where, meaning of course the largest bank any where town the size of Burlington. The deposits of this bank vary from $950,000.00 to $1,100,000.00 with Capital of $50,000.00, Surplus $75,000.00 and Undivided Profits of $10,000.00.

Uninterrupted dividends have paid semi-annually from the beginning except for two years during the recent depression, when the Directors felt that all cash resources should be conserved even though sufficient earnings would have justified the declaration of dividends during these two years. Four per cent semi-annual dividends are now being paid. This bank passed through the depression without having to resort to borrowing money or rediscounting any paper, and no restrictions were placed on depositors' accounts. It also has a record of never refusing to make a loan to a customer during a depression or otherwise, if the customer could offer reasonable security and show ability to repay the loan over a resonable period.

The officers try to afford a service to the bank's customers equal to that of the large City banks, in way of Traveler's Checks, information on various investments, credit information, wiring of funds to distant points, safe deposit boxes, Trust Department, Savings Department, Safe Keeping Department, in addition to the usual functions of a bank in promptly handling deposits, notes, checks etc.

Aside from the many services rendered to the people of Boone County, the Peoples Deposit Bank has paid to its stockholders approximately $150,000.00 in dividends since organization and now makes an annual payment to depositors of about $15,000.00 as interest on deposits.

CONRAD ENJOYS GOOD BUSINESS

Few towns the size of Walton can boast of as complete hardware store as that of the Conrad Hardware loosted in the center of the city and dating its pioneering some half century back. This store at its original location is thought to be the oldest of its kind in Boone County.

Memories of the earliest citizens recall that the first firm located in this business was known as Curly and Edwards. Later two brothers became active in the business and it became, Edwards and Edwards. From 1918 to 1931 it was known as Frank and Fry. In 1931 F. I. Conrad purchased the stock of M. Frank and with E. E. Fry continued the business as Conrad and Fry until 1936 when Mr. P. R. Conrad the present owner and the son of F. I. Conrad became the sole owner.

This business has grown and today you will find a most complete stock of all needs in hardware line, including many specialities as the Perfection Oil Stoves and Alladdin Lamps and Wire Fencing. The genial services given customers by Mr. Conrad marks the Walton hardware store as the mecca for all farmers of Boone county.

On the present site of the Walton Christian church stood the first log cabin to be built in Walton.

Walton Methodist Church Established In 1879

The Walton Methodist Church came into existence in the year 1879. It was organized under the ministry of Reverend W. W. Spates. There were eight charter members, namely: Mr. W. Ran Rouse, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Rouse Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Coffman, and Mr. and Mrs Frank Harmon, and one other member of the Harmon family.

Services were originally held in the public school building for a few months or the year 1880 in the Baptist Church, and finally in the Christian Church until the congregation erected its own house of worship, known as "Walls Chapel", in the year of 1886 under the ministry of Rev. B. F. Bristow. The lot on which this building was erected is situated just north of the present high school building in Walton, and was donated to the congregation by Mr. John Wall Murphy and by his wife, Mrs. Anna E. Murphy of Marion County, Ind. The purpose of this donation was that a suitable memorial might be erected to the memory of Rev. and Mrs. John Walls of Cincinnati, Ohio, both of whom, however, were, then deceased and buried in the Wesleyan Cemetery at Cumminsville; hence the name of "Walls Chapel" was given to this first house of worship. The deed to this lot was executed on January 28th, 1884. A. M. Rouse, W. R. Rouse, and Frank Harmon were then the Trustees of the church.

This building was dedicated on June 6, 1886, by Rev. W. F. Taylor, then pastor of Scott Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South in Covington, Ky. This same minister also assisted the pastor, Rev. B. F. Bristow, in a revival meeting conducted in the new house of worship. Forty to fifty new members were added to the congregation at that time.

The pastors before the erection of the first house of worship were W. W. Spates, organizer in 1879, B. F. Gosling, Chum Overstreet, H. C. Wright, and Stamper Walker.

Walton Methodist Church building erected 1922 to 1930 at a cost of $27,835.00; houses all of the various activities of a fine organization. Rev. R. E. Rose is present pastor.

The present house of worship, located on South Main Street, was built under the ministry of Rev. John H. Lewis in 1922-30. It is a beautiful, modern, and adequate brick structure with ample facilities for worship, Church School work, recreation, and for the work of the various organizations of the church. It is a credit to the community. The members of the Building Committee were Rev. J. H. Lewis, Horace Simpson, Mrs. Hattie Metcalfe, Mrs. Pearl Johnson and C. T. Hall.

An art bronze name plate has recently been placed over the entrance doors to the Sanctuary with the inscription, "Walls chapel 1886-1930" to preserve the original memorial to the Reverend John Walls and wife and the number of years (44) of the use of "Walls Chapel" by the Congregation. With this larger and finer, and more durable church edifice, the present memorial is adjudged to be of more value than the original one.

While this house of worship has been in use by the church since 1930, it was not cleared of indebtedness until 1937 during the ministry of the present pastor, R. R. Rose. 1936-37 the wall of the building were treated against moisture seepage from without. The interior was beautfully decorated, the acoustics of the sanctuary were corrected by the installation of carpet, a coal bin was built, a Hammond Electric organ purchsed as well as 104 new Methodist Hymnals, and other things were done. In the meantime the remaining indebtedness of $2,200.00 on the orginal construction of the church plant was raised completely and it was dedicated on Aug. 8, 1937 by R. R. Rose, assisted by J. H. Lewis, D. E. Bedinger, John E. Roberts.

The total cost of this property was approximately $26,500 besides the organ which cost $1,335.00; making a total cost of $27,835.00 In addition to this splendid house of worship the congregation also owns and adequate parsonage located on North Main Street and recently equipped with modern conveniences. It is valued at $4,-000.00; legal steps were taken recently to clear the title to the original church building lot on which "Walls Chapel" was situated. This lot is valued at $1,000.00. The total property value of the Walton Methodist Church is, therefore, approximately $32,835.00.

The membership of the congregation has increased from eight charter members to 118 at the present time.

Pastors who have served the church after the time "Walls Chapel' was built and dedicated are:—J. N. Current, E. G. B. Mann, Oscar Duvall (died while here—a brother-in-law by the name of Prior filled the unexpired term) Cooper, P. H. Hoffman, W. F. Rowland, J. W. Cates, E. E. Holmes, H. R. Mills, F. S. Pollitt, Edward Allen, O. M. Humphrey, J. B. Harris, Will B. Campbell, H. C. Martin, R. B. Bafrd, C. J. Nugent, D. E. Bedinger, W. B. Garriott, G. W. Hoffman, H. W. Whitaker, Wade H. Cardwell, C. H. Rule, T. J. Roberts, John H. Lewis, G. B. Frayner, E. L. Ockerman, and R. R. Rose., now serving his fourth year.

The present lay officials of the church are: Trustees: T. C. Hall, B. H. Franks, Horace Simpson, Bruce Wallace, and O. O. Carlisle; Stewart, Horace Simpson, Bruce Wallace, C. O. Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Young. (Mrs. Young is church treasurer), G. K. Gregory, and Miss Lovenia Edwards, a former treasurer of the church; Emma Jane Miller is President of the Board of Christian Education; Clifford Pruett is superintendent of the Church School, Mrs. W. O. Rouse is President of the Ladies' Aid Society and Mrs. Pearl Bedinger, of the Women's Missionary Society. Mrs. Lulu Hudson is chairman of the Missionary Committee in the Church. Mrs. F. E. Bedinger is leader of the choir and Mrs. Bruce Wallace is President of Young Comers Missionary Society and Mrs. J. B. Johnson is organist. Two retired ministers of the Kentucky Annual Conference also live in Walton and are members of the Quarterly Conference namely, D. E. Bedinger, supernumerary and John E. Roberts superannuate.

At the present time the official name of this church is "Methodist Episcopal Church, South", in Walton, Ky., of course. Next spring, however, this will be changed to simply "The Methodist Church," since three Methodist denominations of the country have already officially voted to unite and the merger will be completed at Kansas City, Mo., in a United General Conference which goes in session there on April 28, 1939. The three denominations which are uniting are The Methodist Episcopal Church, South and the Methodist Protestant Church. When this merger is completed it will be the largest Protestant body of Christian people in the United States with a membership of 8,000,00, and with a constituency much larger.

The Walton Advertiser prints all the community news each week. Now 24 years old and recognized as a leading newspaper.

Boone-Kenton Lumber Company Noted For Building Materials

Allied closely with the growth of the sister counties Boone, Kenton and Grant has been the growth of The Boone-Kenton Lumber Company, owned by the present president and general manager, R. C. McNay. Its growth from a small stock of rough lumber and a few bags of sand to a stock that equals any builders supply concern in the state now includes two yards that have been made possible by giving service and ever keeping pace with the development of the field that it serves.

Fifteen years ago the name of the firm was changed to Boone-Kenton Lumber Company and the main plant and yards was located at 219 Crescent Avenue, Erlanger and the Crittenden yard improved in capacity and became a nice running mate for the Erlanger company.

The Boone-Kenton Lumber Company has by its high business standards proved an important factor in supplying the constant building needs for the northern Kentucky field which it serves and stands ready to meet any emergency that may arise and is willing to go beyond ordinary channels to serve its customers.

As dealers in Lumber, building materials to the contractor or personal builder this company has grown through its service. The president and general manager of the Boone-Kenton Lumber Company, Mr. R. C. McNay, is the biggest factor in the human side of this progressive business institution, both figurattively and literally. He takes a personal interest in every transaction of the company and with the assistance of a corps of highly efficient assistants. Citizens of this community have long ago learned that the Boone-Kenton Lumber Company can always be relied upon to look after their best interests in the way of lumber and building supplies.

Community Public Serviee Serves Boone With Power

An important factor in the economic life of Boone County is the Community Public Service Company which provides electric service to Walton, Burlington, Hebron, Verona, Crittenden, Dry Ridge, Independence, Sherman and a number of other communities in Boone, Pendlton, Grant and Kenton Counties through its district offices in Walton, Kentucky.

A net work of 165 miles of transmission and rural distribution lines carries electricity to approximately 2,200 customers in the three counties. In the past five years, numerous additions to the system have been built, making the area served one of the most thoroughly electrified in the state. Hundreds of farms and private estates are on the lines of Community Public Service Company, bringing the benefits of electric service to rural residents as well as to those residing in settled communities.

District offices of the company are maintained in Walton. Russell M. Hall is the district manager, assisted by a force of eight employes, including three linemen, one service man, a cashier, assistant cashier, storekeeper and meter reader.

A fleet of seven trucks is maintained to enable linemen to cover the widely scattered area served and to provide prompt service to customers, the local force is backed up by the company's division office at Winchester where capable engineers are available for consultation on technical matters. A divison line crew is also available for large scale construction work or for emergencies such as damage caused by ice on the lines.

Constant vigilance is maintained by the company employees in order to keep the flow of electricity uninterrupted in so far as it is humanly possible. All lines are patrolled regularly and any conditions are studied and parts of the system revamped from time to time to improve the quality of service or provide increased capacity. "We realize that providing electric service is both a trust and a responsibility," says District Manager Hall, "and we strive to fulfill our obligations to the public by providing a dependable power supply made widely available at the lowest cost commensurate with good service."

Walton Lumber Company Covers Its Field Thoroughly

Ranking as a distinguished leader in the field of building materials and supplies in Northern Kentucky, is the Walton Lumber Company, incorporated, with A. H. Gaines as manager.

The company was first organized as a stock company in the year of 1914 its promotors and organizers being all Boone county citizens with a keen sense of the future and development and building of homes, business houses in the community of Walton and adjacent territory. The growth of the business met success from its inception and in 1919 it was taken over and re-organized by the present incorporation with A. H. Gaines a native Boone County citizen at the helm, and today we find the same genial gentlemen guiding the Walton Lumber Company to greater expansion. The main building is being remodeled at the present.

A complete line of lumber, builders supplies, paints, hardware, sand, gravel, brick, tile and roofing materials is carried which can be promptly delivered by the fleet of four trucks in action. A line of refrigerators and kitchen cabinets are also carried. In fact everything to build the home from the ground up and ready for occupancy. Concrete and other building materials are also to be found at this concern.

Mr. A. H. Gaines is one of the progressive citizens of Walton and comes from a well-know Boone county lineage. He is married, lives in Walton. Is a charter member of the Rotary club and a booster for all that is good. Associated with him in the business is his brother Marvin Gaines. Eight men are employed by the company. Security Makes Growth Of Bank Of Independence

To recount the various projects and accomplishments of Kenton county would require much space. Consequently special attention is paid in these pages to the county seat town, Independence and the record of this county seat of government would be much amiss should we miss its financial institution, Bank of Independence. JONES' DRUG LEADER IN CHOSEN LINE

E. D. SARGENT

The bards have made Kentucky famously known for its "good whiskey, fast horses and pretty women." Boone county can well lay claim the two later honors and one only has to make a tour of its villages to note the pretty maidens and just a trip to Highland Stock Farm near Florence, on the Dixie trail formerly known as the "old Lexington Pike" to see fast horses.

Highland Stock Farm known throughout all turfdom is owned by Jerome Bristow Respess, familiary known as "Rome" to most thoroughbred fans and his personal friends.

Jerome Respess was born on his grandfather Bristow's farm between Florence and Independence November 12, 1863. He was the eldest son. Having brothers, Frank Breckenridge Respess, born March 14, 1866, died October, 22, 1914. George Corlis Respess, born March 22, 1868 and Charles Chamber Respess born October 12, 1869. His mother died in 1876 leaving Jerome a lad of twelve years. The baby sister, Pearl was left in the care of her aunt, Mrs. William Martin while the father made a home for the boys on a small farm near Union. His father, William C. Respess a native of Bourbon county, died in 1910. When the Civil War broke out he was one of the first to join General John Morgan. At about the age of sixteen Jerome with his father and brothers moved to a farm near Florence. Growing to manhood the three brothers, Frank, Charles and Rome became interested in horses.

In 1883 Mr. Respess started making fairs and showing saddle horses, this brought him into the owning and raising of thorobreds. Mr. Respess joined the ranks of owners about 1893 and for nearly a half century the name Respess has been synonymous with the best in Kentucky thorobreds. The first sixteen years of his breeding of thorobreds was spent at Woodlawn, Ohio, where he raised some of the best horses of that day. One of his first thoroughbreds possessions was a filly which he aptly named "First Attempt" and as a money maker she was an utter failure; however, this did not discourage him as he soon came in possession of several fair horses with which he won quite a few races.

Probably the best horse ever owned by Mr. Respess was Dick Welles, which established himself as a great racer by holding three world records for a number of years. He ran a mile nearly thirty years ago in 1:37 2-5; three-quarters at Chicago in July 1903 in 1:11 3-5. As a colt he swept everything before him and was a high class preformer until retired to the Woodlawn Stud which Mr. Respess owned near Cincinnati. It was here that Dick Welles also proved to be one of the leading sires of the day and for a number of years was listed among the largest money winning sires in the country. Billy Kelly was one of the best horses ever sired by him, and was one of the most consistent horses of his day.

Mr. Respess bred Wintergreen, the winner of the Kentucky Derby in 1909 and was the only son of Dick Wells to win this classic. The race paid $9,000 that year. Lady Lighting, the winner of the Cincinnati trophy in 1911 was by Dick Wells and a good filly.

Back in those days purses were smaller and few stake races brought more than $10,000 that today bring around $50,000. In one race Dick Well won $7,200 This was in 1903 when he was started fifteen times to go first under the wire fourteen times. This horse won over $42,000 for his owner and now rests beside the Dixie nearby opposite the home of his owner with a neatly inscribed tomb marking his last finish.

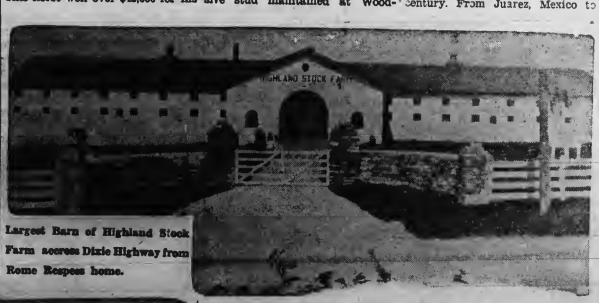
In addition to breeding good horses, Mr. Respess has demonstrated that he has no superior when it comes to bringing back "has been' to the races as we remember the case of Dodge, Casey Jones, Pury, Make-Up and others. For a number of year Mr. Respess owned a large portions of stock in the Latonia Jockey Club, and was one of the controlling figures at the track.

Several years back the extensive stud maintained at Woodlawn was sold and his entire stud and trained stables were moved to their present location a beautiful farm in the State of Kentucky He has a beautiful home situated on the highest point of the farm overlooking the rolling bluegrass pastures, surrounded by wire fences and dotted with scamperin colts, who will no doubt in future days do credit to their illustrat sires and dams who capered ov the same sod.

On December 24, 1911 Jerom Respess was united in marriage with Rena Becker, a native of Cincinnati. To this union was born one child, a son Jerome, Jr., or September 24, 1913; the victim of an untimely accidental death in April 1932.

Jerome Respess has fought shy of publicity throughout his life and though unassuming in his business and privat life he has done much good with the influence that has come to him by reason of his industry, perservance an knowledge of his business.

Starting with his stable of two "platers," the name and fame of Rome Respess has flashed on on comet-like path across the country's racing strips for half a century. From Juarez, Mexico to Windsor, Canada and from Agawam, Mass., to Oakland, Cal., Rome's purple and white silks have raced them all. Even he don't know how many times those colors have been in front.



During that period of continous ... in the racing game the usual "ups and downs have come to ... "Boone County Dean." In every case through, the victory famine ... soon followed by as long or longer, "on top" record.

Perhaps the greatest success, on a financial standpoint, has resulted from his activity as a breeder and seller of good racing animals. His most notable David Farm experience was the sale of the horse Murathon at a $3,000 profit. Numerous other sales and rades from the county fairs to the big time, have turned out profitable.

To Rome, however, there is no thrill like watching his own horses run, and it is in competition on the track that his greatest interest lies. He can recite for hours at a time the achievements of his champions.

PETERSBURG BANK MAKES RECORD IN 35 YEARS

Thirty-five years ago on the first day of July , 1903 the Farmers Bank of Petersburg was opened for business. At the beginning the bank was capitalized for $15,000.00 which amount was readily subscribed for and soon paid in by men and women of the community seeing the need and advantage of a banking institute in their own locality. Later the Capital Stock was increased to $25,000.00.

Much progress was shown in the years that followed and it was not long until the stockholders had received more than their investment back through dividends on their stock. Several years the stockholders were paid 20 percent dividends and in one year alone a 70 per cent dividend was paid. It is not to be expected that these enormous dividends will again be paid, but when the payment of dividends is resumed, it is expected to be at a rate that can be continued throughout the years to come. The Capital Account is being built up steadily and at this time the bank has assets exclusive of banking house and funiture and fixtures equal to $1.35 for each and every $1.00 it holds for its depositors.

The first president of the institution was Solon Early who at that time, besides being an extensive farmer, was also a magistrate in the Fiscal Court. The vice president was J. H. Stevens, a highly successful and respected farmer residing near Petersburg and who later held the office of President. These two men and others deserve much praise for the standards of safety, service, and accommodation, set by them in the first days of this community bank.

There has always been among its stockholders men of the same high character, having the respect and trust of the whole community, whom the stockholders have so wisely put in charge of the affairs of the bank.

At the present time the officers and directors are: James E. Gaines, President, J. W. Grant, Vice President, H. R. Hensley, Cashier, Bernard Rogers, B. H. Berkshire, W. B. Rogers, G. H. Grant, and M. F. Wingate, Directors. These officers and directors have at all times merited the respect and confidence of all with whom they came in contact and are are always ready and willing to cooperate with every individual or group toward the upbuilding of his or their worthy interests.

JOHNSON FAMILY EARLY PIONEERS IN BOONE CO.

About the year 1794 Andrew Johnson, the great-great-great grandfather of the present Boone county family of Johnsons entered the happy hunting grounds by the means of a flat boat to Ft. Washington, now Cincinnati and together with others built a blockade fort which they named Richwood and it was located between Richwood and Beaver on Highway No. U. S. 42. The spot where the Christian Church of Walton now stands was the location of a log cabin home, built by Hamilton Johnson, who as a Revolutionary soldier left Ft. Washington and settled in Walton in 1790. Rev. Lafayette Johnson, the father of Edwin M. Johnson, conservation officer and Walton resident was born in 1836 on a farm about a mile from Walton. He was a Baptist minister and served as chaplin in Captain John Morgan regiment during the Civil War.

His early business career was that of a salesman with national concerns and later as owner of an oil said service station on the Walton and Nicholson pike. March 1938 he opened the electric shop at Main and Depot streets and rapid has been its growth. General Electric home servants are carried, being the authorized dealer in G. Revolutionary Mansion Stands In Boone County Near Walton

One hundred and twelve years have past since we did honor to a visit of General Lafayette to the United States which included Kentucky, also Boone county, which was then Kenton county. This will recall much of the early history of interest to the decendents of the pioneer families in the state.

It is of special interest to northern Kentuckians to know that General Lafayette was entertained by General Leonard L. Stephens, at his home, "Locust Grove" which was situated on a large tract of land known as a plantation on what is known as the Richardson pike, one mile from the Dixie and a short distance from city of Walton.

General Stephens who came to Kentucky from Virginia with his father, Benjamin Stephens, the late part of the 18th century when he was a young boy, erected in the early part of the nineteenth century the first brick house in then Kenton county, to which he took his bride, Miss Katherine Sanford.

The bricks for the house were burned in a kiln on the plantation. The house originally had a large veranda across the front and south side. General Lafayette was met by General Stephens when he was enroute from Lexington to Cincinnati by the old state road and taken to his home and entertained. General Sephens then accompanied General Lafayette to Cincinnati. On their way to Cincinnati they stopped at a little log school house where General Stephen's children, Napoleon, Lucy, Statira and Lucien Stephens attended school on the Stephens plantation. After visiting the a beautiful little, blue-eyed, curley-haired boy, and finding his name was Marion Stephens, named for General Marion, who Lafayette greatly admired, he stopped and kissed him.

The decendents of General Stephens are now in the fifth generation, all of who have had the pleasure of being in the old house. Of the decendents, Mr. Benjamin Franklin Bristow, a grand son of General Leonard Stephens, still resides on a part of the plantation.

The Highland Stock Farm, on the Dixie Highway, owned by Jerome Bristow Respess, a great-grand son of General Stephens, includes the site of the old school house and is in sight of the old homestead.

General Stephens is said to have owned the first carriage in Northern Kentucky and drove through to Frankfort when he was in the State Senate.

FOUGHT IN REVOLUTIONARY

A man named Jenkins settled at Big Bone Springs after serving in the Revolutionary War and, participating at the Hull surrender. He married a Boone county girl from the Big Bone neighborhood, Adnah Helm. Their daughter, Harriet Jenkins was born at Big Boone August 1827 and records of Warsaw county show that she was married to William Craig in 1849 in Boone county. Edith Craig Roberts is a granddaughter now living in Warsaw.

Florence Village Known All Over The World

In the early days Campbell county composed all the territory on the east and west banks of the Licking before Boone was made a seperate county the present village of Florence was known as Maddensown being named for its pioneer physican, Dr. Madden.

After on the name was changed to Connersville, named for Paschel Conner, an early settler. It was known as Connersville until 1830 when the town was incorporated by the Kentucky legislature and named Florence. 1851 the Burlington and Florence turnpike was completed to take the place of an old mud road connecting the two towns.

The history and lore connected with Florence would take pages to tell. To its nativity is credited the early life of he county's famous man, Prof. John Uri Lloyd. Voluumns could be written around the life of his man, beginning with his boyhood days in Boone County, continuing through the achievements of his mature years that are known throughout the country.

John Uri Lloyd was born at West Bloomfield, N. Y., on the nineteenth day of April, 1948. At the age of five his parents came to Kentucky and located at Burlington where the father was making a survey for a railroad from Cincinnati to Louisville. For some reasop the railroad never materialized and the Lloyd family moved to Petersburg, than to Florence where John Uri Lloyd spent most of his boyhood and later made the town famous with his book on fold lore, "Stringtown-on-the-Pike".

The moving of the Lloyd family to Florence was occassioned by the fact that the parents taught school in Florence.

DIXIE STATE BANK

The banking history of Walton starts back in 1890 when the Walton Deposits Bank was organized as the first banking institution, in fact, the only bank between Covington and Williamstown. This institution was located in the Farris Restaurant building on Main street and was later converted into Walton Bank and Trust Company when organized as a new bank in 1907. Then came Walton Equitable Bank which was the result of the merger of The Equitable Bank and Trust Company and the Walton Bank and Trust Company in February 1927. After the merger had been affected a beautiful new home for the bank was erected at a cost of $52,000.00, this is the present home of the Dixie State Bank. It is a two story limestone and brick building with one hundred foot frontage on Walton's main street. In the mean time the Dixie State Bank was being organized and a new building erected on Main street along side the Equitable Bank and Trust Company which opened for business in February 1938 . . . The Walton Equitable Bank moved to their new building as soon as completed. The growth of the Dixie State Bank was rapid in this period and in July 1936 the assets and building of the Walton Equitable Bank were purchased and the two banks merged as the Dixie State moving to the former banks location, where today you will find continued success and growth through the capable management of efficient officers and directors.

It is an institution of constructive enterprise. Morever, such a career as is his institution's privilege to possess is another example that confirms the truth of the fact that "Success comes by service given."

There has been four beautiful trophies for the two winners and the runners-up. The winners trophy for the "varsity squads is said to be a dandy. It stands about 20 inches high, the figure of a basketball player in the act of shooting a goal which is mounted on an ivory base.

Afterthoughts

By George

With this issue, we welcome the first March weather and look forward to the end of the month, as this is supposed to be one that ushers in the beautiful spring.

After several years of struggle the Spanish Loyalist Government has decided to call its quits, and surrender to the Insurgents—this war caused a lot of suffering and misery among the people of Spain—it will take quite a few years to recuperate, regardless who is the head of it—we hope other countries would profit by this conflict.

Tonight the basketball tournaments will get underway in almost every district—the 33rd District starts at New Haven tonight with the "B" teams prying off the lid—in other districts will be the same as here, for every team will be striving to go to the final and the rewards further on.

This time of the year, when you read about the different big-league teams in spring training you wish that you could be down in the Sunny south" and basking in the warm sunshine with the athletes that will represent the differen eams when tee season opens.

We took in the Democrat Hop Saturday night and was surprised as to the crowd that braved the weather to come out and enjoy themselves—the floor show was entertaining and the music was good—we also met some old acquaintances that we had not seen for some time—everyone that didn't attend missed a grand time.

The first of the month always brings along some grief—such as the first of month's bills and wonder what you will use for money—we wonder how many people fell in this bracket.

This week we hope that the paper will look better, as the press has been worked on somewhat but it will take a week or two before it will be adjusted correctly—with a few more minor changes we will be able to put out a nice paper out as before.

Some of our subscribers have written in and told us that were not getting their paper or that the label had not been changed—an we appreciate this gesture as it will help get the situation cleared up—we are rapidly getting the muddle straightened out.

We had the pleasure of taking part in the Independent basketball tournament held at New Liberty, as a member of the Walton team—having seen quite a bit of refreeing in different places and of all kinds of games this tournament was poorly called—not that Walton was defeated, but the games that we saw and didn't participate—we do not think that the official will ever go far as a refree.

Kentucky Bankers To Give Prizes

To High School Students In Form of Scholorships

Mr. Ralph Fontaine, Secretary of the Kentucky Bankers Association, Louisville, was calling on the officials of the Peoples Deposit Bank last Thursday in an effort to create interest among the high school students of Boone County to enter the speaking contest sponsored by the Kentucky Bankers Association in which a $600.00 scholarship will be the first prize to the winner of the state finals, second prize is $100.00 and third prize $50.00.

Mr. Fontaine stated that high schools in other counties of the state had entered 100 per cent and could not understand why the high schools of Boone county had not entered this contest. He said that 90 percent of the high schools that had enrolled in the contest did not have the advantage of an elocution teacher and that it was not so much the delivery of the address that counted as it was the thought presented.

A conference was held with the county school superintendent and the eight banks of Boone county agreed to offer $50.00 in cash to the three best orations delivered in the Boone county contest, to be divided $25.00 for first, 15.00 second and $10.00 third. The one winning first prize will be eligible to compete with the winners in the other counties in group five, composed of Boone, Bracken, Campbell, Carroll, Fleming, Gallatin Grant, Kenton, Lewis, Mason, Oldham, Pendleton, Robertson and Trimble counties. The winner in this group will compete in the state finals this summer for the grand prize.

Under this arrangement three Boone county high school students are certain to share in the $50.00 prize offered by the banks of Boone county and do not compete with any one outside of Boone county. The winner receiving the first Boone county prize will later compete in the group contest.

The subject is "The value of the Bank to the Community."

Any banker in Boone county will gladly take the time to give any student all information concerning the operation of banks. It is suggested that the high school principal select three or four students from his particular school and assist them in securing information from local banks and have them write a theme on the above subject and then select the best paper written and enter this student in the county contest as the representative of this particular school.

Six high schools in Boone county are eligible to compete and three of them are certain to win the $50.000 in cash offered by the Boone county banks. Let's enter the contest.

Democratic Dance A Big Success

The dance given by the Young Men's Democratic Club of Boone county, was well attended and every one seemed to enjoy themselves.

The entertainment, in addition to the splendid music of Ray Raymond and his orchestra, featured a fine-floor show topped off with a grand performance by the roller skating team. This act was very good and it was one that takes quite a bit of practice in order to work out the different routines that were presented. The acrobatic dancing was cleverly done

The turn-out was surprisingly good considering the weather condition. The committee in charge was very well pleased with the attendance.

Farmer Four Miles East of Williamstown Fatally Wounded

By Tenant Following Argument Concerning the Moving of a Wire

Tenant is Shot By Dead Man's Son With Shotgun

An argument over the removal of a top strand of babed wire from a fence on the property of James Sade, 35, farmer resulted in the fatal shooting Tuesday noon of William V. Hutchenson, 69, farmer four miles east of Williamstown.

Sgt. Osborne said that George Hutchison a son of the victim was a tenant on the Sade farm property for two years and was moving to a new home Tuesday. An argument developed between Sade and the elder Hutchison, he said, concerning the removal of a strand of barb-wire which was placed atop a fence when George Hutchison leased the property two years ago.

Sergt. Osborne said that he was told Sade pulled a pistol from his pocket and fired twice at the elder Hutchison, the bullets striking him in the back.

Hearing the shot, James Hutchison, who resided 500 yards from the scene came to the assisstince of his father and fired at Sade after the latter had shot at him, Sergt. Osborne stated.

After the shooting Kells removed the aged Hutchison to the office of Dr. R. E. Kinsey, Williamstown where he died within an hour.

Sade, his right elbow torn off by tee shotgun charge and his side and face lacerated was removed to St Elizabeth Hospital, Covington.

Tuesday night, hospital authorities called Kenton County deputy sheriffs as Sade attempted to make his escape from the hospital. He heard that a relative of the slain man had come to visit him. Upon arrival the relative was not permitted to see Sade.

When the Kenton county authorities arrived they shackled Sade to his bed.

On Wednesday, Sheriff E. A. Thomas of Pendleton county was to serve a murder warrant on Sade at the hospital.

The relatives presence was not explained, but Pendleton county authorities said they heard no threat agaist Sade.

Erlanger Sewerage Plan Is Problem

Loan Grant Was Not Sufficient Amount

The problem of the method to be used in financing completion of the Erlanger sewer system probably will not be solved at the Wednesday night meeting, City Attorney Ervin L Bramlage has revealed.

Erlanger trustees recenty proposed a $130,000 sewer revenue bond issue to raise the city's share of the cost. An injunction suit to halt such a sale now pending in Kenton Circuit Court.

At a recent mass meeting of citizens at Lloyd High school, Erlanger Mr. Bramlage said he was informed the project orginally was started on an assessment basis.

Action on that information, city officials have written to PWA headquarters at Atlanta asking a copy of the records on which the original project was begun in 1935.

No answer has been received which indicates the job was started on the assessment plan it will take some time before work could be resumed on that basis now he added.

Each property owner would be required under the proposed assessment plan to pay $2 a front foot before the work was resumed. That money would be used in addition to a WPA grant of approximately $70,000 it was said.

Regardless the question as to what method of financing was first planned for the work Mr. Bramlage said that was "no assessment ordinance for the work in the city records when the present board took office."

He said that he was told however that a copy of the ordinance said to have been passed could be found in PWA headquarters at Atlanta and was awaiting further word from his letter to officials there.

Keen Johnson Praises Program

Splendid praise was bestowed on the Farm Bureau's present legislative problem and past accomplishments in securing constructive legislation, in a recent editorial in the Richmond Daily Register. This editorial is unusually significant since it was written by Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson. As President of the Senate, Governor John has seen at first hand the constructive influence of a powerful farm organization, when laws are being enacted and when our economic structure is being built.

Keen Johnson is generous and "knows whereof he speaks" when he writes:

"It was a fine thoughtful legislative program which received approval of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation at its convention yesterday. It is extensive in scope and generally sound in detail.

There are phases of it which Farm Bureau leaders realize are not possible of immediate attainment, notably the rewriting of the Kentucky constitution in a constitutional convention. But as important groups of thoughtful citizens, such as contained in the Farm Bureau, focus public attentionupon such problems, thought concerning them is provoked and the day of their solution is brought nearer.

We have had opportunity to come in contact with legislative representatives of the Farm Bureau during sessions of the General Assembly, especially Ben Kilgore, executive secretary, and have been impressed with the sincerity and earnestness of the group. The legislative program to which the Farm Bureau committed itself in recent years has in the main been enacted into law.

Creation of the Department of Rural Highways with division of two million dollars annually among the counties for improving roads off the main highways was one of the most important proposals of the Farm Bureau.

Increased per capita for public schools, enactment of a state income tax, legislation to make available advantages of rural electrification, legislation to permit Kentucky farmers to take advantage of the federaly law under which loans could be obtained on corn, properly sealed in cribs as provided by the act, are among the more important legislative phases of previously drafted Farm Bureau programs that are now on the statute books."

Our members can take great pride in this merited praise of their constructive cooperative thought and of their powerful united action. They should also cherish their greater opportunity and responsibility to "focus public attention upon" and "build public sentiment for" the solution of even more important problems in the interest of all the people in our great Commonwealth.

Industry and Agriculture

The best news that has come out in a long time is the report from Detroit that the big automobile companies are calling men back to work and that the rains have changed the "dust bowl" into productive farms which promise the largest yields of wheat in a quarter of a century.

The motor manufacturers reduced their output for 1938 with the result that most of the stock is practically sold out and in the higher priced car buyers are gobbling up the best of the used cars of last year's models. Now the makers of the popular priced cars are looking forward to larger sales than ever of their new models, and are preparing to put them on the market earlier than usual.

One of the reasons for the car-builders' optimism is the certainty that there will be many millions more dollars flowing into the pockets of farmers as this year's bounteous harvest is marketed. That much of this money will be spent for new cars is regarded as certain, for the motor car is as essential to farm life as the horse and buggy used to be. Probably the worst examples of wornout cars still doing duty today can be found in the regions where farmers have seen little or no money coming in for the past few years.

Prosperity in America has always been measured by the productivity of our farms and the ability of the rural population to buy the products of our factories. That is as true today as it ver was, through the proportion of farm folk to city dwellers continues to diminish.

There are still more than six million families living on farms, twice as many more living in rural communities and small towns dependent in large measures upon the prosperity of the farmer. And the automobile industrisonly one of many equally dependent on farming.

Towns the size of Walton gain about 95 percent of its business from farmers, in the surrounding territory, and realize what it means when the farmer produces a good crop and receives fair prices for what he has to sell.

Hopes For Improved Safety

There 30 States that do not require applicants for drivers licenses to be examined for competency; eight do not require licenses to operate a car; in six States no licenses are issued, and in five more States only the "unfit" are required to pass tests for driving. Only eight States enforce a test of vision, and but fifteen require knowledge of traffic laws.

Now dual highways are great safeguards in automobiling, and this form of construction is increasing —as it should.

Laws and rules for safety multiply. While everybody knows that automobiles have been made safer and simpler it is also common knowledge that human beings who drive cars cause most of the accidents by careless driving.

Supplementing activities like the School Patrol brings results as children grow. A recent Government statement says that one of the greatest hopes for improved safety conditions lies through implanting of correct thinking and habits in those who are now passing through the public schools.

What This Country Needs?

A rather startling declaration about what is wrong this country needs, has been made by a Washington official generally recognized as an administration spokesman.

The inevitable end of private control in America is illustrated by the present day Germany, and this gentleman. He added that Germany a few years ago, "needed a general and Hitler leaped into power."

Then came the startling part of his speech. He said the trouble in America was that there was not enough control over the private citizen. In his own words: "The trouble is inadequate policing. The referee has been too long absent in most sections of American industry."

Only one conclusion can be drawn from this declaration—the spokesman believes the "American way" needs revamping; that America needs a general in power to control everything."

This gentleman apparently pictures the American of the future this: The citizen speaking and writing only what he is told he can speak or write; the farmer growing only what he is told to grow and selling his products only to those permitted to buy them; the worked doing the work he is told to do and not the work he wants to do; the housewife buying only what she istold to buy and in the qualities allotted her; the voter voting as he is told to vote and the taxpayer paying the bill withouta a voice is how it is spent.

If this spokesman seen that as the "invitable end" of American freedom, it is apparent that he has not reckoned with spirit of liberty that created America, and the lasting determination of this free people to keep themselves free.

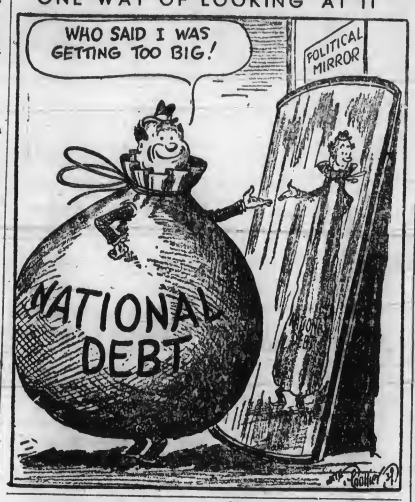
By WILL S. NORRIS
5532 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

Before the old school of business knew anything about moratoriums, Thomas Smith, Sr., one of Richmond, Ky., sucessful merchants and one of the best financiers of Madison County, had a debt against one of his customers amounting to several hundred dollars.



He owed other creditors who became measly and forced him into bankruptcy. Mr. Smith said to the man, "Do not file my claim. You owe me and I will take your note five years after date without interest, believing you will pay if given a chance." The man went into bankrupcy, his things bringing scarcely nothing, on account of deflation over which he had no control, by the time all court fees and costs were paid.

The creditors received only 10 cents on the dollar. I was working for Mr. Smith and at the end of five years saw his debtor come into the store and pay off his five year note in full, in cash. Mr. Smith only lost his interest while the other creditors lost 90 cents on the dollar. It is too bad that men and nations get into debt. From our standpoint we do not think it best to force payment when holdings and collaterial are bringing low down deflated prices. While a moratorium has its weak points, our viewpoint is that we, the stronger gold nation, should not be too severe on our creditors.

We hear people say they ought to be made pay We do not believe in debt dodging and thinking all should pay up to their ability. We do not believe in creditor forcing debtor. Suppose we say we are going to force our debtors to pay. The finale of fore is war. Suppose we overpower the debtor nation. All we can claim is their land and boldings which we should not want. If we got them what would we do with them? Wouldn't it be better to give them an exension like the old-time creditor, Mr. Smith.

ONE WAY OF LOOKING AT IT

By JAMES PRESTON

By all the old political philosophies it is unwise to act contrary to public desires. Meaning, in other words, that the wise public official follows public opinion in deciding public questions.

However, in Washington this week one of the strangest arguments ever witnessed by Capital observers is going on in official high places. The argument is over the merit of that philosophy. It is strange because Washington is supposedly a center political wisdom.

The questionin effect it: "To follow public opinion or public opinion be damned?"

It all started recently when certain officials took up the cudgel to by these officials and together public over the question of amending the National Labor Relations Act. Advisors were quickly called in by these officals and togeher they began planning strategy to convince Congress and the public —that the Act should not be amended. Thier task was not to be an easy one, they found, as they studied the various national polls Without exception, the polls showed opinion overwhelming in favor of amendment or even outright repeal.

The method to be used to convince Congressmen has apparently been decided upon. It is the simple expediment of ignoring public opinion in official circles an dhopgovernment will follow suit.

At least this was indicated reing that the legislative branch of cently when members of the National Labor Relations Board appeared at secret hearings at the Capitol, and testified, in effect, that they were unimpressed by the public desire... that the Act is in the public interest without being changed.

In the meantime, other officals and board sympathizers are busy on the telephones telling any Congressman who will listen that public opinion isn't as important as might be supposed.

P. S.—No strategy has been perfected to convince the public.

But whether public opinion is respected or not, the National Emergency Council still has a large staff of "pulse-feelers" on the job to wit:

The NEC has just reported to government officials an analysis of reaction t orecent proposals of continued effort to spend the Nation back to prosperity. Approximately 900 newspaper editorials were digested by the pulse-feeling staff after Governor Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, took to the radio to defend the spending philosophy.

Only 6 editorials were found lauding the stand of more spending. All the others beat the drum fro a balance the budget philosophy as that most likely to stimulate recovery.

PROJECT OF THE WEEK: PWA purchase of six specially equipped tank trucks to transport live salmon from one spot to another, as part of the program for control of salmon in the Columbia River at Grand Coulee dam. The trucks will cost $9,860 each.

There is more significance that most people would suppose attached to the recent routine announcement of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce that U. S. machinery exports increased materially last year. The announcement revealed a 12 per cent increase in exports to foreign countries.

Significance: Foreign dictators who ridicule (falsely) American living standards are in reallity envious of America's ability to produce better made goods and are importing more American machinery in an effort to improve their own living standards.

The Bureau of Printing and Engraving (which prints all the paper money, stamps, bonds, etc.) does not print $1,000,000 bills—not even to accommodate anyone who might have use for them. One of the Congressmen recently had need for several bills of this large denomination to demonstrate a point before the House of Representatives. The largest bank note printed, however, is a mere $100,000.

The point he attempted to make concerned the cost of operating the small independent branches of government for one year. In his nhad he held a voluminous book of about 2,000 pages. The book was the official transcrip of hearings on the Independent Office Bill If a $1,000,000 bill was pasted on each of the pages, pointed out the Congressman when he couldn't get the bills to demonstrate the point more clearly, the total amount of money pasted in the book would be just about what the bill called for in the way of expenses for these agencies.

A total of $1,800,000,000 was the amount asked for the independent offices. This does not include the principal government departments or general expenses. The independent offices branch of government includes only such units as TVA Central Statistical Board, NLRB, Federal Trade Commission and—ironically end enough—The Joint Economy Board.

PATRIOTISM NOTE: A union of custodian employes in Washington, D. C., schools has demanded time off for its members in recompense for the "time and inconvenience" required for raising and lowering the American flag on school buildings on patriotic days!

With the Reds . . .

So much has been written and said about players who eat their way out of the majors that an investigation has been made into the table tactics employed by the Cincinnati Reds who started their 1939 Spring training in Tampa Sunday.

The Reds are considered a good example on which to work. They have the youth that accompanies big appetites and they have the ambition that helps those who might suffer from over indulgence to turn up their noses at welcome food under certain conditions.

Hotel managers will tell you that rookies are the athletes who make their biggest fumbles at the table and they'll also tell you that ball players eat much more the first two weeks of training than they do the last two. Reason advanced for this is that the men burn up more energy earlier in the season than they do near the end, when things are easier for them to accomplish.

Strangely, one of the lightest eaters in the Cincinnati squad is one of the biggest men, Ernie Lombardi, 225 pound catcher, who was both the National League batting champion and most valuable player last season. Lombardi is a man who very seldom varies from the table d' hote meals furnished by the hotel, never goes in for fancy dishes and doesn't tary at the able after he consumes his calories.

Most players follow Lombardi in one respect—they stick to the substantial dishes. This accounts for the big play given to steaks. Last year in the Reds' camp, it took 18 steers to furnish the steaks for the members of the clubs. An average steer weighs about 600 pounds, approximately 150 pounds of which is cut up into steaks.

Fish comes second in the ranking particularly on Fridays. It is estimated the weekly output of fish to the Cincinnati players is about 175 lbs. day. Fruit juice is consumed to the Pompano is the most expensive fish furnished. Red fish is the least expensive.

It takes about 200 chickens to produce the 84 dozen eggs the Reds consume each week. About three gallons of milk are consumed each day. Fruit juice is consumed to the extent of four gallons perday, and 30 heads of lettuce,(five gallons of ice cream, five pies, 16 pounds of butter, six gallons of cream and 50 loaves of bread also are devoured daily.

Older heads are more carefulfat intheir selection of foods than youngsters because they have been through the grind and realize how much harm can come from abuse of the stomach. However, occasionally, there arises a case of a veteran table violator. When an oldster becomes a gormand he usually becomes a good one.

GRAPEVINES

There is enough lore about any common object to justify a whole book, an interesting one, at that. One such book could be written about grapevines. Here are some suggestions for this book, whoever wants to attempt it.

When I speak of grapevines. I mean wild ones, of course. In the early days of Kentucky there were grapevines in all the woods and along all the fence rows. In spite of man's efforts to destroy nature, there are still many grapevines, though I fear they are not so well known as formerly. Naturally, grapevines suggest grapes and going grape hunting in the late summer and in the fall. Some grapes that grow wild in the state are good before frost, but the typical 'possum grapes need the tang of frost to sweeten some of their acrid sourness. Such clusters of vines as we used to climax among to harvest grapes! And such fine jelly was made from these rather unpromising- looking little grapes! Some people made a kind of wine from them that had a rather sour taste and a wildness that my palate could never exactly like.

The long grapevine had other uses, among them that of furnishing a rope for school play. We got smaller vines for individual ropes and could perform feats that now are done with actual ropes. The big fun was to get a long vine for general playing and skipping. With two deft ones to throw it, usually boys or girls that were not especially adept at jumping, the rest of us went through the various steps and jumps, with all the thrill attached to the daring young man on the flying trapeze. We called the entering this swinging rope by facing it as it came toward us "going in at the front door"; the reverse was the "back door" of course, and was supposed to be more difficult. Our term for hesitating to enter was called "catching flies" as the delaying boy or girl would move the head in rhythm with the grapevine as it came over. Some less skilled ones would get a resounding whack on the head as they miscalculated the speed of the vine and ran in at the wrong time. Mischievous rope-throwers often caused trouble by making the rope go too fast or by elevating it above ones' ordinary jumping level. When we had become quite proficient in our jumping, we could jump on all fours or could keep up a steady rapid jumping for whole minutes Sometimes several would jump at the same time, though our usual way was to run in at an angle and jump once, followed at each turn by some one else.

In the woods were long grapevines that hung at such angles that they formed natural swings. Fortunately some of these were nearly always near a school or picnicking place. Many a boy got gallant and swung his girl in such a swing, so that the poets could sing about the romance of it all.

Grepevines when dried made fine cigars, even though they bit the tongue rather horridly. Though a buggy whip handle tasted better as a "smoke," it showed more vigor to use a grapevine and endure the hardship.

And, finally, the sap of grapevines is said to have marvelous powers to grow whiskers and mustaches. You get out to the woods and cut a gash in the vine when sap is rising and then rub this sticky stuff on your lip and chin when nature is delaying a bit the adornment of your face with a grown-man's meard. One man I knew swore that his mustache was of an entirely different tint of red from his chin whiskers because he had used grapevine juice on the former but not on the latter.

WILD LIFE IS INCREASING IN THE STATE OF KENTUCKY

Big game, such as deer and bears are showing a steady increase in Kentucky game preserves but Major James Brown Director of the Division of Game and Fish, said no prediction could be made as to when even closely restricted hunting could be permitted.

Compared to 700 deer and no bears in 1937, the state now has approximately 30 blak bears in the Harlan county game preserve and approximately 1,100 red and white tail deer in several game refuges. Some of the deer are found roaming in all sections of the state as well as being on the game refuges.

Speaking on the State's efforts to restore big game to a state once noted as a "Happy Hunting Ground," Major Brown said, "that sort of thing is necessarily slow because we haven't enough areas for the animals—no wilderness land. There's hardly a hollow even in the mountains that hasn't at least one cabin in it, and deer and bear don't go with habitations."

The Division's record show an estimated 30 bears in the Harlan game refuge and 150 deer and wild turkey. The Pike County preserve has about 60 deer and a large number of wild turkey.

In the Jones-Keeney preserve near Princeton there are some deer and other game and in the Bernheim preserve near Louisville and the "between the rivers" refuge, located between the Cumberland and the Tennessee rivers near Dawson Springs, there are numerous deer and wild turkey. Director Brown said, however, the land in Western Kentucky is too thickly populited ever to make much big game possible. One reason for deer being scattered is that individuals have bought deer for their own estates and they have wandered off.

Major Brown said the Division of Game and Fish is buying deer and bear annually from other states to aid the restocking program.

FISH AND GAME DIVISON HAS STATE WIDE SURVEY

The Division of Game and Fish is now having a biological survey made of all streams in Kentucky. Many of our leading states have had such a program in operation for a number of years and Kentucky's program began on April, 1937 with Minor E. Clark, biologist and graduate student of the University of Kentucky in charge of the survey.

Major James Brown, Director of the Division, who has long been associated with the survey work, upon his arrival in Kentucky saw the need of the study here and began laying plans for the creation of a biological survey in the Commonwealth. By the time all plans were made, equipment bought and received it was the middle of July before actaul field work began.

Numbers of fishermen believe all that is necessary to insure good fishing is for the Division of Game and Fish to stock any stream with sufficient numbers, the quantity of fish released, thus converting a hereto-fore unproductive stream into a fisherman's paradise after allowing for a period of growth. If such were the case, all that would be necessary for such an angler paradise would be the water. This is far from the truth as has been proven time and time again. Our fish are highly restricted in that type of bottom, the amount of vegetation the temperature, the amount and type of pullution present, etc., are all regulating factors as to whether reasonable success can be expected.

The first purpose of the survey is to formulate a systematic stocking policy with the proper species in accordance with the requirements each stream or lake. The requirements include food, water temperature, vegetation, cover pressure in water and proper bottom.

Another primary purpose of the survey is to determine the need for stream or lake improvement. To the casual observer a given stream may possess a satisfactory enironment but after stocking very unsatisfacory results may be obtained. Fish must have cover and food just the same as our birds and animals.

The survey will determine if the existing fishing regulations are suitable, and if not, to recommend proper changes.

During th eyear 1937-38 Clark made a survey of the Big Sandy river watershed, the Tygart Creek watershed and the Kinniconick Creek watershed. All species of fish were collected for study as to food habits, dieseases, growth and etc. The fish which were found to do the most good in the above mentioned streams were the muskallunge, Pickerel, Small-mouth and Large-mouth Bass.

Clark urges that all high-school science teachers who are interested in the identity of various speies of fish send them to the division of Game and Fish at Frankfort and the proper identification classifiation and schientific names would be made and sent bak to the teacher.

A survey of the Little Sandy River and the Licking River watersheds will be made by Clark this spring and summer.

★ FASHION PREVIEW ★

AMONG the first spring coats featured in the February Harper's Bazaar is this full-skirted one of rust-colored Stroock wool cut on monastic lines with a lining of pale blue to match the dress beneath it. The hat is light blue felt with flowers piled high in the back.

MATCH GLOVES AND BOUTONNIERES

Accessories make the suit this season. A simple little navy or black suit can be given a number of intriguing guises if you will invest in three or four pairs of suede gloves in the new bright shades, then match them with boutonnieres. Go a step further and buy some veiling in matching hues to tie around the crown of your saucy new sailor.

MASTERPIECE HANDKERCHIEFS

To give a bit of special flare to your new spring ensemble add one of the masterpiece handkerchiefs of linen so fine that it resembles chiffon, the handkerchiefs have hand-blacked reproductions of famous old masterpieces, such as paintings of Watteau, Corot and Millet.

BICYCLES SAILOR RIDES OFF WITH PALM FOR CHIC

The bycycle sailor is back again, along with Gibson girl silhouette and the shirt waist.

While feminine New York still gazes wistfully at spring straws, decked with flowers, fly-away bows of ribbon and endless yards of veiling, smart Miami, where summer suns are shining, already is trying out the new millinery styles.

Wee little sailors that perch on the forehead over one eye looking as if the weared had robbed the bandbox of a doll's wardrobe, are being worn with chic little suits of light weight flannel and summer wools. Many are completely shrouded in veiling and have vast bows of the veiling floating off behind for all the world like foam inthe wake of a ship. Another type has a very high crown ornamented usually with a cabbage like rose or shaggy cluster of spring flowers. Still a third type has a brim that is wide in front and on the sides with a short back.. And a fourth type is a direc descendant of those still little hats worn by French cabbies.

For dressier wear there are cart wheel affairs decorated with huge taffeta bows or wreathed with grograin ribbon in several harmonizing shades.

One particularly happy feature of the sailor is that it is becoming to so many different types of faces. It do's mirrors are in dispensable to hairdo of the debutante and looks equally smart on the carefully celled coffure of her mother. Worn by the fluffy feminine type of girl it has a gay impertinence and on the head of her tailored sister has smartly streamlined look that is just as pleasing.

A PICTURE ON YOUR KETTLE

Kitchen utensils grow more decorative every day. A new line of cooking wear just being introduced in white enamel with black or red trim has delightful medallions of an old fashioned girl in color permanently applied to the enamel. A set of this ware would be delightful gift for a bride and for a shower several friends might combine gifts and provide her with a set.

EMERGENCY CLOSET

If you want to be prepared for any sort of an eventuality set aside a small closet or a group of shelves and lay in a stock of those things which you may need urgently on short notice but may not have quickly available. Keen on hand an emergency medicine kit, an emergency toilet kit, containing two or three fresh tooth brushes, powder, rouge lipstick and cold cream, an emergency bridge kit with a couple of packs of new playing cards, pencils and score pads and a box or two of poker cocktail napkins. If it is a closet instead of shelves allot some space to fresh linen and lay away with lavendar bags, a set of sheets and pillow cases, a group of hand and bath towels and some table linen.

BLOUSES IMPORTANT

Collect blouses this spring for never were they more important. Smart Fifth Avenue shops are showing evening and day length black chiffon skirts with a wide assortment of blouses among which to choose. There are exquisitely detailed ones of fine French organdie ornamented with embroidery, hand tucking and real lace and brisk little taffeta ones in plaids and stripes, others are made entirely of row after row of narrow lace sewed on a foundation of net and still others of bright colored chiffons with big peasant sleeves and necklines which have a an adjustable draw string.

GIRL'S BEST FRIEND TODAY IS HER MIRROR

In the Victorian era the girl who cultivated her mirror was more than apt to goin a reputation for conceit. But her Twentieth Century sister who doesn't spend plenty of time in front of a mirror is more apt to win a reputation for dowdiness and careless grooming.

In this day of intricate make-up, emphasis on carriage, stocking seams consciousness and complicated hair perhes jauntily on the upswept good grooming and a trim appearance. In fact, the girl who is single out in any group for that careful, put together appearance si usua. the one whose bedroom or dressing room is equipped with a full mirror wardrobe.

Gone, along with the idea of mirror gazing indicating conceit, are the days when one mirror was enough for all purposes. A really practical mirror wardrobe today consists of a make-up mirror that will cast a revaling light on complexion blemishes, an adjustable mirrior for coffure arrangements, of full length mirror in which one can study posture, the hang of a skirt and the straight lines of a stocking and a good dressing table mirror, preferably one of the three-penel types.

Of course there are any number of other type mirror which are important aids to good grooming but these four are really essential

A good plan in acquiring a mirror wordrobe—if you are not already fully equipped—is to call at your favorite department or hardware store and look over the stock of mirrors. Many times, you can have one made just to your specifications if you do not find exactly what you want. Another hint—in shopping for mirrors be sure to consider the quality of the glass as only polished plate glass can be depended upon to give you back flawless, true reflections.

Here are a few of the new specialty mirrors now on the market for for which to keep an eye out. The first is an adjustable mirror attached to a dressing table stool which swings around in any direction and permits a full view of the one's neck, leaving the hands free back of the head. Another is a make and powders. The fourth is a three up mirror that can be hung around to work with complexion creams panel full length mirror that can be attached to a closet door and gives one an unvarnished report of exactly how she appears to others.

CANNED PEAS ARE GOOD BUDGET ITEM

That democrat of the vegetable world, the green pea, should come in for rather more than its usual share of attention this month, since an unusually large and fine crop during 1938 has made canned peas currently available at attractive prices.

One of the oldest vegetables known to man, the pea is believed to have been included on the menus of our Stone Age forebears. Peas also were reported grown by Columbus on Isabella Island in 1493. However, it ramained for United States horticulturists and American methods of mass merchandising to bring the pea to its highest development and make its rich vitamin content available to the housewife who must count her pennies.

With modern canning methods providing means of preserving crops and with the chain stores assuring farmers of sales of bumper crops through modern systems of mass merchandising, agriculturist were encouraged to experiment with peas to increase the yield per acre and the quality of thep ea

During the next several weeks both the Alaska or early June and Perfection peas are being featured in chain stores throughout the country so it is a wise idea to dig up some favorite green pea recipes and make use of them.

Baked Peas With Cream Cheese

1 can peas
12 cup undiluted evaporated milk
1 tablespoon flour
1 egg, slightly beaten
1-4 teaspoon pepper
2 large onions, sliced thin

Arrange a layer of drained peas and onions in greased boking dish Crumble half the cheese over the vegetables. Add remaining vegetables and cheese. Pour milk mixture over all. Bake in moderate oven, 350 F. for 40 minutes.

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE WOMAN'S DIVISION,

Increasing our land forces is not encouraging this country to take part in war, says Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in the February Democratic Digest published by the Woman's Divison of the Democratic National Committee "With the picture of the situtation in Europe which has been passing before our eyes," continues Mrs. Roosevelt in an answer to the question of Mrs. Wm. E. Maulsby of Des Moines, Iowa, "I should think we would all of us realize that there are times when an adcuate defense enables us to preserve a just peace and other times when inadequate defence obliges one to accept injustices at the time and future insecurity."

To the suggestion of Mrs. Willis Ruth de Prater of Jackson, Miss., that this country is being overly influenced by polls of public opinion, Mrs. Roosevelt thinks that "apparently polls have some influence on representatives in legislative bodies. I should think them somewhat unreliable because many people vote in them but do not take them very seriously and they can only represent a passing decision which may be influenced at any time by new developments, new facts or points of view as brought out."

Mrs. Roosevelt does not fear that the radio will retard initiative and standardize opinions. Nor does she think that listening in at the right time is hard on homework. To the query of Mrs. Henry F. Grady on this theme she answers: "I cannot see why listening to program on the radio need retard one's initiative or standardize one's opinions. In the past many people have read the same books, seen the same plays and heard the same music. It is simply a case of different times and different interests. Everything one sees or hears or reads has to go through one's own intelligence before it makes any real impression on the inner personality. It is not just listening to a thing which matters, but it is what one's environment teaches one to do with all of the contracts of life. This is the responsibility of the home and not of the radio companies."

Mary W. Dewson, former Vice-Chairman of the Democratic National Committee and recently a member of the Social Security Board, isn't discouraged that the February Digest, published by the Woman's Division of the Democratic National Committee that: Perhaps, there aren't as many flaming Florence Nightingales about as there used to be. But there's an army marching seriously, successfully ahead. You aren't conscious of this army's progress, it is moving so quietly:

"You used to notice the Florence Nightingales, the spectacular crusaders. They were so far ahead of the rowd. Now all women, not just a daring few, are moving ahead."

Miss Dawson thinks, morever, that no woman can be a success in public life without a good secretary and adds that a poor secretary can ruin any official career for that matter. Not long ago Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in her column spoke of the value of good secretarics and praised them as "people who make life possible for many of us."

FISH AND GAME

For the past twenty years there has been a good dal of criticism from the sportsmen and especially the quail hunter in regard to the purchasing of the 'Mexican Quail" by the Division of Game and Fish.

Each year the Division purchases all available native Bob White Quail and as that specie is limited to approximately five thousand birds per year, the additional birds must be purchased elsewhere. So the Divison supplies this deficit with Texas Bob White imported from the high plateau land of Northern Mexico.

The Texas Bob White is found in Texas, New Mexico and the northern part of Mexico and is exactly like the native Bob White with the exceptions that due to the climate in that section of the country it does not require as many feathers and due to the food that it gets there its feather sare of a different shade. When brought to Kentucky the birds, after moulting takes on additional feathers and becomes the exact color of the Native bird.

The bird which has caused criticism to the Division by bird hunters known as the Mexican quail. This bird is found from central Arizona to Western Texas, north to Southern Colorado and over most of the Panhandle of Texas, east nearly to central Texas, and south to the valley of Mexico. The Mexican Quail has a small top-not is smaller than the Bob-White and is noted for its running rather than its flying. It cannot be pointed by dogs and will not rise in flight which makes shooting almost impossible.

In receiving shipments of the Texas Bob White in past years some of the Mexican Blue Quail were brought in by oversight and is for that reason that some birds have been found in Kentucky. The Division now checks all birds carefully before being received and in that way all such undesirable species of birds are eliminated.

Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, has purchased approximately 10,-0000 of the Texas Bob White, Quail to be released the latter part of March or the first of April by this Division, assisted by the Fish and Game Clubs in Kentucky.

NEW HIGHWAY PROPOSED BY CLUB

A new four-lane highway north from Madison Pike at a point between Rogers and Decoursey Avenue to cut through the hill west of the new reservoir and join the south end of Russell Street, was included in proposals made last night by members of the Latonia Men's Club meeting at St. Mark church, Latonia.

It was said that the road would relieve the heavy traffic flowing north and south and would tie in with "Latonia Terrace," the new housing project.

In connection with the proposed road the club suggested that an underpass be constructed at Twenty four Street to connect the southwest section of the city with Covington Junior and Senior High School.

Members proposed also the construction of a bridge on underpass for pedestrains on West Southern Avenue which was blocked when the Caroline Street underpass was erected.

SURVEY REQUESTED OF U. S. HIGHWAY 25 IN BOONE COUNTY

Definite Figures Asked By Boone County Court

Walton, Kentucky

To the Fiscal Court of Boone county:
March 7, 1939

Gentlemen:

On January 8, 1939, there appeared in the Kentucky editions of all Cincinnati newspapers an announcement to the effect that U. S. Highway No. 25 would be relocated and built as a super highway running south from Sandfordtown, passing through Kenton County approximately inldway between the present U. S. Highway No. 25 and Kentucky Highway No. 17, thus missing Boone County entirely.

Within a short while following this announcement, meetings of various citizens of Kenton, Boone and Grant Counties were held and at a meeting held at Florence on January 31, 1939, an organization styled "U. S. 25 Highway Association of Northern Kentucky was formed and the undersigned was elected as its President.

Prior to this meeting a committee of three, Hon. Simon M. Billiter of Covington, Hon. R L. Vincent of Williamstown, Kentucky, and the writer went to Frankfort and discussed with Mr Cutler, Chief Highway Engineer of Kentucky, the proposed reconstructed highway. At that meeting the committee maintained that the present general alignment of U. S. Highway No. 25 should be retained, making such changes only as approved modern engineering standards rendered imperative.

Various reasons why no radical changes should be made have been published in the newspapers in the form of resolutions passed by this organization, and these resolutions are already familiar to each member of this Court. Copies of these resolutions were mailed to the Governor of Kentucky, the Highway Commissioner of Kentucky, the Federal Engineer of Highways in Kentucky, the Chief Highway Engineer of Kentucky, and the Advisory Commissioner of the Fifth District of Kentucky.

In a letter received from the Chief Highway Engineer in answer to our communication forwarding these resolutions, Mr. Cutler says in part:

U. S. HIGHWAY NO. 25
IN RE:

President of "U. S. 25 Highway Association of Northern Kentucky" and filed with the Court a letter setting fiith the probability of the reconstruction of the above mentioned highway and asking this Court to secure the necessary additional rights of way required.

On motion, it is ordered that this letter be received and filed, and that the Boone County Recorder and Walton Advertiser be requested to publish in full, both said letter and this order so that all citizens and taxpayers of this County may be fully advised.

It is further ordered that the State Highway Commission be requested to submit to this Court at its earliest convenience an exact and definite survey of the contemplated reconstruction, inso far the same may lie within Boone County. So that this Court may intelligently estimate the approximate costs of said policy with reference thereto.

It is further ordered that a copy of this order be certified to the Department of Highways and the Advistory Commissioner of this district.

TO THE FISCAL COURT OF BOONE COUNTY, No. 2, MARCH 7TH 1939

Dear Mr. Vest:

I wish to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 4th, and also the copy of resolution passed by the citizens of Kenton, Boone and Grant Counties, urging that in the reconstruction of U. S. Highway No. 25 the present general alignment through Erlanger, Florence,

Draws Erlanger In Regional

Stiff Competition Faces Bearcats in Regional

Herts were light and hopes were high in this fair city of Walton as the Bearcats of Walton high school brought home the bacon from the Boone County Tournament last Saturday night.

Truncing a fast Hamilton team, who scored the upset of the tourney, by defeating a good Hebron team. The Bearcats showed plenty of class in scoring an easy victory over their opponents by a score of 40 to 26.

The tournament got under way which Walton drawing Burlington. Hamilton drew Hebron with Florence and New Haven drawing a bye.

The Bearcats varsity rolled up a big lead and was never headed, defeating Burlington, the first round of play. Shea McElroy was high point scorer by hitting the basket for 16 points.

Hamilton followed by defeating a highly tooted Hebron team, with the biggest upset of the season to the score of 23 to 22.

Friday night found Walton varsity pitted against Florence and Hamilton against new Haven. Walton and Hamilton again repeated, Walton defeating Florence by a score of 32 to 30 and Hamilton defeating New Haven 42 to 16.

In the second division, Walton won over Burlington Hamilton defeated New Haven and on Saturday afternoon Hebron defeated Walton by a score of 21 to 20. In the final round Hebron defeated Hamilton for the trophy. This however, did not discourage the varsity squad who later in the evening of the same day beat Hamilton for an easy victory by the score of 32 to 22 to win the district title.

Wednesday night Walton meets its arch rival Lloyd of Erlanger in the first round of play in the regional Tournament, to be held at Dixie Heights. Erlanger will enter the game a heavy favorite, but with the kind of play the Bearcats showed in the recent tournament, we would not be surprised to see another upset in the regional.

An Amazing Personality

However strongly people may differ with each other about President Roosevelt's political and governmental policies, there is universal admiration of his courage and fortitude in the face of physical handicap which would have floored almost any other man. Even his friends believed that when he left the sanitarium at Warm Springs in 1928 to run for Governor of New York he could not possibly stand the strain of public office.

That was eleven years ago, and Mr. Roosevelt today is in better physical condition than any President has ever been after six years in office.

Except that he cannot walk unaided, he has the build of an athletic, and while carrying a greater load of personal responsibility than most Presidents have shouldered, he finds time for daily exercise to keep himself in trim.

One of the secrets of Mr. Roosevelt's continued endurance is his ability to throw off the cares of office for frequent periods of relaxation. Just now he is aboard the crusier Houston in the Caribbean, watching the Navy manueuvers, which are fun for him. It is his first vacation since the Christmas holidays, the first time he has spent as much as six weeks continuously in the White House. No President ever traveled more nor got much recreation from his travels.

In the nearly eighteen years since he was stricken with infantile paralysis Mr. Roosevelt has traveled farther than anyone could have thought possible in 1921. The qualities of will-power and vitality which pulled him through have won him the respect even of those who do not admire him. We wish him a pleasant vacation in the Caribbean

Facism-Vs.-Democracy

In theory, meetings with the Senate military affairs committee are usually supposed to be strictly secret. In practice, information about what goes on at the conclave usually starts leaking out immediately after they are over. Senators are only human—and, like anyone else with important special knowledge in their minds, they have a hard time keeping it to themselves.

The recent meeting between the President and this committee at the White House was supposed to be even more secret than most. Even the stenographers were excluded. But as usual, the leaks were much in evidence. The next day an account was published to the effect that the President had stated in conversation that America's frontier was in France, and that this explains the U. S. Government's willingness to have the French buy big quantities of war planes here. Still another account stated that the President had gone farther yet, and said that our frontier was the Rhine River.

Two days later the Chief Executive branded these reports as "a deliberate lie," and added that a move was on foot, supported by some congressmen and newspapers, to misrepresent and discredit him. But whatever the truth of the matter the episode served to unloose a veritable torrent of oratory in the talkative Congress—and served as well to bring into sharp focus the fundamental differences that exist over our foreign policy.

We are embarking on the largest program in our peace time history. And when a country builds a war machine, it involves far more than merely appropriating the money, increasing the personnel of our fighting forces, and placing the orders with the arms and munitions makers. It involves the gravest questions of policy. It involves our entire attitude toward the relations with the other nations in the world. And thus very directly involves every person in the country.

We have apparently reached the time when our foreign policy must be definitely fixed and established in one way or another. And this is going to be no simple matter. For the Congress seems to be bitterly divided over what our policy should be. And it is not in any sense a partisian division—politics plays little or no part in it.

On the one hand are those who believe that in a sense we are our brother's keeper—that, as the only democracy immune at lack by a powerful totalitarian state, it is up to us to throw the weight of our influence and resources behind the menaced democracies. These men see the world as a great battleground in which an undeclared war without quarter is taking place between fascism and democracy. The cause of democracy in Europe, they reason, will be lost unless helped by the New World democracy. And if that happens they argue, we will be next in line for fascist aggression. So, they conclude, the thing to do is to help the Old World democracies stave off fascism before it is too late.

The other school believes with equal sincerity in rigorous isolation. That means a policy of treating all countries, democratic and totalitarian, with equal consideration. They feel we must build up an adequate defense military machine, and keep our resources for own use. They favor strengthening, not weaking, our neutrality policy. It is not our business they argue to pull any country's fat out of the fire. And, they conclude, if we insist on aiding the other democracies with moral suasion and giving them access to our factories and resources, it will eventually mean that we will have to aid them with our army and navy. President Wilson's refusal to be neutral, they think, and his obvious bias toward the allies, was responsible for bringing us unnecessary into the world war.

This illustrates the two major extremes of thought. There are of course, many more moderate groups, which favor a modified neutrality—or a modified internationalism.

No one cananswer now the question of which side will win. Mr. Roosevelt, it is believed, feels that neutrality must be somewhat relaxed. On the other hand, there is a strong and determined group in Congress, led by Senator Borah, which is determined to resist to the end, any Administration effort to actively aid the European democracies. At this writing, it looks like a stalemate is in prospect over foreign policy.

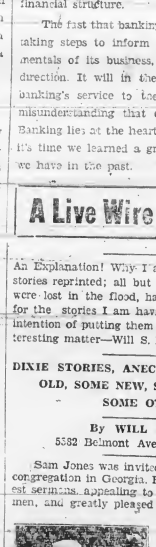
You and Your Banker

The semi-public character of banking and its historic vulnerability to popular sentiment and political attack, makes it imperative that understanding of and attention to public attitudes and reactions play a larger part in bank management in the future than they have in the past, say the American Bankers Association.

Few borrowers ever like the man or the institution that lends them money. In addition, a sort of grim legend has grown up about bankers and banking picturing the former as a rapacious crew of financial pirates, and the latter as an ice-cold institution which controls the nation's purse strings. As a result, it has always been easy for the unscrupulous politician in need of a vote-getting issue, to make political capital out of the exaggerated and fallacious attacks on our financial structure.



The fact that banking has awakened to this and is taking steps to inform the public as to the fundamentals of its business, marks a move in the right direction. It will in the long run, serve to improve banking's service to the people. It will clear away misunderstanding that exists in millions of minds. Banking lies at the heart of our economic system and it's time we learned a great deal more about it than we have in the past.

A Live Wire Briar Hopper

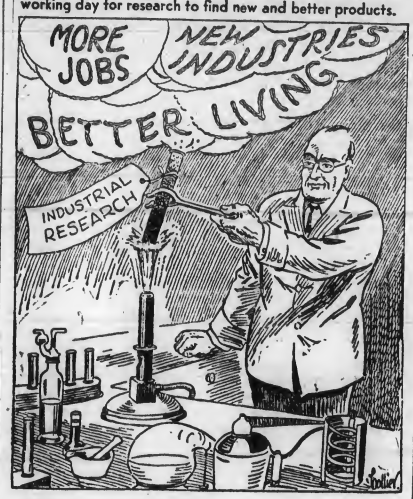
DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5382 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

Sam Jones was invited to preach before a colored congregation in Georgia. He preached on of his greatest sermons, appealing to the hearts of men and women, and greatly pleased his congregation. One good colored lady wanting to congratulate him on the sermon said, "Mr. Jones you have a white skin but a black heart." He thanked her for the compliment saying, "I understand your meaning, that I have a heart like colored folks, but not like a black-hearted villian."

This reminds me of being asked to give a talk to one of the colored congregations of Cincinnati. They were worshiping in the basement of a church where the upper story had not been finished. I said to them, "You have had enough cellar religion. It is time you were finishing the upper story and getting nearer Heaven." My theme was Heaven, and if we would be known by our friends there. I closed my every reason to like colored people. When I was a small boy in Kentucky, I had no other playmate, except a colored boy my own age, named George. His mother was the slave of my mother.



I am not ashamed to say that George's mother nursed me from her breast when I was a baby to give me nourishment and helped to save my life. So I had a colored mammy. She went to the Great Beyond many years ago. I believe when I get up there I'll know her in heaven.

It would have done you good to have heard those colored folks clap their hands and shout "Amen."

I have the greatest respect for colored people. In their place. I do not believe in mixed schools or churches. But when I hear people say colored folk will not go to heaven I am reminded of a sermon I heard a colored Bishop preach when he told his congregation that every tongue and nation would be there.

He said, "Right there is when I expect to get on the old ship of Zion and sail safely into the heavenly harbor."

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

By JAMES PRESTON

Passages from the book of Genesis in the Old Testament may have a 1939 counterpart in Washington.

The Biblical story concerns an ever normal granary system put into operation by Joesph to feed Pharoah's people during seven years of drought. The modern version is basically the same unbeknownsingly, have "improved" and expanded the idea.

Joseph, so the story goes, dreamed of seven fat cows and seven lean cows. In the dream, the lean cows ate the fat cows. To Joseph this foretold seven years of plenty followed by seven years of drought accordingly, he stored grain surpluses during the seven bumpar crop years and thus had food for the people of Egypt in the seven lean years

Whether a dream plays any part in the 1939 version isn't known, but the idea is the same. However, things that Joseph never dreamed of are included in the proposed storage scheme—steel, radios and automobiles included.

Author of the modern counterpart is an Agriculture Department economist. His plan is advocated in a book he recently completed and which has just been published. If put into operation, his proposal would set in advance the amount of goods—on farm or in factory—that would be produced each year. Each producer would be assigned a "quota" as his share of business, and surpluses would be stored for future demands.

The author says his plan is not to be considered as representing the official views of the administration. However, the book was published with the knowledge and consent of the Agriculture Department.

The subject of surpluses, incidentalley is still a troublesome in the Capitol City. Even without the "planned surpluses" idea just mentioned in operation, the government is having a difficult time with surpluses already in existence.

Now therefore, a new twist to the much talked "two price plan" is being considered in offical circles. The idea is to keep the price level up for the American consumer, but thru surpluses into the foreign market on a pay up what you want to basis.

The state of uneasiness that has prevailed in the radio broadcasting industry over apparent plans for greater government control of radio, is spreading in other quarters—in and out of Washington.

Latest "scare" is the legislative proposal to reorganize the Federal Communications Commision and make one man virtual director of the radio waves. The proposa probably would not have caused so much excitement had it not been preceded by a widely published magazine article making several startling statements about the motive behind reorganization of the FCC. In a nut shell, the story declared bluffly that the aim was eventual government operation or supervision of all radio stations and programs.

New quarters now showing concern include publishers and political groups. Some publishers are letting it be known they fear this is only the first step toward control of free speech and the press. Political groups are fearful of what might happen in election years if the political party in power had complete control of what did and not go on the air.

Some observers believe the affair may soon break into the open as a major controversy, in which the publishers may ally themselves with the broadcasters to fight down the control menace.

After many months of research, WPA has completed a study of agricultural unemployment and technological development of farm implements. The findings shed interesting light o the question of "do machines kill jobs or create more jobs?"

Here is what the study disclosed: Although about one billion man hrs., of labor per year have been displacing the farm by the adoption of the tractor, truck and automobile, more than a billion man-hours of work have been created in the manufacture, maintenance and service of these machine age creations.

In addition to the favorable balance in work created, the study showed that about 35 million acres of farm land preciously necessary for pasture or feeding of horses have been released for production of more crops.

PLAYING SCHOOL AND MEETING

In addition to playing house we used to play school or church. The playing of children, at least when I was a child, was both consciously and unconsciously a satire on the elders. Since we were not gifted with rare vision, we did pretty much the things that we had seen, making them more ridiculous if they were possible.

The old fashioned school put up a good chuff. Viewed from the vantage ground of a third of a century, it does not look so fierce as it appeared and wanted to be. Rules, innumerable ones, sometimes, were made apparently to be broken. When we played school, we even improved on what the teachers did. It was almost wicked just to be. The slighest encroachment on the teacher's dictatorship brought dire punishment. The children in the play school, usually unlike the ones in the one room district school, cried loud and long when they were punished. The teaching methods were excellent travesties of what we had suffered in school. Somestimes, though, I have seen some genuine teaching and even some learning in play schools, for hungry little children often forgot to be actors and enjoyed the play. Of course the bad boys preferred to break up the school or to accept their punishment like men, to make the smaller ones envious. That times have changed since then was brought to my attention not long ago when a woman with several children told me that her family when playing school did not use the switch but threatened the youngsters with low grades in deportment. The children of old Fidelity knew only the rod fresh the endless woods around the school house.

It was not always easy to play meeting, for some of the children were likely to have conscientious scruples about making fun of sacred things. Then too, parents and teachers often took a hard when our satire was a bit too broad. Regardless of the religious preference of the children, our baptisms were always by immersion, preferably in a pile of leaves. Large boys resisted the preacher until the baptising often became a riot, with some deputies to help out those who were in charge. The preaching, the singing, the call to the mourners' bench were standardized, varying only a little from what we observed. The shouting was a bit overdone, sounding more like the ravings of crazy people.

And this reminds me, even if it should not, of playing jail. The weakest boys were chosen as sheriffs to give the gangsters a chance to work their tricks with little punishment. The little sheriff got even, occasionally, with the gang by deputizing a large, rough boy to help him quell the mob. The jail was commonly a cleared place fenced in with huckleberry bushes; breaking jail was up to true grangster ideals. In one neighborhood near where I lived the boys dug a pit some three feet deep and built a rail pen over this for their jail. One boy was almost smothered in the jail, and the less closed-in type was used afterward.

Whatever we did, we nearly always had a fight. Young villains are very little different from older ones. But the game went on, from generation to generation, whether we played school or church or jail or any of the numerous games of the country school.

THE GARDEN

PEAS

By John S. Gardner,
Kentucky College of Agriculture

Among the earliest vegetables to go into the garden are English peas. Some gardeners, in fact, make St. Valentine's Day pea planting day and although one need not be as specific as that for there is no particular pea-planting virtue in that day, the advantage of getting the first peas started early cannot be denied.

Pears are a good crop; therefore their fertilizing must be balanced. Stable manure is desirable to use for it is a soil conditioner but stable manure, used alone, causes peas to grow to vine with sometimes an extremely light set of pods. Phosphorus is needed to bake blossoms stick and set pods, and because stable manure lacks phosphorus, this element should be added, in the form of super phosphate.

It may be applied broadcast over the entire garden for all the vegetables benefit from its use, or it may be applied where the row is to be, and chopped into the soil a few inches. Broadcast rate is 100 pounds to a space 100 feet square or if an acre is involved, 300pounds Row applications are made at the rate of one pound to 30 feet.

Peas are distinctly a "cool" crop; they go out of bearing soon after the weather has become definitely warm, or after the soil has got warm They can be kept quite a bit longer, even though the atmosphere has warmed up if pains have been taken to get them rooted deeply. Good practice, always is to make the seed furrows deep, say four inches, but to cover the seed only an inch, then to fill the furrow after the peas have grown above it. Some gardeners prepare their pea furrows early in the winter so as to be ready to do their planting which the favorite date comes, ignoring almost entirely the condition of the soil. This is good practice, especially for the early sorts Alaska and Radio By the way the latter is much superior variety, all ways.

About April 1 the ground having warmed to some extent, it becomes safe to plant the sweeter, wrinkled seeded varieties, Thomas Laxton, Laxtonian or Gradus (Prosperity). Intermediate both in quality and in hardiness are American Wonder and British Wonder. These are part wrinkled and are thus better able to cope with sodden soil and low temperatures than the really good wrinkled seeded "sugar" sorts. The season may be wound up with Telephone the reliable tall, prolific sort, but whose quality is only mediocre unless harvested promptly the pods have filled.

There is a definitely summer sort of peas whose popularity deserves to spread namely the edible-podded varieties, of which Mammoth Melting Sugar is the best variety. They are the tallest of all; a support 6 feet high is not too much. They should be used just as the seedlings begin to sow. Their planting time is during early April, and deep furrowing helps.

Peas are beset by two serious pests, mildew and plant lice. The disease mildew may come at any time, but particularly when the weather turns suddenly muggy, hot days with sudden showers, and following rapid growing weather, causing the vine growth to be tender. Experimentally, mildew damage has been reduced by spraying with lime sulphur or dusting with sulphur, but the expense may exceed the profit, and even the entire value of the peas. Sometimes, a change in the weather mitigates the difficulty, and that is practically all the "control" the gardner has. Under the same weather conditions, plant lice may come. Lice can be stopped by spraying or dusting with tobacco extract or with rotenone, but this is questionable for peas because of the expense or really effective control. Generally when pea lice make their appearance, the gardener may best write off his peas and hope for "better lucy" next year, which by the by is the way so that gardeners must reconcile themselves.

Big Ill Thompson was badly beaten for nomination for Mayor of Chicago.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Five high grade Angus steers have been placed with James Bogle, Warren county 4-H club members, with funds advanced by firm wishing to encourage club work and also introduce better cattle into the county.

Farmers in the Sharpsburg community, Bath county have bought a carload of cottonseed meal for feeding to cattle. Cost were cut because of the quantity purchased. Russell Wilson has been feeding hogs tankage instead of skim milk, with good results.

A survey in Carroll county shows a trend toward the seeding of mixed legumes and grasses. This began noticeable in 1936. Close to 1,500 tons of limestone have been spread; and 5,000 acres seeded to pasture.

Growing and marketing problems of strawberry growers were discussed at an all day session of the Green River Association with representatives present from Muhlenberg, McLean and Butler counties. A yield increased by one half is expected this season.

A check up shows that in Campbell county last year 5,568 acres of legumes and grasses were seeded, and 1,576 acres of green manure crops turned. The latter included vetch, small grains and soybeans, all fairly new to Campbell county.

The making of looper rag rugs has had new impetus in Kenton county, where 350 pounds of loops have been received. One hundred and sixty home made weaving frames are in use. Since most of the loops are white, knowledge of dyeing is being put to use.

CHECKUP OF FARM MACHINERY UNDER WAY FOR '39 CROP

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—With the annual winter checkup of tractors, corn planters, plows and other equipment for planting and handling the 1939 crops under way on millions of farms, a suggestion on how farmers can cash in more effectively on the application of fertilizer by equipping their corn planters with an improved fertilizer attachment is contained in a bulletin issued by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

Records kept of farm plots fertilized by the improved type of fertilizer depositor showed marked increases in the yield per acre of corn.

The newer type depositor shown in the accompanying illustration features a deflector and a hood. The purpose of the deflector is to divide the stream of fertilizer and to deflect one-half of the application to each side of the hill. The purpose of the hood is to widen the furrow opened by the corn planter shoe and to hold back the incoming soil until the fertilizer has reached the bottom of the furrow, thus preventing direct contact with the seed.

In the first year tests were made with the new type depositor, increases were recorded ranging from 11.1 bushels per acre from the use of 100 pounds of fertilizer, to 21.6 bushels from 400 pounds of fertilizer. In the second year, 150 pounds of fertilizer applied with the modern depositor increased the corn yield 19.9 bushels per acre, while 300 pounds boosted the yield by 28.8 bushels.

AGRICULTURAL STATIONS AID SOIL IMPROVEMENT

CHICAGO.—Benefits obtained from growing soil building crops such as alfalfa, clover and most legumes can be greatly increased by the intelligent use of the correct fertilizer, it is pointed out by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"The average practical farmer realizes that obtaining more humus is not just a matter of sowing seed," the report says. "Clover, alfalfa and most legumes which are able to get valuable nitrogen from the air are sensitive to their soil environment. The problem of getting a stand and a crop worth turning under is simplified if the farmer applies mixed fertilizer of the right analysis.

"Agricultural experiment stations under the direction of capable agronomists are continually carrying on experiments with the soils of their states and have very comprehensive general reports ready for county agents, active field workers and farmers. They are glad to send them out or to answer any questions sent to them."

SHOWDOWN LOOMS ON C.C.C. AND NATIONAL PARK QUESTION

A showdown on whether Kentucky has failed to maintain Civilian Civilian Conservation Corps projects in the state parks was promised Tuesday at a conference between the Governor and delegation from Henderson county.

Both Governor Chandler and State Park Director Bailey P. Wootton told the Henderson group no "dereliction" on the part of the National Park official and Wooten said he had several times asked to be advised specifically of any failure.

Chandler said there was 'no basis' for statements emanating from Washington officials that Kentucky's were the worst managed of any state parks.

Notice that CCC camps would be taken from Audubon, which is near Henderson, and from Dawson Springs by April 1, leaving only one CCC camp in a Kentucky park, that at at Pine Mountain in Bell county, was received recently by Wooton.

Governor Chandler said he would be glad to discuss the whole situation if the Federal officials desired. He Pine Mountain in Bell county, was tained the park projects."

"It looks like they are laying the groundwork to remove the CCC camps and want to put the burden on somebody else," Chandler added, and it's an inconscionable thing. There'll be no buck-passing at this meeting at Audubon."

It was explained to the Governor by the Henderson group that the CCC has completed a six-acre wild life lake and made other improvements in the 600 acre Audubon Memorial Park and has started work on a twenty acre recreational lake.

18.9 Cents of U. S. Farm Dollar Goes for Taxes, Interest and Wages to Hired Help

Spend Only 2½ Cents For Fertilizer.

Profits on Farms Determined by Expenditures; Yield Per Acre Influences Cost of Production

EVERY expenditure the average farmer makes has a direct or indirect bearing on how profitably he is operating his land, whether it is a new tractor, a truck, seed for his crops or fertilizer to replenish his land. Farmers generally recognize that the yield per acre of crops is the most important factor influencing the cost of production. Higher yields mean lower production costs. Thus farmers are becoming increasingly aware that the use of fertilizers is the most profitable means of increasing their crop yields per acre.

FARMERS spend almost eight times as much annually for wages to hired help, taxes and interest charges as they do for the purchase of fertilizer to replenish their soil, according to a bulletin prepared by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee, based on U. S. Department of Agriculture statistics on average farm expenditures for the nine year period from 1929 through 1937.

"An average of 18.96 cents out of every dollar of farm income yearly goes for wages, taxes and interest," said the report, "whereas only 2½ cents goes for fertilizer.

"Gasoline, kerosene and oil for the operation of autos, tractors and trucks accounts for 5.18 cents of the farm dollar, or twice as much as goes for fertilizer. Feed for livestock and seed for crops accounts for 6.22 cents. Containers for produce, spray material and twine cost 1.38 cents, while other current expenditures for farm operation take 2.48 cents.

"Expenditures on such capital items as machinery, tractors and repairs call for 3.57 cents out of the annual farm dollar; autos and trucks account for 2.59 cents and farm buildings and repairs on buildings for 2.05 cents. The value of farm commodities actually consumed on the farm amounts to 15.17 cents.

"This leaves an average of 39.85 cents of spendable income out of every farm dollar for the purchase of clothing, for education, insurance, doctors' bills, recreation, etc.

"Of all the annual purchases a farmer makes, he gets more for his money in buying fertilizer than from practically any other commodity. Farm records in the Middle West show that every dollar spent for fertilizer results in an average increased value of crops amounting to three and a half dollars as well as returning to the soil valuable mineral elements. Yet the price of fertilizer is lower than practically any commodity the farmer buys."

DISCUSSES CONTROL OF HORSE DISEASE

The department of animal pathology of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station issued the following suggestions as to methods of prevention and control of equine encephalomylitis, commonly known as sleeping sickness, of horses and mules.

There are two distinct types of virus that cause this disease: The western type and the eastern type

The western type virus has been found in Kentucky. The eastern type virus has so far been confined to the Atlantic seaboard states.

The vaccine for the prevention of sleeping sickness is known as equine encephalomyelitis chick ambro vaccine. Each animal vaccinated is to receive two injections, the second dose from seven to 10 days after the first. The vaccine is given by the subcutaneous method. Each dose is now 10 cc; inject one-half the dose at one point and the other half at a nearby point.

In Kentucky animals should be vaccinated against the western type virus. The western type virus vaccine does not protect against infection of eastern type virus, nor the eastern against the western.

Reports on the use of vaccine indicate that it is reliable and effective, there being no bad after-effects. However, every sanitary precautionary measure should be observed, in administering vaccine.

It is impossible to forecast whether the disease will or will not occur in a serious form during the coming year. If horses and mules are vaccinated in May they will be protected against the disease during the summer and fall months when the disease may be expected to occur. Aanimals not vaccinated early should be vaccinated immediately following reports of the occurance of the disease.

Equine encephalomelitis serum is now available—western, eastern and polyvalent type. The use of serum (western type for Kentucky) would be indicated for animals already sick with the disease and those that have been directly exposed to the infection.

Equine encephalomelitis chick embryo vaccine also the serum for the prevention of sleeping sickness in horses and mules are now being produced by a number of veterinary biological laboratories.

EASY WAY TO CARVE LEG OF LAMB

1. Place platter so that the leg bone is to the carver's right. Insert the fork firmly into the large end of the leg and cut two or three length-wise slices from the side nearest the carver.

2. Turn the leg so that it rests firmly on the surface just cut. Holding the roast firmly with the fork inserted into the left end, and beginning at the shank end to the right, make the first slice down to the leg bone and continue to make thin slices parallel to the first until aitch bone at the large end is reached.

3. With the fork still in place, the knife is run parallel to the leg bone to free the slices all at one time. The slices should be about one-fourth to three-eighths of an inch thick.

ELECTRICITY MAY REDUCE HOURS FOR FARM HOMEMAKERS

How electricity, now being made available to thousands of Kentucky farmers, may reduce the long hours of work in farm homes, is revealed in figures of electric appliance sales released by the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky.

The survey concerns 2,100 farm homes to which electric lines were extended last fall. Purchases already incude 680 refrigerators, 1,525 irons; 1,320 radios and 809 washing machines. All of the 2,100 houses have electric lights. Summer is expected to increase the purchase of refrigerators, ranges, fans and other equipment. Water systems are being made possible on many farms thru the coming of electricity.

According to a survey made by the United States department of agriculture, farm women work an average of about 52 hours a week in the home, and about 63 hours where they help with the milking, care for chickens of work in the garden.

It requries about 26 hours a week to prepare three meals a day and about half as long to wash the dishes and clean up after the meals. Cleaning and straightening up the house requires more than eight hours a week. Then there is sewing to do, fires to be tended, one wash day a week; the ironing and countless small jobs. In some homes, women were found to average 15 to 16 hours a day, beginning their work at 5 o'clock in the morning and continuing to eight or nine o'clock at night.

STRAWBERRY BORER MAY BE CONTROLLED

Suggestions for controlling the crown borer, a pest that has troubled Kentucky strawberry growers for the past 40 years, are made in a new bulletin of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station.

New strawberry plantings should be at least 350 yards from old infested patches, as tests show that beetles can travel 300 yards without feed.

Plants for new patches should be dug between December 1 and March 1.

Certified plants are preferred for setting new patches. Plants from infested patches can be used for starting borer-free patches provided they are dug before March 1 and cleaned and washed to rid them of adhering adults. Plants from patches funds to be free from crown borers are preferred. Even certified plants should be dug early and cleaned.

INTEREST GROWING IN FARM BUILDING

Increased interest in farm construction is indicated by the number of requests for plans for buildings and equipment received by the University of Kentucky College of agriculture. Last year, the college's department of agricultural engineering supplied 1,389 sets of plans upon requests from farmers in 107 Kentucky counties and 23 other states.

Plans for tobacco barns were most in demand, but hundreds of farmers wanted to build poultry houses, hog houses, dairy barns, general barns storage houses and machine sheds. Reports of county agents showed that more than 6,000 buildings were constructed, remodeled or repaired on Kentucky farms last year.

In the opinion of Prof. J. B. Kelly of the College, Kentucky farmers should spend annually about $17,000,000 in putting up new buildings and in remodeling and repairing old ones. He believes that, in the name of efficiency and better living, thousands of new houses and other buildings are needed, while many more buildings should be remodeled or repaired. Reconstruction of fences also is needed on large numbers of farms.

In the matter of better equipment, Prof. Kelley notes the need of improved water facilities on large numbers of farms. Inadequate water supply has been especially serious in recent drouths. In an effort to remedy the situation, many ponds and reservoirs have been dug and wells added in the last two or three years.

Soil Treatment Aids Corn King

LAFAYETTE, IND. — Producing 151 bushels of corn per acre and winning the title of Five-Acre Corn King for the third time in the past 25 years was simply a matter of sound farm management plus soil improvement, according to A. C. Brown, of Ripley County, Ind., who accomplished this amazing feat.

The eight-acre field on which Mr. Brown's championship yield was produced was originally "slash land" and is now classified as Clermont silt loam, which is not considered productive corn land because of poor drainage, high acidity and low fertility.

Mr. Brown overcame these handicaps by careful surface drainage, laying out the fields in eight row lands with a drainage furrow on either side. He applied seven tons of limestone per acre to the field in the past 15 years and as a result obtained some excellent stands of red clover.

For the past four years he used a light application of manure on the corn land each year. The championship field was in clover pasture in 1937. Last spring Mr. Brown applied 325 pounds of fertilizer per acre to the plot. The fertilizer, he told agronomists of Purdue University, not only greatly increased his yield, but advanced the maturity as well as improved the quality of the grain. This was important, for his corn—a hybrid top cross J. C. N.

A. C. BROWN

No. 1— was planted two weeks later than normal because of wet weather.

Mr. Brown won the state corn yield championship in 1933 and 1935. The runner-up in the five-acre contest was Ralph Heileman of Bartholomew county, Indiana, champion in 1937, who placed second with a yield of 147.3 bushels per acre.

WASINGTON MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION HOLDS CONVENTION

The George Washington Masonic National Memorial Association, following its established custom, held its 1939 convention at Alexandria, Va., on February 22nd, the anniversary of Washingtons birth. Delegates were present representing nearly all the Grand Lodges of the United States. General satisfaction was expressed over the progress which has been made on the Memorial during the past year, while those visitors who saw the building for the first time were surprised and astonished at the size and dignity of the imposing structure, which has been erected on Shooters Hill, and which dominates the old City of Alexandria from the site first proposed for the Capitol of the United States, but which was disapproved for that purpose by Washington because it might be suspected that he had personally profited by the selection of a site so near to his own domain at Mount Vernon.

Progress made on the buildings during the past year includes the completion of the great entrance hall, with its vestibule, doors, entrances etc; also the installation of granite steps leading up to the main entrance from the driveway below, forming an impressive and appropriate approach, and greatly improving the appearance of the building.

The amount actually paid out for building construction during the year was $67,104.92. The cost of maintenance of buildings and grounds were reported as $11,897.40; and general disbursements have been made amounting to $9,152.04.

During the session checks were turned over to the Association aggregating $56,727.13, and with other pledges made it is expected that the receipts for the coming year will exceed the 1938 total of $90,705.04.

and that considerable additional progress on the structer will be possible, including the finishing of the lodge room, intended for the use of Alexandria - Washington Lodge No. 22, of which President Washington was the first Worshipful Master.

Mrs. Minnie E. Keyes, Grand Secretary, of the General Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, presented to the Association four massive bronze torcheres, which have been installed as a gift of the O.E.S., to light the grand entrance hall and the statue of Washington which is to be placed there. Grand Master Robert R. Lewis, of Pennsylvania, brought as a contribution for the museum of the Association a lock of Washingtons hair, enclosed in a box made from wood from the first casket which contained his body; also the trowel used in 1837 in sealing the marble sarcophagus in which his remains now rest in the tomb at Mount Vernon.

Dr. Elmer R. Arn, of Ohio, was reelected president of the Association, and J. Claude Keiper of the District of Columbia was continued as secretary. The five vice presidents of the Association were reelected. Arthur K. Lee, member of the board of directors from Wyoming, who has left that state has been succeeded on the board of directors by Lew M. Gay, present Grand Master; and Everett L. Lawrence, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ill., was named a director to replace Grover C. Niemeyer, resigned. All other members of the board of directors whose terms expired in 1939 were reelected.

APPROVED FLOCKS SUPPLY HATCHING EGGS IN KENTUCKY

More than 300.00 chickens that have been selected and blood-tested for pullorum disease will supply hatching eggs this season to 50 U. S. approved and certified hatcheries in Kentucky, according to J. E. Humphrey of the State College of Agriculture. These hatcheries can produce at one time about 2,500,000 chicks in accordance with the requirements of the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association, which is the official agency designated by the United States Department of Agriculture to carry on the work of the National Poultry Improvement Plan in Kentucky.

The national improvement plan, as described by Mr. Humphrey, seeks to reduce the losses of chicks from pullorum disease, to improve production and breeding qualities, and to identify breeding stock, hatching eggs and baby chicks with respect to quality by describing them in terms uniformly accepted in all parts of the United States.

The plan also means that each bird in an approved flock is selected for breed characteristics, size, vigor and production qualities and tested for pullorum disease by trained men. Only standard breeds are eligible to qualify as breeding stock. Selected birds are banded with sealled and numbered leg bands and all cull birds removed from breeding flocks. Large, well-shaped eggs weighing 23 or more ounces to the dozen are set to produce approved chicks. In certified hatcheries eggs weighting not less than 24 ounces to the dozen are used.

CIRCULAR TELLS ABOUT BLUE MOLD

The College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky is making available to Kentucky farmers a circular describing blue mold of tobacco and outlining methods for its control. Blue mold has been prevalent in Kentucky for three years, and was present in plant beds in most of the state last year. It may be expected to appear again this season, and possibly do considerable damage unless checked.

The circular gives details about the disease and tells how P. D. B. and benzol and sprays may be used to combat blue mold.

Recommendations include the use of new plant bed sites this year, and the location of beds in sunny places where no part will be shaded.

Spraying the plants when small with a bluestone-lime solution tends to delay the appearance of blue mold. It is also is recommended that the canvas be removed in the morning, so the leaves will dry off.

Recvery of diseased plants is helped by the application of a solution of 10 pounds of nitrate of soda in 50 gallons of water using five gallons per 100 square feet of bed, and following with an equal amount of clear water to prevent burning.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Pendleton county farmers are cooperating with the Farm Bureau in forming a sheep protective association. According to a survey, there are between 14,000 and 15,000 sheep on farms in the county and the quality of the animals is being raised steadily.

Negotiations to ship cream to a Carbondale, Ill., creamery for a 3-cent pound premium on butterfat are being carried on by Livingston county farmers. They believe they can save on freight as well as get higher prices.

Lyon county farmers have agreed to produce 65 acres of strawberries, to be sold through the Cumberland & Ohio River Association with Marion, Ky., as the shipping point. Forty percent of the 65 acres will be set this spring.

In Elliott county, approximately 10,000 chicks have been bought. Many poultrymen have bought early chicks for sale later as broilers, and report that so far 95percent of the chicks have survived. A poultry school attracted wide attention.

Lewis Wilson Russell county, is feeding 39 beef cattle a ration of corn silage, corn, clover hay and cottonseed meal. Last fall Wilson made a trench silo in which he now has 75 tons of silage. He expects to make cattle a primary source of revenue.

Walton, Crittenden, Dry Ridge Williamstown and Georgetown, be followed, an denumerating various reasons why the present alignment of U. S. 25 should be followed.

Of course, if we could get the right of way necessary for a first class highway along the present alignment we would have no excuse for leaving this alignment for another; even if the other were considerably better. We appreciate very much the arguments presented by you. What we have felt, after a considerable study of the situation, is that it would be impossible for local people to furnish sufficient right of way to build a line that the traffic on that route deserves."

From the foregoing excerpt manifest that the question of rights of way constitutes a very essential part of our success or failure in the continued maintenance of the present alignment of U. S. 25.

The question of rights of way is one over which this court has exclusive jurisdiction and it is for this reason, that, I for and on behalf of the Association of which I am President, ask that this Court favorably consider the question of obtaining the necessary rights of way to warrant the retention of the present alignment with necessary changes.

To place the newly reconstructed highway literally upon the present alignment is, of course, conceded by all to be impractical from an engineering standpoint, as standards of construction have kept pace with the accelerated speed of modern automobiles. These necessary changes will, of course, necessiatate additional rights of way, some of which may be donated, and some of which will have to be procured by purchase or condemnation.

In order that the individual members of this Court may feel justifie in the expenditure of what might be thought by some of their constituents to be unnecessary and even perhaps unjustified and extravagant spending, permit me to call to your attention some statistical information, which may have escaped your observation, and which when called to the attention of home of your constituents who might otherwise oppose the procurement of the necessary rights of way, will convince the entire population of Boone County that the procurement of the necessary rights of way at the most economical price possible is not only not unwise spending, but on a last analysis is sound future.

business and a wise investment for

Let us appraise the facts as they really exist. The contemplated highway when completed, so far as Boone County, is concerned, will lie wholly in Florence and Walton precincts and some citizen or taxpayer living in those parts of the county remote from these precincts may believe that the present U S. 25, having been built, that further expenditures in these two precincts are unreal estate and tangible personalty subject to county taxation the following percentages of all county taxes, viz:

1929, 33⅓ plus.
1939 36⅔ plus.

The C. . O. & T P. Railway lying wholly within Florence and Walton precincts and that part of the L. & N. R. R. lying in Walton precinct contributes slightly in excess of ten (10%) per cent of all county taxes, sit will readily be seen that for the year 1939 these two precincts (Florence and Walton) will pay almost one half of all taxes paid in Boone County, the total being a little over 41 per cent.

Careful consideration should there fore be given the question of rights of way rendered necessary by such changes in the alignment of U. S. 25 as modern engineering standards render necessary.

One other statistical fact should be brought to your attention. If these necessary rights of way be not acquired the real will be removed entirely from Boone County, and this in my judgement will materially affect the future of Boone County when considered as a whole from an economic stand point. My reason for making this statement is that during the period from 1934 to 1939 the combined assessed valuation of Florence and Walton precincts (through which U. S. 25 passes) have increased from $3,037145.00 to 3,321560.00 or an increase of $294,315.00 an average of almost $60,000.00 per. year

If the remaining precincts had increased their total assessments correspondingly, U. S. 25 might not be considered an asset of marked advantage. But as a statistical fact the total assessed valuation of the remainder of the county has decreased from $5,957,529.00 in 1934 to $5,849,945.00 for the current year or a decrease of $107,574.00, an average of a little more than $21,000.00 per year.

If it may be assumed that the reconstruction of U. S. 25 as a divided four lane highway along its present alignment will have the assessed valuation of Florence and Walton precints at the same rate prevailing for the past five years, this will add to Boone County's tax duplicate more than a half million dollars, and when the present prevailing tax rate is applied to that increased assessment it will produce more than $3,500.00 per annum additional taxes to the amount now collected. Of course, it can not be definitely stated that such an effect will follow, but I know of no way of judging the future except by the past.

On behalf of United States 25 Highway Association of Northern Kentucky, I ask that this court accept this communication, and that it be given such publicity as this Court may deem proper, in order to elicit for the opinion of citizens and taxpayers from all parts of the county so that at a meeting of this Court to be held in April of this year a definite course may be formulated and promulgated looking to the acquisition of such rights of way as may become necessary for the reconstruction of U. S. 25, if and when reconstructed along its present general alignment.

In closing permit me to bring to the attention of this Court that in the campaign of 192, when the present bond issue was carried, and when it was then thought that U. S. 25, was the "last word" in road construction and it was also thought that Florence and Walton were both "finished" so fas as roads were concerned that the vote of Florence precincts on that bond issue were 250 for and only 26 against and Walton precincts 214 for and only 19 against.

The people of Boone County are eminently fair on all propositions and when it becomes properly understood that the acquisition of the needed rights of way is a problem for Boone County as a whole and not that of Florence and Walton, the action of this Court in acquiring the necessary rights of way will be approved by all citizens of the County in the same ratio as that in which Florence and Walton voted on the bond issue for the remainder of the county.

With kindest personal regards to each member of this Court and with an abiding faith that ultimately a correct solution of this pressing problem will be had, I am,

Very truly yours,
JOHN L. VEST, President

THE FARM AND HOME

The rate of seeding Otalian rye grass is five pounds to the acree when mixed with other grasses, and not less than 10 pounds when sowed on old lespedeza and grass fields. It may be used to patch u pthin stands of pasture and hay crops.

An abunance of pure rinking water is most important to the milk cow. A caw needs three to four pounds of water for every pound of milk produced. Improved water supplies are following installation of electricity on many farms.

For burey tobacco, allow at least 200 square feet of bed for each acre to be set. Many growers prefer twice this much. Only about half as much bed is required for dark tobacco, since less than half as many plants per acre are set.

In repairing furniture, small breaks in legs, arms or rungs can be mended by filling them with glue and nailing with brads. Use an awl or smal gimlet to make holes for the brads, so as to prevent splitting the wood.

Experienced potato growers cut seed thick and blocky, with the pieces about the size of a pullet's egg. There should be at least one eye in each piece, and more will not matter. Cutting awayextra e yes is poor practice.

Some prssons prefer the flavor and browned appearance of roasts reared at a high temperature, but searin gis unnecessary to make a juicy, well flavored product. Shrinkage is less when meant is cooked at a constant, lo wtemperature.

FOR BETTER CORN GROWING METHODS

Ways of growing larger yields per acre, so onl ythe best land need be devoted to corn, are discussed in a leaflet published by the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Crop rotation, applications of limestone and phosphate and planting hybrid seed increased yields in Kentucky are two low, it is said in the leaflet, due to poor soil and improper growing methods Corn causes the loss of more soil by erosion than does any other crop. Rows should be run around slopes—contour farming practiced Cover crops shopuld protect the land in winted. Finally more pasture and meadow crops may decrease the need for so much corn.

KITE FLYING

Safety Warning Issued By Local Light Offical

The advent ofthe kite-flying season brought a warning from Manager R. M. Hall of the power company about flying kites near electric power lines.

"Every year a number of children lose their lives as a result of this practice," said Mr. Hall, "in spite of the fast that the hazards have been pointed out repeatedly in power company advertisements." He urged parents to cooperate in preventing tragedies of this kind by instructing their children as follows:

1. Never use wire for a kie string or kite frame.
2. Never use tinsel or metallic string.
3. Nver use metallic cloth for a kite tail.
4. Never fly kites with wet string or in wet weather.
5. Never climb poles to remove kites entangled in wires.
6. Never poke sticks to dislodge kites from wires or try to pull them down by their tails
7. Never fly kites in streets because of the automobile hazard.
8. To be absolutely safe, al way fly kites in open fields states Mr. Hall.

away from electric lines, roads and highways.

"If a child follows the practice of flying kites away from electric lines he will be in no danger," Mr. Hall states, "but if he disregards this safety rule and his kite becomes entangled in a power line, he should under no circumstances attempt to remove same as he may fall from the pole or receive a fatal shock. Our local office should be notifed and a lineman wil be sent to take down the kite an restore it to its owner. There is no need for a child to risk his life."

Campaign Workers Now Canvassing Community

Boone County, together with Erlanger and Elsmere, is being organized into what is termed The Gunpowder District, Boy Scouts of America, with Scout units in several towns of our county. The District Committee opened a County wide drive for Sponsoring Members March 13, which will end March 27.

Scouting is a character building and citizenship training program for boys and cannot be self-supporting with being prohibitive to boys who need it most, thus it becomes a civic obligation and our committee earnestly solicits the sport of all citizens for this worthy cause.

Volunteer workers are canvassing the communities and it is urged that these workers be given a hearing and all the financial aid possible realizing that one is helping to build better citizens of our youth. Mr. Daniell D. Schwartz, Finance Chairman of the Northern Kentucky Council, of which our district is a part along with seven other districts throughout ten counties in this part of the state, states: "Surely no finer or more workable code of conduct was ever devised for the boys than the Boy Scout Movement. Service To God, country, and fellow human beings, the will to make and to keep themselves physically strong, mentally awake and mornally straight; these are the fundamental things in Scouting, underlying a program of worthwhile activities and progressive practical instruction . . such training during a boy's formative years must produce God fearing, responsible citizens that protect our communities in the years to come."

Local funds raised will be used locally in supporting the present Scout units through service and training rendered by a professional Field Executive who shall devote his time to extending the Boy Scout movement throughout the district and aid in organizing new Scout units in the district. Leaders for these Scouts will be trained, secretarial service, dealing with keeping records providing postage and literature will be maintained along with selection and enlistment of new leaders, transportation for field service. A year round program of activities new leaders along with the present will be trained in giving service to boys throught the district.

The ICCC camp at Walton has been able to render many Boone county farmers a splendid service in farm planning and soil improvement according to H. R. Forkner, county agent.

Ward T. Darnell, superintendent of the camp, states that the organization can assist approximately sixty new farms this year. Certainly every farmer who thinks he might be interested in the CCC service should contact the Walton camp, phone Walton 104, and talk with Mr. Darnell, Mr. Redmond or other helpers on just how they may be of assistance. The camp has introduced in the county several ideas on soil conservation, including strip cropping, crop land fencing and etc. New interest has also been created in fence construction which is one of the greatest livestock needs in the county.

The service is without charge to the farmer and everyne intrested should investigate the work the camp can perform.

Bearcats Place Man On All-District Team

Covington High school will reresent the Ninth Region at the state basketball tourney nex t week at University of Kentucky gym, Lexington, Ky

The Covington Bulldogs defeated Newport Saturday night at Dixie Heights, in the final game of the ninth regional tournament to the score of 31 to 24, to win the regional title. The game was a nflip and tuck affair with neither team having, but few fouls called against them.

Trophies were presented by G. K. Gregory, principal of Dixie Heights to the captains of the teams. Hudson received the cup for the winners and Haase received the runners up trophy.

Walton was eliminated in the first round of the tournament Wednesday night when Erlanger nosed them out by a close score of 30 to 24. It was a close battel all the way The Bearcats played a wonderful game but they could not head Clinton Henry who was in his usual form. Insidently it is interesting to note that at one time we had one ofthe Erlanger boys on our squad.

Chapman and McClure lead the scoring for the Bearcats by racking up eight points each for the loosers while Sanders was high point man for the Jaggenauts. He led with 16 points. This payed the way for the defeat of the Bearcats.

Hamilton also met defeat at the Newport Wildcats on the same night by a one sided score of 46 to 20 thus elimination both Boone County teams from the tournament.

Although Walton did not succeed in going the full round in the regional we should take off our hats to coach Sheilds and his boys for completing such a successful season of Basketball competion and for the splended record that they hung up for themselves this year.

An all tournament squad was picked. Covington placing two men on the first team, with Highland, Newport and Walton-Verona placing one each.

The first five selected on the all-tournament team are: Lehman, Highlands, and King, Covington, forwards, Hudson, Covington, center. Hass, Newport, and Chapman of Walton-Verona, guards.

The Covington Bulldogs leaves Wednesday afternoon for Lexington, Ky.

Prosperity or depression? Employment or unemployment? Lines of men in industry or lines of men at breadlines?

What makes a job for a man or an industry? A demand from a market or group ready, able and willing to buy—in short, a market.

The United States is the best market—for here is the highest wage scale, the highest standard of living in the entireworld.

But American industries are not selling all they can to this richest market because the degraded conditions of workers in other parts of the world can produce more cheaply.

When we buy a dinner plates made in the Orient we may be keeping the American potterer away from his bench; when we buy copper mined by a 50 cents a day native in equatorial Africa we are keeping an American copper miner away from his work; when we buy paper made abroad we are keeping American lumbermen and papermakers away from their trade

When we allow cheap materials to come into this country, we are tending to lower our own wage rate

When weallow cheap materials to come into this country, we are tending to lower our own wage rate and our own standard of living—and in so doing we are lessening our own market, which is composed of the wages of our workers.

Every parent's wants his children, everybody's children, to have a playground. But he needs one, too. All adults do. A hard-bitten superintendent of steel mills in Gary, Indiana once went to the late Judge Elbert H. Gary and persuaded him, as chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, to appropriate $250,000 toward the purchase of land along Lake Michigan, adjacent to Gary, to be given to the public as the Indiana Dunes State Park.

I didn't know," a friend said to the superintendend, "that you had that much sentiment in you."

"It wasn's sentiment" he replied. "I merely pointed out to the Judge that in another generation or so, unless we acted now all that would be occupied by industries or homes, greatly increased in value and out of reach. Our thousands of workers would then have no place to sit on the ground near the lake and est picnic lunches undisturbed under real trees. All the signs would say 'Private Property; No Trespassing' And that would tend to breed inefficient, discontented, dangerous- minded workers ready for anything. That's why I want the park. There wasn't a spark of sentiment about it"

Maybe not. But the end served, all the same was on the side of imperishable human values.

The ancient Greeks had a myth about a might wrestler. His name was Antaeus. He was a good deal of a nuiance, because he made every stranger wrestle with him if the stranger lost, he was put to death. Antaues could be thrown, but he always got up stronger than ever thanks to contact with mother earth. The great Heracles came along one day, and by hoking Anteus completly off the ground he succeded instrangling him, and so ended his career.

There is immense significance in this ancient tale. All of us are stronger after direct contact with ancient Mother Earth. We cannot long be kept away from it and still remain wholly normal and healthy. But an increasingly urbanized civilization makes even an occasional return to the good earth even more difficult for many of us. That very difficulty, however emphasises the need. Happy many communities—led by alert groups of citizens—have long understood that need and have long been doing more than a little to meet it. For instance, they have built kiddie parks, wading pools and woodlan camps for the youngsters—and parks and flower gardens and tennis courts for the grownups.

In this as in most cases it is no boubt only right to "think of the children first." Very well, let's do so. Let's give them a corner on recreational facilities of our communities, but let's save a corner—a grassy knowl or viney dell or just that acre down by the "depot"—for their mothers and dads. Or, better, for all of them to use together—Rotarian Magazine.

Fire Drill Efficiency In Our School

The National Board of Fire Underwriters of New York, has issued a free bulletin on fire drills for schools which should be read, studied and kept for reference by every school board.

The bulletin points out that there are three phases of adequate fire drills—plan, purpose and precedure. The plan depends upon the type, kind, design and location of each school. Definite, detailed instructions must be prepared for emptying the building.

The purpose of any drill is to perform the operation so often that in an emergency it can be carried out in a calm, unhurried manner. A real fire may occur at any minute, so no regular time should be set for the drill— they should come as a surprise. It should be kept in mind that the primary consideration of the drills is to completely empty the building as rapidly as possible. All other considerations are secondary.

Procedure involves executing the drills with complete efficiency and savings of waste motion. Drills should never be conducted in a half-way manner—except when weather conditions are exceptionally bad the building should be evacuated completely. Further drills should be varied to provide for the possibility of exists being blocked, and of getting the pupils away from walls that might collapse, once they are outside.

Experts point out that fire drills are a farce in thousands of American schools. A real fire might result in untold deaths and maimings, because of crushing panic as well as fire. It's up to every school board to see that drills are really efficient in the schools they control—and up to parents to see that the school boards act.

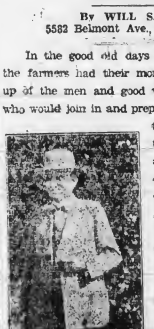
Spring Time Is Clean-Up Time

April showers and May flowers aren't far away That means spring cleaning time.

And spring cleaning shouldn't mean just shaking out rugs, washing the curtains and dusting that little used space bedroom. It should mean a definite, planned program for putting property in apple pie order, not only to improve its value and appearance, but t help prevent that dred destroyer that strikes when we least expect it—fire!

Trash-filled outbuildings are perfect incubators for fire from a carelessly dropped match or cigarette. Check over fireplaces and chimneys— from now on, such incidental heating units will be used more and central systems less. As warm sunny days come he especially careful to keep grass cut and fields clear of debris. Never burn brush when there is a wind and have water handy in case matters get beyond contro.

Above all, go through the house from cellar to attic n an inclusive "-junk-disposing" program. Those old newspapers and magazines you've put carefully away and will never look at again—that broken furniture that belongs to the worst period of design—those odds and ends of "gay nineties clothing—that jumble of worthless, inflamable knicknacks in the hall closets: Get rid of them all. Give them to a charitable organization or the junkman. And you'll materially reduce the chances of a fire hitting your home.



A Live Wire Briar Hopper

An Explanation! Why I am having my Briar Hopper stories reprinted; all but a few of my original stories were lost in the flood, having a great many requests for the stories I am having them reprinted with the intention of putting them in book form with other interesting matter—Will S. Norris.

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

In the good old days before automobiles, when the farmers had their monthly farmer's club, made up of the men and good wives of the neighborhood who would join in and prepare a good country dinner, the Briar Hopper was fortunate enough to be an associate member of the club in Butler County, Ohio. In addition to the good eats, they would have a program of different topices and events of the day, as well as discuss the different subjects about farmers and livestock.

One of their round table questions was, "If you wasn't yourself whom would you rather be?"

That's a peculiar question and I was anxious to hear the answers. Some answered that it would be nice to be a rich man, some said it would be nice to be a great statesman and some a great discovery and some said a great preacher.

One of the best was to be an educator to train men and women to their mature years.

While I listened I formulated my own answer as follows; I knew a man who had a limited education, was a plain unassuming man, did not accumulate riches or attain any great honor or fame, had his faults and short-comings but was one of God's noblemen when it came to honor and principle. I said if I wasn't myself, I would rather be this man than any other human being I knew. That was my father.

One of my good friends said; "I never heard anyone pay such a tribute to his father and would want nothing better, after I have passed away than to have my boy pay me such a tribute and I hope he will make a better man than I am."

By JAMES PRESTON

With the ever mounting clamor throughout the country for amendment of the Wagner Act, the National Labor Relations Board which operates under the act is being hard put these days to maintain its opposition to such amendments. Co-partner with the Congress of industrial Organization in opposition to proposed amendments, now being demanded by not only a large segment of organized labor itself, but business and the public as well the N. L. R. B. is struggling to regain a position of good graces in the people's eyes.

Washington obsevers read with tongues in cheeks a recent report of the activities of the regional office of the N. L. R. B. comprising New York, New Jersey and Connecticut —one of the most important sectors of the Board's work. The report covered the period from 1935 through last year, and sought to temper the public's attitude toward the activities in that period.

In addition, opponents of amendments of the Wagner Act have been sorely disappointed that the outlawing of sitdown strikes by the Supreme Court did not silence public demands for revisons in the Act. They had hoped that the decison would put a quietus on demands for amendment but instead have found the public's reactionto be one of a continued demand for permanent legislation revising the act to eliminate its onsiddedness and charges of "bias" within the National Labor Relations Board.

Members of the Congress are beginning to find this sentimnet reflected in mail from the folks back home especially from a large section of the farm population While farming was specically exempted from the operations of the Wagner Act, numerous administrative rulings by the National Labor Relations Boad have caused many engaged in various farming acitivities to feel the pinch of the law imposed upon them.

Washington probably has more private parties per week than any city of its size in the United States. The reason is that almost the entire adult population is on the Federal payroll and the work day is the same for everybody—9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. Every night thousands gather for parties in apartments and private homes.

At one party recently, several young lawyers employed in various government agencies, participated. They suggested and played a new kind of game. The game was a mock trial with " Miss Democracy, on trial.

The climax came when the defendant was "beheaded."

WESTERN KENTUCKY TEACHERS COLLEGE
BOWLING GREEN, KY.

EARLIER COMMENCEMENTS

It is not merely older manners that are apsaing; some of our newer ones have come and gone like models of automobiles. One of the institutions of our country, of course is the annual high school or college commencement day. When there were private colleges galore in the state, or at least schools that called themselves colleges, some actual traditions grew up that died with the schools themselves. State supported high schools have not existed long enough to have developed much tradition.

Once I attended a small denominational college, now long dead. It was my first look in on the big world, and my dairy and I had a good time recording all the school happenings. When the school term was over, the commencement was put on in a veryidfinified manner, even though there were only three graduates. The college band, about a corporal's guard in number, formed the head of a collegiate procession that wound around the campus and into the building. The address was given in freat form, in English, but the conferring of the degrees was in Latin, pure Ciceronian, I can assure you. To each of the three girls receiving the diploma the little speech was made, only the name, properly Latinized, being changed each time. I gaped at the odd words and wondered since my knowledge of Latin had not then begun. It was really dignified and worthy, then as well as in memory.

My own experience as a commencement speaker is now of age, as it began twnety-one seasons ago. Even in that time many changes have occured in high school commencements. As more than twenty of my hundred and fifty speeches were given in communities that never had a commencement before, you may know that I have had some interesting experiences. Oddly enough, some of these same occasions were among the most impressive, because of the people who were present. One high school, which is now probably as regularized as most of them, used to have a flower bearer, dressed like the graduate he sat beside, to receive the gifts. These flower bearers were very small children somewhat like the tots used in elaborate weddings. Ordinarily they had plenty of work to do, for presents fairly flowed in. At other high schools the ushers came up after the ceremony with the gifts; sometimes with a considerable flourish. As for that I graduated from a junior college, the same practice was in vogue. I can still recall how left-out I felt, for one of my family could come so far to my graduation, — even though the mail. "

Some of the commencements had the air of a funral. Tears were common, onthe faces of the graduates and in the voices of the numerous speakers, including the distinguished gentleman who had come by train or boat or buggy to deliver the chief address of the time. On one such occasion schocked the audience, who had wept through a long harangue on "Mother." tearfully given by the valedictorian, by saying that it was not a tearful but a joyous occasion. I have not yet been invited back to that high school and may not ever be.

There were no caps and gown in those days; it almost boke up the poo fathes to dress their children sufficiently to make the proper improvement.

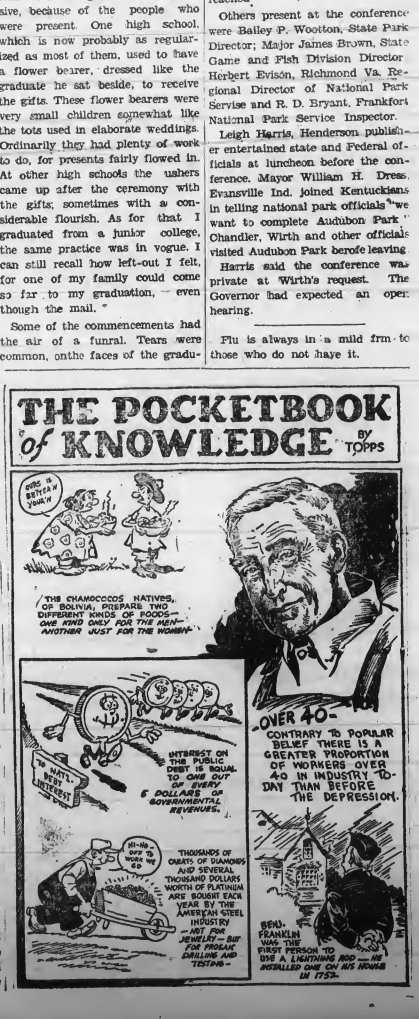
Two Outstanding C. C. C. To Remain To Complete Parks

Civilian Conservation camps in Henderson and Hopkins Counties, previously marked for removal, will remain to complete their work.

Governor Chandler and Conrad L. Wirth of the National Park Service made this announcement today after less than an hour's conference that resulted from vigorous Henderson County protests.

"We had a satisfactory conference and the camps are going to remain," Governor Chandler said Wirth merely nodded agreement and laughingly said: "The Governor is the spokesman.

The camps at at Audubon Memorial State Park, near Henderson and Dawson Springs State Park.



Specific demands as to things the state must do, which advance reports said the National Park Service would make upon Chandler, failed to materialize according to his announcement to which Wirth nodded agreement. Both declared a "thorough understanding" was reached.

Others present at the conference were Bailey P. Wootton, State Park Director; Major James Brown, State Game and Fish Division Director Herbert Evison, Richmond Va. Regional Director of National Park Servise and R. D. Bryant, Frankfort National Park Service Inspector.

Leigh Harris, Henderson publisher entertained state and Federal officials at luncheon before the conference. Mayor William H. Dress. Evansville Ind. joined Kentuckians in telling national park officials "we want to complete Audubon Park." Chandler, Wirth and other officials visited Audubon Park berofe leaving Harris said the conference was private at Wirth's request. The Governor had expected an open hearing.

A COLUMN FROM THE PAST

Seventeen Years Ago In Our Neighboring Communities .... From The Walton Advertiser

Walton, Ky. March 16 1922

Lest we forget some of the interesting facts of years gone by, this column will attempt to recall some of those facts which accured in the early 20's. It is with the greatest of reference that record these happenings in and . . . around Walton, beginning with the month of March and the week of the 16, 1922.

We wish to dedicate this column two men whose names will be long remembered by those who new and respected them and who gave to the town of Walton a newspaper that everyone was proud.

And so with this in mind the pen of time begins to record these interesting happens of yesteryears.

DIXIE HIGHWAY GOES OVER THE TOP

It was with great rejoicing when it was learned Saturday afternoon that the subscription to the Dixie Highway Fund in Boone County had been over subscribed. The sum of $21,365.00 was subscribed. Through the efforts of some of Boone counties' progressive citizens this was made possible. Everyone enterested in the matter put their shoulders to the wheel and worked manfully.

That same year the picture house of Dixon and Falls opened its doors to the public. Their was a good attendance and the crowd marveled at the artistic way in which it was arranged.

The new Atlas Hotel was to be built as soon as the bids for construction were made and accepted. Mr. McOart contemplated an entire change in remodeling. This building will be fitted with all convenience of a new hotel.

It is interesting to note that was during this week "The Shiek" one of the best pictures of the tim eplayed Walton..

Powers Real Estate ran a 30 day sale on its properties in and around town.

Mrs. B. F. Collins had a public sale and Br J. C. Powers gave away 100 pound$_s$ of sugar. Tickets were given with every 25c purchase.

And so with the memories still lingering in our mind we close the curtain until next week when this column will again recall to your minds the happenings of your town of other days.

FOR THE VACATIONIST

Surf Casting in High Boots, New Jersey.

Treasure Island, San Francisco's World's Fair.

SPOTS AND SPORTS OF INFINITE VARIETY

ERE long the lush of spring will be upon us and winter's children will begin their annual study of road maps and vacation booklets, eager to be off and away at the first crack of summer.

Sea or shore, mountain or plain, America has everything for the vacationist: the best hotels, the finest highways, the cleanest beaches, the longest hiking trails, the most elaborate system of parks and playgrounds. Only America could supply an endless variety of pleasure lands; only America would organize two World's Fairs for the same season.

Larry Nixon, author of last year's hit travel book, "Vagabond Voysging," unfolds in the April Cosmopolitan a preview of summer spots and sports. Across the country from coast to coast he takes his travel-minded readers, high-lighting each state that has some stellar attraction to offer. Every section is inviting. Nixon finds that, in comparing one section with another, all the standard vacation activities can be found, no matter where you turn, where you decide to head, or what your favorite sport might be.

America's a land of superlatives, certainly in vacation possibilities—and from every standpoint the country gives more for the vacation dollar.

COIFFURES GROWING SHORTER BUT SOFTER

Coiffures will not come down one inch off their current high horse to welcome the arrival of spring but they will make abow to the most sentimental of the seasons by softening the winter's crisp outlines.

Apparently convinced that only very young things with faces that can brave the severest of hairdo will wear the rigorously upswept lines advocated this winter, the hair stylists have turned a trick or two with curls and bangs and evolved some charming new arrangements.

One style which is equally good for youthful and mature faces alike features a soft roll suggestive of a pomadour at the front and soft flat roll suggestive of a pompadour at the front and soft flat ringlets that are the modern version of the bang on either side of the forehead. While remaining short and showing the ears, this type or coiffure yields softness where it generally is needed and modifies the severe lines that make the usual up hairdo so trying.

Another style that is so completely charming and femine it is sure to have a wide vogue has soft front curls that lie on the forehead and give a forward sweep to the hair. For this coiffure the hair is parted straight across the head from ear toward the front. The back part is arranged in a big wave that lifts it up like a pompadour and the front is in soft ringlets that lie lightly on the forehead.

With so many variations of the up coiffure, it is n ot nearly so difficult to find a becoming one now as when the style was first introduced. The smartest and safest way to get a style which will prove flattering for your type of face is to visit your own beauty sho pand let their coiffeuse work out something which will be definitely your own.

RECORD RAINFALL IN NARTHERN KENTUCKY

A record rainfall was recorded in Northern Kentucky Saturday. Rain fell Saturday sending streams out of their banks and washing hillsides of their top causing great damages to the farmers in this section of the country.

Two and point seventy three inches fell at Maysvill, thusb ringing the total number of inches of rainfall to four point ninty six for the month of March.

The river wasim ported rising slowly but not enough to cause fear of an flood. This is a great erlief to the dwellers of the bottom lands who are in constant danger of the river at all times.

16 MM. CAMERA BIG FACTOR IN VALLEE'S CAREER

RUDY VALLEE is the proud possessor today of eleven different movie cameras, each devoted to a specific job. Rudy, of course, couldn't visualize in his youth—his ambition then was to become an operator in a motion-picture theatre—how important a part homemade pictures was to play in his future life. Like everyone else of the day, he looked upon the 16 mm. camera as a toy.

In the April Cosmopolitan, Rudy writes of his cameras and projectors and tells how he struggled along an an amateur discovering things for himself by the-trial-and-error method. But today he takes pretty good pictures, Rudy admits, for his experience has been long and progressive—and expensive. And the practical gains are most gratifying.

Rudy uses his cameras for the following reasons: as a rehearsal medium; as a check on work which is being done for him and which he lacks the time to supervise personally; as a way of renting houses, buying boats, automobiles and other goods which he's too busy or too far away to inspect first-hand; as a method of getting detailed information on subjects which interest him, and as a history of all the eventful incidents in his life.

A surprising thing to Rudy is that so many Hollywood stars have gone in for homemade movies. One would think, he points out, that actors would be only too glad to forget about cameras, once they got away from the studio. But the excellent work done by such notables as Harold Lloyd, Robert Montgomery, Gary Cooper and Shirley Temple gives ample testimony that photography is a hobby to be reckoned with.

Those who witnesed the down pour Saturday remarked that it was the hadest rains they had seen in many aday. It would have been hard to have estimated the damage it would have done had this rain come later in the spring season.

With The Reds--

There's going to be a hot time in dear old Tampa when Bill McKechnie starts picking the men he expects to use in this field this season. Thirteen men are here battling for the four positions, and McKechnie starts picking the men he expects to use his infield this coming season. Thirteen men are here battling for the four positions and McKechnie has announced that only one position—first base—is definitely settled. Holder of the first base job is Frank McCormick, who slammed out 209 hits for the Reds last year in his first campaign as a big leaguer. He led both leagues in this department.

Thrown open for competition are the second, third and shortstop post. Last year's regular occupants of these spots were Lew Riggs at third, Billy Myers at short and Lonny Frey at second. All of these men are available for the present activity, but their ranks have been swelled by Charley Glock, Eddie Joost and Einar Sorenson for second base competition, Charley English and Don Lang for the third base fight; and Lindsay Brown and Nolan Richardsonto compete with Myers for the shortstop assignment Les Scarsella and Joe Mack also are here as first basemen but the fight there seems to be for the right to act as McCormick's understudy.

An other alternative is thrown open to McKechnie and it involves the case of Frenchy Bordagaray, who is listed as an outfielder in the Reds' roster. Bordagaray has had experience at third with both the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals, so he could be injected into that battle in an emergency.

Joost entered in the second base fight, plyed third for the Kansas City Blues most of last season and earned himself a place on the American Association all star team in that capacity. However, near the close of the season he moved to second when the regular occupant of that post was injured and performed so capably that scouts became convinced he belonged in the middle of the diamond instead of the hot corner. That's why he is entering the second base battle.

Rookies Charley Glock and Einar Sorensen both were members of the all star teams in their respective minor leagues last year, Glock in the South Atlantic and Sorensen in the Tree-eye. Sorensen, who was with Waterloo, also was named the most valuable player in this league. He comes to the reds highy recommended by Bobby Wallace, chief scout.

The Good Neighbor

WE HEAR much today of the "Good Neighbor" policy. One of the most encouraging signs of the progress of social justice in the world is the increasing sense of responsibility concerning the welfare of our fellow beings. Between governments and nations the "Good Neighbor" attitude should be encouraged. Community welfare campaigns often adopt the slogan, "Be a Good Neighbor." In times of disaster organized agencies spring into action to alleviate distress regardless of race, creed, or color. Men are definitely awakening from callous indifference to the sufferings of others to a desire to relieve these sad conditions and remove their causes.

In view of this awakened consciousness we may well ask ourselves, "Just what is a good neighbor?" Jesus eloquently answered this question in the parable of the good Samaritan. But it is well to remember that he prefaced his description of true neighborliness by first emphasizing the two great commandments (Luke 10:27), "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself." Then followed his story of the man who fell among thieves and was left by the roadside in his distress, and was passed by until rescued by the Samaritan, who thus proved himself a good neighbor.

Therefore, in striving to be a good neighbor to one's fellow men one must start with love for God and man. Intelligently to love God requires a correct understanding of His nature. In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, God is defined (p. 587) as "the great I AM; the all-knowing, all-seeing, all-acting, all-wise, all-loving, and eternal; Principle; Mind; Soul; Spirit; Life; Truth; Love; all substance; Intelligence." Thus God must be acknowledged as the only power and presence, the All of man's existence. One must turn to Him in childlike trust, confident that His law of ever-operative good is sufficient to meet every human problem. This is truly loving God supremely.

How easy it is to love the all-loving God, but how often it seems difficult to love one's neighbor when so much that is unlovable is apparent about him! But is the unlovely mortal one's real neighbor? The Bible tells us (Genesis 1:27) that man is made in God's image, and that image surely cannot contain or include a single quality not to be found in God, the original. That which seems disagreeable or discordant is no more part of the real spiritual man than is mud which may be spattered by a passing car a part of the person it besmirches. Even as the mud cannot deceive us, neither should the false qualities which claim to be part of our neighbor. It is our task to separate the false from the true and to see the real reflection of God. This is truly loving our neighbor.

To love our neighbor as ourselves includes even more. To love one's own true selfhood aright is the opposite of self-love, for it requires us to separate the false qualities of thought from ourselves as well as others and to prove that we are indeed "the sons of God" (I John 3:2), in thought and act. We must see ourselves as the spiritual, loving reflection of the all-inclusive Mind, completely controlled by divine Principle. We cannot unsee the faults of character in others and yet cherish them in ourselves. To see ourselves and others as God sees His creation, fulfills our duty to love another as ourselves.

Jesus' answer in the parable to the question (Luke 10:29), "Who is my neighbour?" is as applicable today as it was then. All of God's spiritual ideas, His children, are truly neighbors. Charity should begin at home, but not end there. As we meet the common daily opportunities to be helpful which lie on every side with the cheery smile, the word of encouragement, and little services, we are proving that our neighborliness is practical. . . . But we need to broaden our boundaries by including all mankind in our friendliness. . . . Then let our thoughts, like good Samaritans winged with spiritual power, reflect the Love which reaches beyond boundaries of community and country, and provides abundantly for His universe. Confident faith in His government among the nations will help to lift the heavy clouds of fear and oppression which threaten the peace of the world today.

One more lesson may be learned from the parable of the good Samaritan. The immediate need was met and also provision left for future care. Then let us add to our right thinking about our neighbor the assurance that God's continuous, abundant supply for His children is throughout eternity. Thus placing ourselves and our neighbors in God's care, knowing that all is well, we are truly loving God supremely and being a good neighbor.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Fertilizer Attachment Got Empty

FOREIGN NATIONS USE MORE FERTILIZER THAN UNITED STATES

CHICAGO.—Nations of Europe use from two and a half to twenty times as much chemical plant food per acre as does the United States for fertilizing crop land and plowable pasture.

"The average for the United States is five pounds per acre," says the report based on international statistics compiled for 1938. "Holland uses 99 pounds of chemical plant food per acre, Belgium 80, and Germany 67. Then come Denmark with 40, Norway with 29, and Sweden with 22 pounds. France uses 21 pounds per acre, Italy 17 and Great Britain 12.

"The rate of consumption in this country is, however, considerably higher than it is in Poland and Hungary which use respectively three and one pounds per acre.

"Soil conservation has been a necessity in Europe for centuries because of the large populations and the relatively small acreage of tillable farm land.

"In the United States millions of acres of farm land have been ruined because of erosion or depletion by cropping. If the nation's greatest resource—the soil—is to be conserved, an ever-increasing program of soil improvement and fertilization must be followed."

MAUURE IS A VALUABLE FARM BY-PRODUCT

Farm Manure the most valuable by-product on Kentucky farms. Conservative estimates show that there is produced annually in Ky. not less than 16 million tons of manure. At commercial prices for the plant food elements contained in this amount of manure, its value would approach 40 million dollars or about $150. per farm for each of the 270,000 farms in the state. This is only $2.50 per ton. Th average production of manure (solid and liquid is about 10 tons annually for 1000 pounds of live of stock.

About 450,000 acres of tobacco is grown annually in Kentucky. No crop responds more profitably to manure than tobacco in both quantity and if manure was properly conserved and utilized by all farmers, on tobacco and other crops it would deturn millions of dollars more than the commercial value of its plant food. When tobacco sells high the returns per ton for manure use on tobacco may be worth $5.00 to $10 or mare per ton. However, as conserved and utilized by the average Kentucky farmer probably 40 per cent of its value, or some 16 million dollars worth is wasted. Before the advent of the soil conservation program in 1936 this wastage represented more than eight times the expenditures made by Kentucky farmers' cheapest and best fertilizer but like most soils it is low in phosphate and should be supplemented with phosphate.

The value of manure for improving and maintaining values of manure ofr improving and maintaining the productivity of the soil has ben recognized from the earliest times. Its value in increasing crop yields is due primarily to the plant food elements nitrogen, potassium and phosphorus it contains. It is valuable also because of the organic matter of humus it supplies. Fresh manure or manure that has been properly preserved is compartively rich in nitrogen and potassium but low in phosphorus.

Manure improves the tilth or physical condition of the soil. It increases water holding capacity improves aeration and temperature relations and promotes the activities of bacteria and other soil organisms that make plant nutrients available. The physical properties of both heavy and sandy soils are improved by the organic matter or humus supplied by manure.

Theamo unt of plant nutrients in manure varies with the kind, age and condition of the animal. Young animals retain more minerals and nitrogen for growth, and milk producting animals also retai nmore because milk is rich in minerals and nitrogen. Mature animals not giving milk or producting young void most of the plant food cantained in the feed consumed. Richer feeds such as tankage, cottonseed meal alfalfa, clover pea or bean hay produce richer manure than poorer feeds such as cane, corn fodder straw timothy or redtop hay. Animals fed products grown on rich land or land that has been limed and fertilized properly, produce richer manure than animals fed products grown on land deficient in plant food. About half the nitrogen is lost when manure heats.

Manur einclucding both solid and liquid excrements, is about 80 percent water and if n ot properly conserved much of its fertility value is soon wasted. The proper care and handling of manure is highly important. Losses come in storage, in handling and spreading unless great care is used. About three-fourths of the nitrogen and phosphorus and nineteenths of the potassium in the feed of animals is voided in the solid and liquid manure. More than one third of the nitrogen and a one third of thenitrogen and about two thirds of the potassium are in the liquid manure. The production of high-quality manure requires adequate bedding, and and firm tramping or packing if in storage. Where the liquid, solid and bedding are stored together the least loss of nitrogen occurs if manure itightly packed and contains all the water it will hold without drainage. Bedding with high absorptive capacity is essential in saving the urine. Straw is the most common bedding. It has a considerably greater absorptive capacity when chopped. Thousands of are produced in Kentucky from tons of lespedeza straw and chaff the saving of Korean and other lespedeza seed, which should be used for bedding. It is rich in potassium and would add to the value of manure when used as bedding.

Corn is grown on practically savedand utilized is good bedding. Iti s good practice to cut corn and feed the stover in the soils to obsorb the liquid manure. Using the corn crop as ensilagefor livestock is the most practical way to utilize both its feed and manure values. Shredding corn fodder makes it more effective bedding. Cornstalks are more valuable for the soil when used with the manure. It is cheaper to buy bedding than to buy fertilizer to replace the loss of manure.

Fresh manure may be very efficiently utilized as it is produced by spreading it on grass fields or small grain. If spread on land where there is no growth the nitrogen reaches from the soil during heavy rains. Manure spread in warm weather loses nitrogen by volatilization unless it is at onceplowed under or disked into the soil

CANNED MENUS FOR HURRY-UP SERVICE

There is nothing that is more dismaying to a housekeeper than to be caught short in the pantry when expected guests arrive

On the other hand if one keeps on hand the ingredients for a quick meal it is easy to meet the unexpected guest emergency with unruffled calm. From a housekeeper who is noted among her friends for the poised efficiency with which she can provide an emergency menu comes the suggestion for a "hostess shelf" stocked with all of the necessities fo ra quick meal instead of the usual hit and miss collection of canned and packaged foods.

On this shelf she keeps three or four cans of a good grade of salman, several cans of peas corn a couple of packages of potato chips; a dozen cans of milk, two or three cans f tomatoes, two cans each of peaches apricots pears and plums a can of pimento, a box of sweet crackers and one of salted crackers, a box of gingerbread mix a tin of marshmallows, and a reserve can of coffee.

From this she can quickly evolve a delicious three course menu consisting of cream of tomato soup with toasted crackers; baked salmon, green peas, Mexican corn potato chips and a fruit complete with hot gingerbread or sweet crackers topped with toasted marshmallows. There are any number of menu combinations one may work out for herself, but the important thing is to have on hand at all times the necessary foodstuffs to put the menus together.

SPECIMEN OF LIVINGSTON COUNTY METEORITE ACQUIRED BY U. OF KY.

Just one hundred years after it was discovered in 1839, a specimen of the Smithland County, Kentucky meterite has been acquired by the Museum of Geology, University of Kentucky Lexington it has been announced by David M. Young, curator. This meteorite is noteworth as being the first to be described from Kentucky.

The discovery of this meteorite, which is on the nickel-iron variety created much excitemnt at thee time, as the finders thought that the material was pure silver. When its true nature was ascertained, the excitement still continued as the owners then thought that they had discovered a deposit of native iron.

The original weight of the Smithland meteorite is unknown as the mss was broken up and treated in a blacksmith shop. In fact, the piece obtained for the University of Kentucky collection was part of a cold chisel that had been forged from the iron as found.

Portions of the Smithland meteroite have become widely distributed, 2310 grams remaining in the collections in the United States.

The Smithland find is a siderite being composed of about 90 percent iron and ten percent nickel and is of the ataxite or structureless variety. This acluisition increased the numberof Kentucky meteorites represented in the University of Kentucky collection to 14, of the total of 19 described from the state of Kentucky.

SPRING HATS FEATURE MANIPULATED CROWNS

Cowns of the new spring felts have high ambitions and brims are taking a broader view of the sartorial situation.

These highlights of the spring hat styles were revealed in an exclusive preview at Miami, Florida, when an aerial millinery show was broadcast 2,000 feet above the resort.

An innovation in style shows the event introdced advance spring models in felt, suedes and straws. The high crowns faintly reminiscent of a Chinese coolie hat, giving a dish to the new styles in keeping with the zest of spring. Broader brims briskly turned up in back and dipping down flatteringly at one side give the ne wfelts that femine feeling which is so dominent in all of the spring introductions.

Colors for which to keep an eye out when you go shopping at your favorite milliner's are sun drops, a shade as worm and lovely as the Florida sunshine which inspired it; prunella, a rich wine shade; fox glove the color of the flower for which it is named; arbutus, a delicate pink and tiger lily a roseate hue. These will be the smart pastel colors to brighten up spring suits and tailleurs according to Miss Geraldine Knox, New York hat stylist wh obroadcast the aerial preview.

HANKIES MATCH LIPSTICKS

Chic New Yorkers are matching their handkerchiefs to the color of their lipsticks these days. A leading cosmetic house is featuring French sheer handkerchiefs in shades dyed to match the colors of lipsticks. The handkerchiefs may be had both in regular and sport size.

SPOTLIGHT ON LITERATURE

A new bed lamp being introduced by a house noted for its up to the minute gadgets is designed like the spotlight of an automobile. Adjustable to any type of bed, the lamp casts the spotlight on the reader's book or magazine and leaves the rest of the room in darkness in case friends husband or one's roomate wants to sleep.

SPRING SWISHING IN

This yeart he smartest frocks and suits will enter the spring cavalcade with a swish, thanks to their gay taffeta slips and petticoats. Leading Fifth Avenue shops are featuring old fashioned petticoats as well a slip in vivid stripes and solid colors, trimmed with ruffles and coy bows of ribbon. From present indications it will be brave ensemble that steps out this spring without its taffeta petticoat.

Society Reporter Finds 'No Trespassing' Sign In Many High Homes

DESPITE her inexhaustible supply of white gloves, Inez Callaway Robb, society reporter (blue-blooded in her own right), has been given the old heave-ho from prominent homes often enough to have made her a cynic. But her sense of humor and her small-town conviction that no one could snub an American born on the right side of the tracks and get away with it, invariably saved her tranquility of mind. And if these preventatives ever happened to fail, she would call upon that sure-fire, soul-satisfying bromide: "I've been thrown out of better places than this."

There was, for instance, Miss Robb relates in the April Cosmopolitan, the late Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt who kept her "quarantined" for thirty minutes in the vestibule because she (Mrs. Vanderbilt) "did not permit members of the press abovestairs." Or the time the second Mrs. Marshall Field invited Miss Robb to her home to discuss a charity ball she was promoting and had her shown into the servants' sitting room.

Inez Robb Presents Her Card.

It remained, however, for John Jacob Astor, 3rd, to administer the coup de grace. Miss Robb's paper had permission to photograph the Astor infant son William, but Mr. Astor requested that Miss Robb leave his ("magnificently gloomy") home before the picture was taken lest she frighten little Bill. Astor later confessed to the photographer women reporters scared him to death.

But not all of Miss Robb's adventures into high society were on the sour side. One of the earliest friends she made in her career was H. Edward Manville, the Asbestos King. Others who stand out as having treated her as a democratic equal are Prince Cyril, brother of King Boris of Bulgaria, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. She has an especially warm spot in her heart for Cornelius, who, she says, has been trying for twenty-five years to rise above the blight of inherited wealth and social position and the handicap of his illustrious name.

U. K. TRUSTEES APPORTION INCOME FROM HAGGIN TRUST

Ten graduate fellowships and twenty scholorships have been set up by the University of Kentucky Board of Trustees through the executive committee of that body, from the Margaret Voorhies Haggin trust fun destablished recently by Mrs. James B. Haggin, Versailles, Ky and New York City for the University in memory of her husband, the late James B. Haggin, multimillionaire copper magnate.

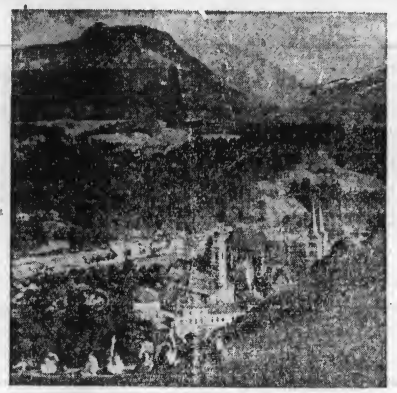
In addition the executive committee of the University's Board of Trustees set up provisons for lectures during the year so that prominent men and women could be brought to the University from time to time. There is provision for funds for publication of books, scientific articles of research and othrr pub-

The body also set aside money llcations for University interests. for the work on annotation of Kentucky laws under the directin of the Law School; for the modernization and betterment of the University radio studios carried on as a remote control station of WHAS; and made provision for the establishment of two scholarships for students from European countries to study at the University of Kentucky.

The remaining portion of the funds for this year are set aside as a eeeve pendring other University activities in the field ofscholarship that might appear advisable from time to time, according to a statement from President Frank L. McVey. The committee also hopse there may be, in the course of time an accumulated amount that might make possible the erectionof abuilding. The income from the trust has been estimated from between$25,000 and $30,000 annually.

The graduate fellowships and scholarships are established in memory of George Voorhies, Mrs. Haggin's father, and the other expenditures are made under the trust in memory of the late James B. Haggin.

STYLES OF OTHER DAYS ALL THE RAGE—



In looking over the styles that our great grandmothers wore we chuckle and wonder how they ever stood styles combined with a modernistic touch returning to remind us of the good old days.

Small hats that barely set on their heads, large ones that completely cover up, with feathers and decorations of ever description. Petty coatsin the modern maner, evening dress of early colonial times go to make up wardrobes of the modern girl.

For informal wear jackets and skirts make endless combinations possiblities withsh oes and purses to match. And the brighter the color the more in style you are. And so combining the old with the new, we have a style to make the American girl more glamorous then ever

Hitler Foresees His End; Gives Self Six Months To Two Years More!

ADOLF HITLER, sitting high up in the political driver's seat in Europe today, feared as no man has been feared since Napoleon, shakes the very foundation of his strength with these words: "My time is now short."

On One of These Peaks Overlooking the Town of Berchtesgaden in Bavaria, Hitler Has Built His "Eagle's Nest" where He Goes to Plan Germany's Future and Ponder His Own Fate.

This startling disclosure is made in the April issue of Cosmopolitan magazine in an article by Karl H. von Wiegand, noted correspondent, called "Hitler Foresees His End!" The Fuhrer, von Wiegand says, gives himself six months more, perhaps a year, at the most two years. And then . . . ? Hitler is already living in a retreat — "Adlerhorst" ("Eagle's Nest") — high in the Bavarian mountains, which many believe is his self-designed mausoleum.

Adolf Hitler

Whether this presentiment of impending disaster comes from a fear of death through illness or accident, or whether he foresees being overthrown by his enemies or even his own people, Hitler does not say. All he will commit himself to is this: 'Meine Zeit ist nun kurz' —"The end of my mission in the world is nearing." This is of terrifying proportions Hitler, von Wiegand reports, is being consumed by a fever of haste and impatience, fearful that he may not have the necessary time to achieve the goals he set for himself long ago: (1) To be the liberator of Germany. (2) To be the increaser, uniter and consolidator of the Third Reich. (3) To be the destroyer of Bolshevism. The first two goals Hitler believes he has achieved. As to the third, von Wiegand has always understood it to mean the creation of the independent state of Ukrania and the overthrow of the Bolshevik regime in Moscow.

It is interesting to note that today Hitler no longer flies, the same man who traveled almost everywhere in Germany in his own special plane. He has also given orders that Field Marshall Goring and other important members of cabinet must not fly. "An accident shall not come to the aid of enemies of Germany," he explains.

The strength, the weakness of Hiter, this paradoxical interplay of emotions, how can they be explained! Von Wiegand believes Der Fuhrer stands under some mysterious command: "that long and intense concentration on the idea and thought of the attainment of power, now achieved, has exposed him to a 'might complex' with all its mental, emotional and psychic dangers."

Hitler related to von Wiegand many years ago how the divine mandate came to him. He was lying in a hospital shortly after the war, blinded from a gas attack on the front. "And as I lay there," he narrated simply, "it came over me that I would liberate the German people and make Germany great."

That was in 1918. Today, more than twenty years later, he is still striving to make Germany great. But if he feels his time is short and must act quickly, what does this portend for the future and the peace of the world? It is a question which must not go begging. Only Hitler or the democracies can answer it.

SHADES OF PROHIBITION DAYS

Those whoha ve found it a pleasure to visit the bars of Covington cafes, and talk over the events of the past week and endulge now and than a stein of beer found their favorite roundivues locked their owners gone to the country, or perhaps not that far away but newer the less the joint was closed.

And why the Sunday curfew, Will it seems that there was a law passed recently that prohibits the sail of intoxating beverage on Sunday in Kenton County.

Although it is whispered that a few of the cafe operators where cheating, by serving some of their select patrons with the cafe operatos where cheating, by serving some of their select patrons with the invegerating suds at their bars, it is remain closed throughout the day. believed that the despensaries did

The question which now confronts the populace, in this land of milk and honey an occassional beer is how long this law will be obeyed and who will openthe first blind pig. It is evendent that the proprietors of their business places closed without a fight, and one might add a slight protest from the consumers.

First Baptist Men Motor to London.—Corbin Times headline. How have they been getting there before?

CZECH CRISES LOOMS AGAIN

Europe still breathing a sigh of releaf caused and having captulated to the demands of the Fascits countries, saw that same monster rears its head in defiance of the peace loving countries of thewestern hemisphere.

Germany is agininterfering in the internal affairs of the Czech nation. Not being satisfied with having stripped them of the best part of their country, he is ready once again to give the world anew case of jitters.

It is now believed he will demand that the Czechs break up the remaining part of the republic of which it was once so proud. The Czechs failed to reduce the size of their army after the crises of last year. This believed to be the real reason that he wishes to crush the little country and pave the way for a show with Russia in the Ukraine.

Itis hardto make business men believe February is the shortest month.

AVIATION'S SOBER NOW, BUT NOT ITS MANY THRILLS

THERE was a time when aviatian was young and reckless and crazy and fliers made their living by seeing how close to dying they could come. Restless young men, just back from the war with no training but how to live dangerously, rounded up a few dollars, bought a jalopy of a plane and went out barnstorming. A dozen times a day they flirted with death while crowds beneath thrilled at their feats and waited for the kill.

Today, aviation is no longer young and reckless; it is the nation's fastest-growing industry. And the young men who pilot the ships are no longer crazy; they're smart, cool and alert, scientifically trained for the job. But the thrill of flying is still there; without it these men might have become bookkeepers instead of aviators.

Continuing its Autobiographical series of Today's America, Cosmopolitan presents in the April issue the personal history of a man who has made aviation his career from the early days of barnstorming to the piloting of a giant airliner today. He describes how the thought of becoming a flier first caught fire when he was only eleven years old, while the other youngsters of his generation were still puttering around with toy trains and blocks and dreaming of becoming locomotive engineers, steamboat pilots, or firemen.

Youth today dreams no more of locomotives, steamboats and fire engines. They build model planes and gliders, instead. They are hungry for the clouds; they want to touch the stars. The author's son himself wants to be a transport pilot someday. His father is perfectly agreeable to the choice.

GIVES POINTS IN BUILDING HABITS

Discussing the building of habits, Miss Florence Imlay of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture says that "many adults fail to realize that the most important factor in training children is their attitude and method o fapproach to the child." She lists the following points to keep in mind in developing good habits:

Be calm and self-controlled.
Speak quietly but firmly.
Be a good example.
Think before giving an order.
Agree, as parents, on a plan but realize that it must be flexible.
Start training the child at birth to form habits of regularity.
Adjust the habit to be developed to the age and learning ability of the child.
Avaid a scene, whenever possible, but when one is started see it through.
Be consistent and do not allow a child to do somethingone day in another instance.
for which he will be punished
Play fair yourself and be fair to te child.
Guide and direct a child rather than control by domineering.
Get the child's attention, be sure he understands the directions and then insist on their execution.
Provide the child with the necessary equipment to help develop a desired habit.
Be definite in directions and avoid such words as maybe, perhaps and sometime.
Speak in positive terms and avoid the use of "don't" as much as possible.
Make the formation of the desirable habit pleasant.
Have patience.
Keep on the job.

PARW DEDICATION SET FOR 1940

Designated by Congress as a National park in 1936, Mammouth Cave may become formally in the next few months a National park the Department of Interior announced in Washington.

The land necessary to meet the requirement of Congress is rapidly being procurred by the National Park Association. The Minimum set aside by Congress is 49,100 acres.

Eugene Stewart, president of the park association said at Louisville however, that while practically all the land sought for minimum requirements set by the Federal Government has bought, condemnation suits are pending over transfers of several hundred acres." These have been set for a hearing at the May term of Federal Court at Bowling Green, Ky.

Mr. Stewart said he doubted, however that an negotiations could be completed before next year at which time a formal dedication would take place.

The property which makes up the cave area and was purcnased for the sum of 2,900,000 from the private owners. This amount raised by public subscription was $600,000 2,000,00 was appropriated by the State of Kentucky and $300,000 was Federal money and profits from the operation of the cave as amecca for tourists.

For the people of Kentucky, this should mean a world of publicity. It should bring to this state thousands of visitors annually which will mean an increased revenue to the states and people of Kentucky. Already it has attained world-wide fame for its colorful background of horse raising and economic life, Kentucky will take its place among the leading states o fthe Union.

ROTARY CLUB MOVEMENT

When we see those of our townsmen who meet every week in the Rotary club, some of us may not realize that the club to which they belong in our community is part of a world-wide movement with clubs in nearly every country on the face of the earth. The angel which brings our local Rotarians together each week is universal. This is proved forcibly by the fact that Crown Prince Frederik of Denmark, now on his way to the United States, is one of many of the world's prominent men who are active members of their local Rotary clubs.

Crown Prince Frederik is an active member of the Rotary Club of Copenhagen Denmark, with the classification "Government Administration."

Rotary believes that world understanding begins with the individual. Men of influence locally, nationally, and internationally, after they accept the principles of understanding for which Rotary stands, can contribute to the solution of many of today's problems locally, nationally and internationally. As our local Rotary club, 205,000 men in 5,000 similar clubs are meeting in 87 countries or geographic divisions of the world.

This is our community a link in a world wide chain and thus are the Rotarines of our community adding their bit to the furthering of a universal movement. Who can prophesy the harvest which future generations may reap from the good will being sowed by today'sR otarians.

BUSINESS ON UPGRADE

"Business in the United States is surging ahead. There is no longer any doubt about the present recovery," declared Roger Babson, business analyst, in a recent statement. "Furthermore, this upswing is no mere flash in the pan. We are in the midst of a real forward drive that should exceed the 1937 highs in many lines. This is the most optimistic report I have been able to give reader in a long time," continued this noted authority on business trends.

This forecast of a roseate business future is received with gratification. It rings true because that are so many impressive signs of business advance to substantiate the prediction. Cheerful business views has been abundant in recent weeks. It started when the possibility of War in Europe subsided, but at the present state of European affairs it still continues to increase.

"The farm situation is not so bad as current prices for wheat, cotton and corn indicate," says Mr. Babson, pointint out that the farm dollar today will buy what it took $1.10 to purchase a year ago. So while dollar income is off 12 per cent the actual buying power of the farm dollar is off only 6 to 7 per cent.

Prospects for peace in the utility industry, with a more cooperative attitude between utilities and the government contains possibility of large expenditures. It is estimated that deferred repair and expansion needs amount to three billion dollars. Start on a big program of building by the utilities is regarded as a likely development.

The new armament program next year may reach such proportions as to be equivalent to one-third the size of the building industry which is one of the five biggest businesses. Railroad carloadings have increased until they are within 15 per cent of the point reached last year.

HIDE AND SEEK

Baseball is called our national pastime but the game of hide and seek is more deserving of the title. Everyone plays—only they dont enjoy it in its modern version.

Today's "game" goes like this. Most of our taxes—now 63 per cent of them—are hiding in the price of every purchase. All of us, as consumers, do the seeking—wondering meanwhile why our dollars buy so little.

The National Consumers Tax Commission shows how desperate the "game" has become. In a survey at its Chicago headquarters,this organization, crusading against hidden taxes, revealed the average family living of $500 to $2,500 a year pays blindly, in indirect levies an amount equal to the Federal tax on a $7,500 income.

It found that the family's hidden taxes—totaling $160.50 or 12 per cent of all expenditures—rank in size only behind food and housing costs. The food bill is $428.76, housing takes $294.65.

The figures of the commisson—which has nearly 2,000 local women's groups already active in its crusade—show that the public is "it" and will stay "it" until aroused consumers not only seek but tag unfair and unnecessary taxes.

DANGER IN OLD CARS

Old, worn-outautomobiles constitute a menace when operated on the highways, not only to the occupants but to other people as well.

It is not surprising therefore that the suggestion is being made that there should be a systematic inspection of automobiles by officials who should have the power to order out of service obsolete cars that are dangerous to other vehicles and pedestrains.

The number of accidents on our highways amount to an alarming total each year and every means should be adopted which might reduce the toll of life and accidents. To bar all rambling wrecks and worn-out cars would probably help.

A Live Wire Briar Hopper

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

BY WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

This a story about a boy who had a theoretical education but was short on practical education. Mother and father, who conceived the idea that they would have gotten along better if they had been more educated, decided that Johnny their only son, should have a college education and be somebody in the wold and not have to slove and work as hard as they had to. They worked ed and economized and and economized and made great sacrifices so that they would be able to keep Johnny in school. In fact, he did little but to go to school, not learning the practical side of life. Instead of working his way through school and working during vacations he had a good time taking no interest in his mother's or father's work or welfare, spending most of his time in college and away from home and home influences.

He finally finished his course coming home with his diploma, which he did not value very highly, while mother and father thought they had done a great work to have a son a college graduate. Mother, especially had looked for the day when Johnny would come home a full-fledged graduate, an like all good mothers made every preparation to give him the very best she had in her humble home. He came home rather late for supper after father had gon to bed after a hard day's work.

Mother gave Johnny a fine supper arranged the best bedroom and bed, one of those old-fashioned feather beds that would lull you to sleep without rocking. Father got up early the next morning, going through his regular morning routine of chores, eating his breakfast, hitching up his team of horses, putting in a heavy forenoon half-day's work. In order to have a real chicken dinner with the rest of the dishes she prepared a half-grown chicken. She carved it into halves, intending Johnny to have one half, and mother and father the other half. Father came in from work with his work clothes on while John dressed up in college clothes.

After father had offered his accustomed thanks before eating, he said to John, which was his first opportunity to talk to him. "I want you to tell mother and I, what you have to show in the way of an education for all the money and sacrifices we have made for you. "John said; "I learned at college, sociology, physchology,, Father said, "That is enough geology" and triology." Father said, "That is enough 'ology' please explain to me what you mean by triology." John said, "I learned at college to prove taht two halves of chicken that mother has prepared can be made to serve three people without any further carving, each receiving an equal part." Father said "Alright, mother, you take one half and I will take the other half and John can have his trology part to make his chicken meal on." It is easy to be seen depending on his triology he would go hungry for chicken. John lacked practical education that the children of the present day are not getting enough of; too much theory and athelelics.

THE OLD LIGHTHOUSE STILL STANDS

By JAMES PRESTON

Dame rumor is carrying the word around Washington that several of Capitol officials are quietly andprivately recuperating from a bad case of jitters occasioned by the Supreme Court's rebuke of the National Labor Relations Board.

Those reportedly on the recuperating list are in the middle of the road officials who have been credited with quieting the liberal element of officialdom.

Reason for the jitters, according to the story, is the Court's rule outlawing the sit-down strike so angered the libeals that they want ed to throw care to the winds and brickbats at the Court again.

The middle of the roaders, remembering the public's attitude toward the last Court attack, finally persuaded their colleagues that another attack would be dangerous. So it was that heated words which almost hit the headlines wound up only as mutterings that echoed themselves out in the inner chambers.

Incidentally, when the argument was at the boiling point one official quickly issued a statement to the press praising the Court's decision—to put himself on record (just in case) and to make it all the more difficult for the angry ones to strike up a different tune.

When picket lines were established around all of Washington's principal hotels last week it caused considerable embrassment for several people. Strangely most of the embarrassment boomeranged on labor union officials instead of on Congressmen and other officials who live in the hotels.

The Congressmen were perturbed at first andpickets confidently expected that the legislators would move from the struck hotels immediately. Thus, the union officials were embarrassed to see Congressmen setting the example for the general public in ignoring the picket lines.

The situation was particularly ticklish for one Senator. He was one of the authors of the National Labor Relations Act, and is a resident of one of the hotels. To avoid the picket line, he used the garage entrance of the hotel.

Excitement among Army and Navy officials last week was almost equal to the excitement that might ly delared. Cause of it was a "joker" be expected if war has been suddenthe C. I. O. managed to slip into the Army's national defense bill. It was in the form of an amendment that would thave given the C. I. O. virtual dictatorial powers to determine what companies could participate in the nation's defense program.

The story being told around the Capital is that the "joker" was the C. I. O.'s price for peace in the ranks of labor. The C. I. O., according to the story, laid the amendment before certain high government officials with an ultimatum of "include it in any peace in labor." The officials supposedly placed the amendemnt in the hands of a friendly Senator and it was included when the defense measure passed the Senate.

It might be well for Mr. and Mrs. Citizen to brush up a bit on personal history in the next few months. Reason is that the census takers will be around before long with a set of questions that are likely to put a heavy strain on most people's memory.

It is not going to be a job of just counting noses, etc. This year the government wants to know what each citizen was doing 10 years ago; where he lived 10 years ago; what his earnings were and any number of other memory puzzlers.

U. K. PROF. TO CONDUCT PUBLIC HEALTH INSTITUTE

FOLK FEARS

Some weeks ago as I was sitting in the outer office of a physician I listened tothe conversation going on around me. One elderly after garrulous person was assing various people in the office what ailed them. One sad-faced woman said she was suffering from rheumatism. The old gentleman who had asked her, within five minutes, while taking to some one else, in the same loud tone, said, "There ain't no cure for cancer and rheumatism." That reminded me of many ofthe folk fears that are still to found. No wonder all sorts of folk remedies are applied, in a vain hope that something will turn the trick. The idea of cause and effect is not very obvious in many minds. Disease just comes, and some of it is incurable, just as a tree struck by lightening blights everything made of it, and a fire so started cannot be put out with water.

People who live in good houses and have a respectable income often forget how much a creature of fear their more humble brother may be first of all ,there is the law, which many a man fears more than death. Some people are thrown in a positive panic when a legal request is presented them, just as many Negroes fear that there is some trick in a check. Fear of the dark I have already discussed in this column but much else could be sid fr wat it hcaue people to thinkand do. One of the worst fears concerns itself with what is strange and new. The old-fashioned steam engines were such fearful things that some people are still afraid of anything that resembels an engine. I know plenty of people who are a bit excitedand puzzled when they talk over a telephone.

The old gentleman in the doctor's office voiced a fear that is found everyheere. In spite of the great advances that have been recently made in the world of medicine, many a person still fears that the diseases that the educated know can be cured are hopeless. I can recall when tuberculosis was looked upon as a curse that could not be avoided. I believe that many a person whom I knew would have been living today if he had not become a victim of fear. Rheumatism that curse ofthe days of bad tonsils and infected teeth, held terrors for many people and still does. The idea of germs i gradually making itself understood, but the chemistry behind rheumatism puzzles most people beyond yords; hence the old man's assertion that it is incurable.

Fear of the weather and of storms odes not seem so prevalent as formerly. I can remember when every body disconnected his telephone when a storm came up, when people sat or lay on feather beds to avoid being struck by lightning, when anything made of metal was quickly laid aside during a storm. Even for the brave nothing is quite so puzzling as the freaks of storms, but a sort of curiosity in what is coming next often saves the day. People who have not prayed in years have been known to break forth rather feverently in a bad storm. Thus we are all ofthe folk when fear comes in some spectacular or unusual form.

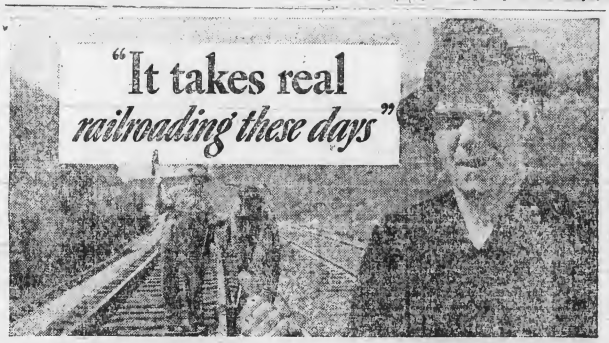
PAN POLITIKON PLANS STUDY OF IRELAND



Ireland will be the country studied this month by students of the University of Kentucky, under a March by Pan-Politikon, student group at the state university on the study of international affairs.

Special lectures will be given by faculty members in connection with the study of Ireland. be held for all University students with possibly a foreign speaker, during the month.

Designed to give students an impressionistic picture of a foreign country about which little is known, and to increase international comity, Pan-Politikon chooses one country each year for study.

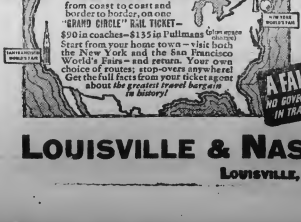
A Louisville printing executive was fined for working on Sunday. Attention of the courts had better be turned toward enforcing the law against vagrancy on week-days.

WHAT we men are doing here is called "maintenance of way."

You'll have to think twice to name any other kind of transportation that does that job for itself.

They tell me that more than thirty cents out of every dollar the railroads take in goes for maintenance, interest, taxes and other costs due to the fact that the railroads do build and maintain their own roadways—and that more than half of the total railroad investment is in roadway.

If other kinds of transportation that use "ways" built and maintained by the public had to pay the full cost of building and maintaining the "ways" they use, they couldn't even come close to furnishing their service for what the railroads charge.



That goes for the so-called "cheap transportation" by inland waterways. Almost without exception, the subsidy paid by taxpayers for each ton of freight moved on these rivers is as much as, and in most cases more than, the total cost of moving the same freight by rail.

The biggest part of the taxes paid by highway carriers goes to building and maintaining the roads they use—and they tell me that studies by a number of state highway departments show that these taxes do not cover the highway carriers' real share of road costs. Railroads pay more taxes per dollar of revenue than highway carriers do. And the big point is that railroad taxes are not used for building or maintaining their roadway—they go to meet general expenses of government.

That's why I say, "It takes real railroading these days." And the railroads are doing a real job.

When the railroads haul a ton a mile at an average revenue of one cent and pay all their own costs, they're doing a job that can't be beat by any other transportation system in the world, bar none.

And when they do a job like that—it seems to me that about all they need is a square deal in transportation.

ENTERTAINED HER CLASS

Last Friday evening, Mrs. A. R. Johnson, delightfully entertained in honor of her Sunday school class. The home was beautifully decorated in green, being St. Patrick Day.

The evening was spent games and puzzles and everyone present was happy a a carefree school girl..

About this same week it was announced that the Walton Loose Leaf Warehouse had lost about $17.00 onthe 1918 crop of tobacco. Several prominent people of Walton passed away. Among those who died were Nicholson Sannings and James A Littrell.

TO BUILD RESIDENCE

John Sleet has purchased a lot, corner of Edwards avenue and Dixie highway in the South end of town from H.C. Diers and in addition to him in part payment. Mr. Sleet anticipates building a six-room house with bath, two story with all modern improvements. He has the plans in the hands of contractors, but has not decided whether to build a brick or frame residence. He anticipates beginning building at once.

HIKING PARTIES

The students of the Walton high schoolschool have been indulging in numerous hikes this winter in the evening after study hours for the healthful exercise of the stunt. Lost Friday night quite a number indulged in another of their hikes going as far as Miss Helen Percival's home in Kenton County. Among the party were the following: Mis Hilda Sleet, Ellen Marshall, Myrtle Grubbs, Eve Belle Franks, Burdella Feagan, Dolly Tools, Georgia Rouse, Lucia Ransler, Fay Metcalfe, Marvin Gaines, Raymond Laws, Adolph Edwards, Lee Saunders, Cillofrd Johnson, Harry Daughtery, Cillord Powers, Asa Rouse. The party was chaperoned by Prof. W. R. Champion, all enjoyed a most delightful time.

B. F. Stansifer and Manie Northcutt purchased the Rake Shoe Store No. 8 Pike Street Covington and were doing a good business. The boom era was in the making and which was to last until 1929. Those who can recall the early 20's remember this period as one of gaity and prosperity, little realizing that the so called depression period was just around the corner.

Uncle Sam cannot devalue a golden opportunity.

L&N TO REDUCE COAL WASTE ON THEIR LINES

It takes from 1,200 to 1,600 pounds of coal to stop and start a long frieght train, according to the March 1939 issue of the L. & N. Employes' Magazine. The article points out that such an unnecessary stop could be eliminated from each 100 mile run, it would mean that the road was reducing its fuel consumption by a scoop-a-mile, which is the goal that has recently been set by the L. & N.

Such a reduction might seem small, but if it were accomplished reduced its coal bill annually by almost one half million dollars.

There are, of course, numerous ways in which such reduction might be obtained and the article mentions among other things, proper operation and maintenance of stokers lubrication appliances and the various other devices on locomotives as well as a careful handling of the coal used in order that it might be clean and of the best quality. The article also point out that since 1923, on the L. & N., the number of pounds of coal consumed per gross ton mile declines from 170 pounds to 126 pounds in 1938.

AVOID SUFFERING; AUTO CLUB WARNS...

DON'T DRIVE CARELESSLY

Careless automobile drivers are killing themselves as well as other motorits every day, according to Frank Switalski, Executive Vice President of the Cincinnati Automobile Club.

Careless motorists are in no particular class. A wealthy banker or business man may be a dangerous driver while a common laborer in an old flivver may drive safely. No one can explain why men or women risk their lives, especially on snowy, wet roads. No one can understand how a motorist can drive carelessly toward spots where children are sled riding, Mr. Switalski stated.

February and March are dangerous months, according to the Cincinnati Automobile Club. Snow, ice, fogs, rain and all the whims of Nature combine in these months to trap the foolish driver who speeds ahead as though the road is perfectly dry.

The safe driver never lets his car get beyond his control. On wet or slippery streets brakes don't mean a thing if the car has too much speed to bring it to a stop without skidding.

The Cincinnati Automobile Club, in a recent survey, finds that the pedestrian is not without fault. Most accidents occur between pedestrians and automobiles, indicating that the pedestrian foolishly steps from the side of the street into the path of an automobile. The automobile, being heavier and moving faster, cannot stop as quickly as a pedestrian. The pedestrian with good judgment gives the automobile the right of way whether in the right or wrong, Switalski said. Better avoid an accident than win an argument. Motorists may join the division of the Cincinnati Automobile Club in which they reside in Ohio, Indiana or Kentucky.

The Jansen Hardware Co., of Covington, local John Deere dealer, is putting on another big John Deere evening program at The Simon Kenton School in Independence, March 28, at 7:30 p. m. for farmers and their families of this and neighboring communities.

"The Tuttle Tugger", an all-Hollywood picture, will be the main feature of the evening entertainment and educational meeting. Packed with one hearty laugh after another, this rollicking all-talking picture promise to be o real treat for everyone who sees it. In the cast of Hollywood actors are Arthur Lake, Judith Allen Victor Price, Gerta Meyers, Agnes Ayres, Jack Rice, Allen Caven, and many others.

The picture tells the story of a salesman and a saleslady who get their people completely mixed up, and—what a mix-up it causes! Leroy Bacher, the new milking machine salesman for the Tuttle Tugger Company, thinks he knows all about farming and tries to help the latest model. At the same time he is trying to sell a milking machine. Every time he tries to help he causes trouble and plenty of it. It's a picture everyone will enjoy.

Four other brand-new, all-talking pictures will be shown in addition to the feature presentation. They include: "Around the Farm Clock"—an interesting, educational picture showing up to date power farming methods and equipment; "The Mark of the Genuine"—an instructive picture that shows how to keep farm equipment working like new down through the years; "Mr. Sheppard Looks Inside"—an picturing of modern farm tractors, and a short cleverest showing new developments in agricultural equipment.

In addition to the five talking pictures, the John Deere Evening program will include several talks and demonstrations in which you will be interested.

The Jansen Hardware Co., cordially invites every farmer, every farmer's wife, and every farm boy in thisarea to take part in this big evening of entertainment and education.

Plans are being made to make this open house one of the big events of the year in this community. Many new ideas will be presented during the day which will be valuable to everyone present According to Jansen Hardware, Co. admission will be by ticket only and any farmer who has not received tickets can get them for the asking at his store any time before the show.

L&N EMPLOYEES TO RECEIVE TROPHIES

A new departure in safety recognition was inaugurated just recentlp on the Louisville & Nashville with the purchase of five safety shields, which will be awarded at an early date to the divison which won honors in safety work during 1938.

The trophies are of bronze metal finished in a beautiful verde green, and are mounted on teakwood. They will replace the safety pennants formerly given and it is the intentionto dispay them at various points onthe successful divisions during the forthcoming year.

In 1938, the Cumberland Valley Division won top honors, closely followed by the Evansville and Knoxville & Atlanta Divisions, respectively. St. Louis Terminals won a special award for terminal safety and South Louisville Shops was granted special recognition for having the lowest casualty rate on the System.

Having two World's fairs take place at the same time migth seemingly make matters somewhat difficult for the person who likes to "go every place and see everything," but the sensationally low "grand circle" railroad fares, which will be inaugurated on April 28, of this year, will do much to facilitate things for those who propose to see both the San Francisco and New York World's Fairs.

These "grand circle" tickets will sell sell for $90.00, good in coaches, or $135.00 plus Pullmand cirge for space occupied good in Pullman, and will entitle the holder to travel from his home to the San Frisco attraction, thence to the New York Fair and then back home, without a re-tracing of the route. Or, the procedure may be reversed. Liberal stop-over and other privileges ar allowed and the tickets, which can be secured as late as October 28, 1939, will be good for use two months from date of issuance.

HOW THE MATCH WAS INVENTED

Pick up a match and light it. It took enventors over a thousand years to make that simple gesture possible. While that an Arab named Bechel discovered phosphorus about eleven hundred years ago, we know definitely that an Englishman, Geo. Haugwitz accidentally came across that chemical which is the most important element in the modern match. That was 1570, but phosphorus was so dangerous to use that he didn't know what to do with it. A bit later, a man appropriately named Brand rubbed phosphorus between two sheets of heavy brown paper and managed to strike a fire. This method never became popular as the user was liable to get badly burned. Travelling magicians found that the weird glow cast by phosphorus was extremely mystifying to their audiences.

In 1827, John Walker, a druggist of Stockton-on-Trees, England, invented a match by the greatest of luck. While puttering around in is prescription department, he happened to scratch against a sheet of sand paper, the tip of a small stick dipped in Chlorate of Potassium. To his amazement, the stick burst into flames. By experiment, he made a match of Chlorate of Potassium, sugar and gum arabic to hold the mixture together. You will not be surprised at the use of common sugar for fire making purposes if you have ever noticed sugar flares and blazes when lit. Walker sold the match, which was known as a lucifer, at the rate of eighty four for one shilling or 25 cents. The match had to be struck pretty hard, sometimes before it would light and the odor was extremely strong.

Dr. Charles Saurian, a Frenchman, was in St. Louis at the time Lewis and Calrk were starting out for the Northwest and he made a supply of matches for the expedition. The match was a chemically treated stick which lit when dipped into a preparation liquid. About this match there is an interesting story. The party ran out of meat while near the present site of Portland, Oregon. It was too dark to hunt in strange country, so Calrk visited a tepee nearby, to buy some meat from the Indians. The tribesmen were hostile and refused to sell. Clark, in desperation, pulled out his match, bottle and struck a light. The Indians thought he was a great medicine man, and sold him all the meat that he needed.

The same Dr. Saurian invented the first prosphorus match many years later in 1837. He proved that phosphorus was the best means of getting a light. He was a better inventor than a buiness man as he neglected to get a patent and soon the match was being manufactured all over Europe and America. Almost immediately, the workers, who made the match in the poorer tenement districts, became afflicted with a terrible disease called "Phossy jaw." This was the result of contact with phosphorus. Investigation showed that if "red prosphorus" replaced the "white phosphorus" then being used infection would be greatly lessened. It was also shown that too much chemical was used as it took only a very small amount of phosphorus to make amatch light. first American to patent a match. It was widely used. Mass prduction and a reulting drop in price came in to the industry in 1846 when Reuben Partridge invented the match stick cutting machine.

Many large fires and dangerous injuries resulted each year from the sudden ignition of matces and efforts were made to develop one that would not burst into flames unless it was truck. A match known a a Congrove was brought out that would light only when scratched on a special surface. In 1856, Ludstorm, a Swede, invented the modern safety match. He mixed phosphorus with sand and placed it on the box cover instead of combining it with the chemicals in the match head. The United States is one of the few nations in which the match is not a monoply that can be purchased only at government stores.

U. K. RECEIVES $1,000 CARNEGIE GRANT FOR FURTHERING PLAN OF APPRECIATION OF GRAPHIC ART

An additional grant of $1,000 from the Carneigie Corporation, to further a plan of appreciation o graphic art, has been given the University of Kentucky which will enable that institution to acquire a lithographic press and complete equipment for the lithographis and woodcut processes, according to an announcement from the University.

This grant of$1,000, doubles the original amount given for the purpose when the plan was endorsed by the Carneigie Corporation two years ago.

NO ACCIDENT ON L&N IN 21 YEARS

The L. & N. Employes, Magazine quotes the Knoxville New-Sentinel's comments on the L. & N. record of there not having been a fatality in a train accident on its lines for more than 21 years, although 178,-224,428 passengers were carried.

"This record for safety is so phenomenal," says the New-Sentinel, "as to be almost unbelievable. And don't fool yourself into believing that it just happened. The railroads for years have preached safety, safety. That record is the result of real efford day by day throught the years."

The New-Sentinel believes there is a real lesson in automobile safety in what the railroads have done. "By its very nature automobile travel can never be made as safe as train travel," say that news-Sentinel believes there is a real lesson in automobile safety in what the railroads have done. "By its very nature automobile travel can never be made as safe as train travel," says that newspapers "But a converted safeyt effort over the nation—such as the railroads have put out for years—can make automobile travel less dangerous. The reduction of traffic deaths in the United States by more than 7,000 this year is an indication of what can be done."

B. W. W. Strain, general agent, Kansas City, Mo., and John Adams, engineer, Louisville Terminals, between them have over a century of service with the Old Reliable to tehir joint credit. Both received diamond buttons, emblematic of 50 years of continuous service, just recently. Mr. Strain commenced work with the L. & N. on February 22, 1889; Mr. Adams on March 18, 1888.

Although in different branches of the service and the widely-separated points, both are still going strong and are typical of the Company's veteran employes.

THE RECORD.... Facts That Concern You

HERE, MR. FARMER, IS A BIG, NEW CUSTOMER!

BEER BUYS THE PRODUCE OF 3 MILLION FARM ACRES

AND HERE, MR. WORKMAN, ARE A MILLION JOBS MADE BY BEER

AND HERE, MR. TAXPAYER, IS A HUGE SUM TO LIGHTEN YOUR TAX BURDEN!

GOOD crops at good prices . . . isn't that the kind of farm relief that farmers really want? Since 1933, the brewing industry has bought 15 billion pounds of American farm products . . . paying good prices, too.

Add to that, the million jobs that Beer has made . . . and the fact that Beer pays a million dollars a day in taxes: local, state, national.

To safeguard these advantages, the brewing industry stands ready to cooperate fully with all law enforcement authorities. The brewers can enforce no laws . . . but they insist that retail beer outlets should give no offense to anyone.

HOW THE AUTOMOBILE WAS INVENTED

Nicholas Cugnot, a Frenchman, invented the first automobile way back in 1770. Years before a Chinese missionary had built a carriage that moved by means of windmill. A Britisher named Hugo Upton had patented a disign for a car driven by sails. It remained for Cugnot's car to be the first to move under its own power. The vechicle was three wheeled with boiler perched on the single front wheel. The boiler was fed by wood and the machine could go but one hundred feet before comin to a stop. It had a top speed of 2 1-4 miles an hour whihh was considered slow even in 1770.

Oliver Evans of Maryland rode about in what he called a "steam wagon" a few years later but it was in Europe, especially in England, that mechanics turned out a large number of self propelling cars. It became quite the common sight to see horseless carriages steaming over the roads. They competed successfully with the stage coaches for passenger and freight transportation. James Watt, the inventor was doubtful about the future of the automobile, though that they were doomed a failure 'unless God works a miracle in favor of these carriages." Public opinion began to turn against automobiles and many laws were passed for their regulation. During the day time, am man had to walk several yeards ahead of the waving of a red flag to worn off drivers of nervous horses. At night, red lanterns had to be carried fore and aft. Toll bridges and turnpikes raised their rates so high that it became too expensive to travel by motor conveyances. The finishing blow came in 1850 when Parliament passed a law which prohibited a mechanical carriage from going at a speed of more than four miles an hour. This was to be a public safety measure as many accidents were claimed to have resulted from the frightening of saddle and carriage horses. Nothing further was accomplished in England until 1894 when Parliament ment permitted autos to go as fast as twenty miles per hour.

The modern car was born in 1885 when Gottlieb Daimler invented the first gas motor. Benz, improved the motor a few year later and put it under a hood over the two front wheels. He constructed a chassis that served as a model for the present day automobile.

Americans were busy making motor driven carriages and one inventor named Dudgeon predicted in 1867 tha "if roads are ever smoothened out, the horseless carriage will become popular." Before the turn of the century, more than forty firms were engaged in turning out automobiles for commercial use. Among them were: Henry Ford who put out a model in 1893, Maxwell, Franklin and Olds, all familiar names in motor history.

These pioneer models were undependable and on long trps, it was necessary to carry spare parts and plenty of extra gasoline. Service stations were few and far between. Blacksmith now had to know something about automobiles as well as horse shoeing. They cost a good deal, these early cars but Ford put out well built and inexpensive car in 1908. This was the famous Model T "tin lizzy" that sold more than 15,000,000 before being discontinued twenty years later. Electric cars powered with storage batteries were popular for a time but they were too costly to run. In these early days, there were just two autos registered in Kansas City andboth of them met in a head-on collision in which theywere badly smashed.

By 1920, the self starter came out and no more was it necessary to crank up on cold and rainy mornings. Engines became more powerful, roads improved and the auotmobile became an important part of our modern life. Surely, it has come along way from the Cugnot steam car of 1770!

With The Reds--

There is a new situation in the camp of the Cincinnati Reds this spring. A deemphasis has been placed on the result of exhibition games with new men who have possibility to break into the infield.

Last spring ,when the Reds were the sensation of the Grapefruit League, leading the Florida teams in victories up to the time, they broke camp, McKechnie played more for results because of his desire to build the morals of a team demoralized by a tall end finish in 1937. His plan was effective for the Redlegs regained their poise and developed into the most surprising team of the 1938 major league season.

Now Bill feels that it is not necessary to concentrate on building moral, for the club already has that. He believes he should give playing opportunities to anybody who has even a remote chance to be of service. Some of the men he will play are not regarded by him as highly as others who will be on the sidelines, but he wants to go right down the line to exhaust every possibility of a dark horse coming through.

The men he does put into the ball games will play their hardest and attempt to win, of course, but the deemphasis comes from the sending into action of several players who probaby will wind up on Clubs in the Red's minor league farm system.

McKechnie belives the exhibition games the Reds ar playing will have considerable bearings on the National League race, not from the Grapefruit League won lost angle, but from the possible benefits of uncovering a man or two who can eliminate the troubles the Reds have had in their infield. If these games produces another McCormick, Craft Vander Meer or Whitey Moore for an infield position, you can definitely count on McKechnie opening up with adjectives that have been kept within his mouth up to this time. The reason Bill has been so mum is because he doesn't know yet whether he has uncovered his man. He makes it a practice never to talk until he has something to say.

Thirteen infielders were taken to the Red's camp this year, ten of them to try for the tree infield positions, exclusive of first base, which is Frank McCormick's personal property.

"THE CORNATION SCOT" ON DISPLAY AT WORLDS FAIR

"The Coronation Scot," a more modern and stream-lined version of its cousin, "The Royal Scot," which paid these shores a visit in 1932 is coming for a rather prolonged stay in this country, it is announced in the March 1939 L. & N. Employes' Magazine.

After April 30, 1939, "The Coronation Scot," wil be on display at the New York World's Fair, but prior to that date it will make a 3,121-mile and 12-day jaunt thru the hinterland, visiting a number of important American cities, including Louisville, Cincinnati and St. Louis. It will be in Cincinnati on March 31. Distinctive in design and styling an quite different from its American counter-parts, the "Scott" when not on furlough, makes the 400 miles or more between London, England, and Glasgow, Scotland, in the amzing time of six and one-half ours.

Style is what a girl who has it cannot lose, holds the job, but his salary has stopped.

MILK HEARING

Boone county was well represented with dairymen at the Federal Milk Marketing hearing in Cincinnati on Monday and Tuesday of this week. The question of supporting the Federal Market Administrator and a fair price paid producers were the chief subjects of discussion among producers.

These Federal hearing was called because of certain marketing problems that have arisen the past few weeks. An outside dealer came into the market cutting the retail price of milk to nine cents per quart. Other deelers reduced their prices to meet competition and the dealers in turn attempted to cut the price paid to producers to make up this loss of revenue. The administrator would not permit this cut because of previous market agreements. The dealers in turn brought civil suit tocust thea dministrator.

Boone county dairymen as a whole strongly favor the maintaining of the administrator and the holding of a fair equitable price to Producers.

JAPAN BUILDS A NAVY

Japan's announced intention of attempting to build its navy up to equality with the American is one of those sobering developments so common in the world today which speak for themselves. Impressive arguments are offered in every world capital to show that the responsibility rests with someone else. Japan justifies this latest decision on the ground of American naval expansion. Washington justifies its expansion on previous Japanese expansion. In Europe the same vicious circle prevails as the arms race mounts to an intense pitch.

The new naval race can mainly be dated from the launching of the German pocket-battleship Deutschland in 1931 and from the efficient manner in which Japan kept building to the full legal treaty limit in those days and Great Britain lagged. During the past few years the United States has been steadily catching up, while Britain has suddenly entered into naval building with a burst of energy.

Who is to blame doesn't matter much now. The race is on. No nation feels it dare lag behind. This is at once a product and cause of mounting world tension. One ray of hope is that the pace must soon become an unendurable strain to the weaker. When it does, common sense will probably reassert itself in a new willingness to consider limitation of arms. The naval potential of the pacemakers, Britain and the United States, far exceeds that of the nations which seeks to remake the outlines of the world. It is extremely doubtful that Japan can build to parity with the United States and it is certain that it could not even approximate parity if American shipyards were stepped up to capacity.—Christian Science Monitor.

SUPERFLUOUS PROTECTION

A bill recently was introduced in the Congress by Representative Steagall, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, seeking to increase the maximum amount of insurance for bank deposits under the FDIC from $5,000 to $10,000. With approximately 98 per cent of all the bank accounts in this country fully protected, we fail to see the necessity for or desirability of this increase. The original purpose of the insurance act was to restore confidence in our banking system and to eliminate the fear of loss to depositors. The present maximum of $5,000 has fully accomplished this purpose, and increasing the limit to $10,000 would serve no useful end. Under the present law, not only do the depositors have insurance, but the bankers, too, have it against runs. At present the closing of a bank may mean some inconvenience to the immediate community, but does not create more than a ripple of interest outside the community directly affected. And even the inconvenience suffered by the community is temporary, as 98 per cent of the depositors are assured that their individual claims will be paid in full.

ACCURACY ALWAYS

"Accuracy Always" is the battle cry of every newspaper, and should be the motto of everyone connected with a newspaper. When writing about any event, no matter how small, be sure that you have the names, initials, time, place and other facts correct. No one wants to see an incorrect account of an event he has witnessed.

While this admonition directed primarily to our correspondents, others who from time to time send news items to this paper are requested to report stories as accurately as possible, in order that we may have the facts straight when the story appears.

Accuracy in the reporting of affairs in which the reporter has no direct interest is as important as when the reporter is in attendance. Mistakes in a newspaper are boldly exposed to public scrutiny. One mistake in a newspaper overshadows all the rest of the items which are reported correctly.

THE WORLD PROBLEM

"Millions of men and women at this moment are hungry, homeless and ill clad. The same streets they roam unmournful and desolate are filled with the things they need. They cannot buy them; and their owners are going bankrupt because they cannot sell them. One-half the world is striving to obtain goods which the other half is striving to dispose of; and we see no means of bringing them together. We have facts: we do not know what to do about them."—Robert M. Hutchins, President of the University of Chicago.

Many problems now face the civilized world, but the most pressing of all is the problem of supplying the means of providing adequate food and and livable housing to our unemployed. Men and women, able and willing to work, are idle with no way of obtaining the food shelter and clothing they so desperately need. Something separates them from the source of supply.

Throughout the whole realm of nature, man, with all his vaunted wisdom, is the only living thing that has allowed himself to become separated from the food supply which nature provides so abundantly. This is not a natural situation, but come from the arrangements of men.

For the solution of this problem and its remedy, we must get back to first principles. How did the first man solve this problem? He knew, without thinking about it, that the earth is the storehouse of nature, from which all our material needs are supplied; that the earth is man's field of employment; that it is the source of all jobs and the only source of supply—that we can produce wealth only by working on the earth or on something that has come from the earth. The land, the water, all of the natural resources, lay there at the feet of he first man; they were free; they were his without price, as free as the air he breathed. And so the first man asked no man for a job, but employed himself on the free earth.

His only tools might have been sharp or flat stones or his bow and arrow, but these worked for him, and gave his greater results from his work; in other words, increased his wages. He could get more game in a day with his bow and arrow than with a stock or with stones, and he could raise more from the land by the use of a hoe than without it. In other words, when men have free access to land, employment is always available, and the tools and labor-saving machinery work for them, reduce the hours of labor and increase their wages or the returns to labor.

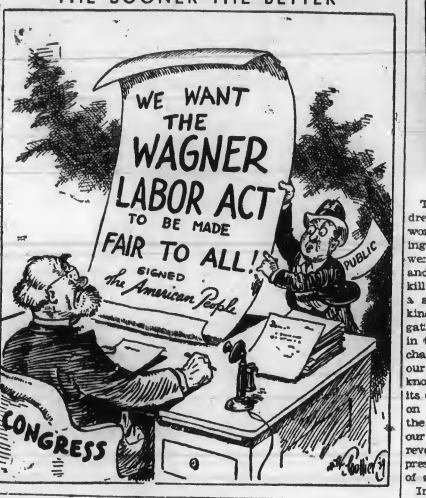
By WILL S. NORRIS
5562 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

This story is about a class leader of the church and a preacher. The class leader, like too many other churchmen, liked his liquor and thought he could drink secretly. He had his liquor expressed to him in book form. Leading his friends to think that he was quite a reader, he received a good many books. One time he was at the church leading in prayer meeting when the express agent of the town entered the prayer meeting room and said: "Brother, you had better come to the express office at once and get your book before it all leaks away." Wasn't that a predicament for a class leader to get into? The preacher of the story said to his congregation: "I can tell you how you can reduce the liquor traffic and put an end to so much of the wet and dry propaganda. If all of you churchmen would quit drinking there would not be such a demand for liquor and many would have to go out of the liquor tariffic."



When the people of the churches realize they should help create sentiment against the saloons as they say they do, and if they are sincere in not wanting the saloons to come back, there is no reason why we should not have a saloonless nation. The church people acted as if all that had to be done was to put the Eighteenth Amendment in the Constitution and the temperance job was complete, and there would be no more necessity of teaching temperance in the schools and churches. Then they began to let down.

I heard Mr. Clarence Darrow make his challenge to the churches: "What has become of your temperance societies, your moral teachings and training against intemperance? What has' became of such temperance songs as 'Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight'?"

Mr. Darrow was right in his challenge. From my viewpoint the temperance workers have laid down on the job, including myself and I am a churchman. Some say this is wet and dry talk. No, it is temperance talk. If I understand both sides, they each claim they want to make our nation better with temperance, which will have o be brought around by education and creating public sentiment against intemperance and drunkenness, which I believe the majority of people favor. If we do not do it, coming generations will. In my stries it is not my aim to take sides on any religious or political issue, but to give my viewpoint of all sides, which are my sentiments and for which I am responsible.

THE SOONER THE BETTER

By JAMES PRESTON

There was more than a little humor in the calling in by some of the Capital's brain trusters recently of one of the nation's foremost private accountants, to whom it assigned the task of preparing a definition on manufacturing costs in connection with one of the many scrutinies being made into American business. After puzzling for a moment or two the accountant said he considered the task too great a one to accomplish offhand and asked for some time to prepare it. Several days later he forwarded his definition to Washington. It had been carefully prepared and comprised between 200 and 300 words. Annoyed, the brain trusters returned it to him and insisted that he put the definition in not more than two sentences. They told him if he could not do it they would have to do it themselves. The prominent accountant informed them, however, that he felt he knew his business and was certain the definition could not be arbitrarily written in less space than that which he had used. To date, the brain trusters have not produced a definition on the subject in line with their specifications.

Here is an old complaint in reverse: The U. S. Department of Labor complains that men are "encroaching" on jobs held by women. In a report to Congress, the Department says government "should take emergency steps' to stop men from invading the fields of employment traditionally feminine.

If a farmer hitched a team of horses to both ends of a wagon and attempted to move the wagon in opposite directions at the same time, he would be laughed at. He might even be committed to an institution for mental observation. At best, he would pull his wagon to pieces.

Nevertheless, there are apparently some in Washington who think the two-directions-at-once theory has possibilities. And to test it, they have put it to practice.

Here are a few "horses of inconsistency" hitched to the Nation's economic wagon, as gleaned from a survey of current Federal functions, policeis and theories:

1. One agency, the Bureau of Re-clamation, is busy spending millions to reclaim waste land and put it to productive use. Another agency, the Agriculture Department, is spending considerably more millions to take land out of production by paying farmers for not planting on the land.

2. One agency, the Agriculture Department again, is trying to boost prices by an enforced scarcity. Meanwhile, other government agencies (TVA for example) are trying to force prices lower by putting government in competition with private enterprise and thus create the extreme opposite of scarcity—abundance.

3. Any number of government agencies are endeavoring to put more money into circulation (by pump priming spending) to boost the national income to 90 billion dollars annually. At the same time the Social Security Board is attempting to drain, by taxation, 49 billion dollars from the nation's purse for a reserve fund for use in 1980.

There are other "horses" hitched to the economic vehicle and pulling against each other, but these just mentioned are the ones putting the greatest strain on the wagon.

TRAP SHOOTER DIES; EXECUTIVE OF CHAINS

New York, March 28.—Charles T. Green, 58 years old, British-born chain store pioneer and executive and nationally known trap shooter, died at his home tonight. By reputation one of the highest salaried men in America, Green resigned as president of the McCrory Stores Corporation several months ago due to illness. Previously he had been a vice president of S. H. Kress & Company.

Glasses Can Be Flattering

EVERY fifth person in the United States wears glasses. There being over 60,000,000 women in the country, it stands that 12,000,000 of them wear glasses—and without exception all think they have two strikes on them from the start. Ruth Murrin, head of the Good House-keeping Beauty Clinic, doesn't agree. After studying scores of cases, she finds that frequently glasses are actually flattering, and in the April issue of the magazine tells why. To help overcome that feeling of looking "glassy," Miss Murrin lists a few simple Do's and Don't's.

DO'S

Do give your skin superlative care. It takes a good complexion to live up to the shiny trimness of glasses.

Do arrange your hair softly around your face, avoiding both severity and fussiness.

Do strive for smartness in your coiffure. An up-to-date hair-do counteracts any tendency to appear old-maidish. Be sure to get an upward sweep at your temples.

Do remember that glasses make a strong horizontal effect, flattering to a long face, not flattering to a broad face. In the latter case, correct the widening effect by building your hair up on top, keeping it close at the sides, arching your eyebrows slightly, tilting your hatbrim to one side.

Do take infinite pains with your make-up, cleaning your face and renewing your beautifiers several times a day.

Do blend your rouge off imperceptibly under your glasses, avoiding any hard line, and not outlining the lower rim of the lenses.

Do make your eyes important with eye shadow and mascara, and make up your mouth beautifully.

DON'T'S

Don't skin your hair back in phain-Jane fashion.

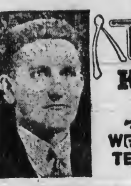
Don't permit it to become oily, stringy, and flat. Glasses emphasize untidy hair, and vice versa.

Don't wear low bangs, or dips over your forehead, or push your hair forward on your temples in the effort to cover your glasses. This only concentrates attention on them.

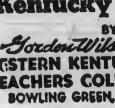
Don't let your eyebrows become bushy or weedy-looking.



Don't be afraid to make up your eyes.

Don't go without cheek rouge unless your skin is beautifully tinted by nature.

Don't wear tiny hats or off-the-face hats unless they have a soft rolled rim.



Don't wear broad hats with horizontal lines unless your face is unusually long.

Don't wear metal hat ornaments, fancy earrings, and glittering necklaces. They make you look overdecorated, and nobody sees the nice you in back of the glitter.

PLAYING-LIKE

There are so many ways for children to amuse themselves that I wonder whether they enjoy playing-like as much as we used to. Toys were rather few, travel was limited, and so we had to work out ways to kill time. Playhouses were in a way a sort of institution. The outdoor kind was largely a matter of moss, gathered in the woods and laid out in the form of beds and tables and chairs under some tree. Some of our moss seemed never to have known that it was snatched from its original home and so went right on growing. A carefull search in the remaining woods near where our old schoolhouse stood might reveal some moss that owes its present location to childish hands of a half century ago.

Indoor playhouses could be constructed anywhere from anything. Attics, where there were such, were just about the best places to play house. But the shedroom of the smokehouse, the buggy shed, or any of the other farm buildings would do. The dim light from an attic window cast a romantic glow over the imaginary realms that we were constructing with our dreams. What matter if we were surrounded by chests of cast-off clothing and by brokendown furniture; a little imagination could transform these into royal attire and a throne itself.

Going to See is the official game to play when one has a playhouse. Since children are highly imitative, the persons who went calling with their dolls were strikingly like the grown-up of the neighborhood. Just for all infractions of parental rules, in real and in play life. The things that were eaten in play-like going-to-see were reflections of the neighborhood ways of thinking, of course. I am doubtful whether any genuine food ever tasted better than some of the imaginary concoctions that were served to us by our hosts and hostesses.

In order to make going seem more real, it was necessary to dress up in some cast-off clothing that every farmhouse once had. A little girl with a long dress can act the part of mother to a family of dolls much better than the same little fellow in a pinafore. Sometimes smaller children were drafted to played the part of youngsters and played their parts well until they grew tired of an older sister's superior airs.

Somehow most of life seems a sort of game. Lots of the grown people I know keep playing-like. They know that we understand their lack of prominence in the world, but they still insist that they are this and that, as in the old attic days. Often at a large dinner I have had the good fortune to sit by or near some one who insisted on telling me how he had done great things, though I was hardly convinced. Nearly every day I catch some of the mannerisms of children at play, when people who have left childhood long ago are still "strutting their stuff" as they did with Dad's overcoat and Grandpa's cane in the playhouses.

Whipping was the official punishment for all infractions of parental rules, in real and in play life. The things that were eaten in play-like going-to-see were reflections of the neighborhood ways of thinking, of course. I am doubtful whether any genuine food ever tasted better than some of the imaginary concoctions that were served to us by our hosts and hostesses.

Sometimes smaller children were drafted to played the part of youngsters and played their parts well until they grew tired of an older sister's superior airs.

Somehow most of life seems a sort of game. Lots of the grown people I know keep playing-like. They know that we understand their lack of prominence in the world, but they still insist that they are this and that, as in the old attic days. Often at a large dinner I have had the good fortune to sit by or near some one who insisted on telling me how he had done great things, though I was hardly convinced. Nearly every day I catch some of the mannerisms of children at play, when people who have left childhood long ago are still "strutting their stuff" as they did with Dad's overcoat and Grandpa's cane in the playhouses.

NEW SHOE MODES GIVE FOOT "FEAGILE" LOOK

Shoes are so important this spring one can, upon occasion, build a whole ensemble around a pair of shoes.

They are gay, they are colorful they are frivolous and they are designed to give the foot that fragile feminine look which strikes the keynote of the new fashions.

One new type of shoe for dressier wear is that of very soft leather with a cut-out design simulating lace. These shoes give one's feet a dressed up, charmingly feminine appearance wholly in keeping with the new styles. Another type is the quilted shoe, also of soft leather quilted in flower designs on the toe.

Patent leather shoes with bright red heels will touch off a black ensemble to perfection, especially if the red accent is picked up and repeated in accessories. For instance, try a pair of these shoes with a black crepe dress, wear bright red nail polish, gloves and blutonniere in red.

The designers also have been experimenting with new lines in heels to change the silhouettes of spring feet. Among the newest is the keg heel, which suggests a cone in shape and by lessening the opening under the arch makes the foot appear sizes smaller.

Still another new departure is the shoe of black patent leather or gabardine stitched in white. The new spring shoes are almost universally open at the toe and the mafor heels. The sandal with very broad instep strap is a becoming and youthful style.

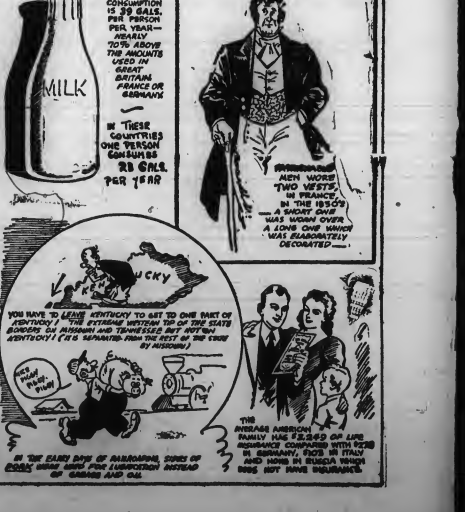
When you go shopping in your own favorite store for your spring wardrobe in shoes, keep an eye out also for a new type of overshoe that simulates a shoe so cleverly it is difficult to identify as a rubber. It fits the foot like a glove and through a process known as texitran is made to simulate suede alligator and even real patent leather. Since spring thaws are inevitable and bulky overshoe will spoil any smart spring ensemble, this new type of shoe glove is an important development in footwear fashions.

CASUALTIES OF SPANISH AND OTHER REVOLUTIONARY WARS

The casualties of the Spanish war were estimated at approximately 1,200,000.

The American Civil War, which lasted four years cost 490,813 lives.

The Union Army of 2,128,948 lost 359,028 officers and men, nearly two-thirds of whom died of disease.



The Confederates lost 133,786 nearly half by disease.

At least as many more probably were wounded, making total casualties of the American Civil War well over a million.

Casualties of the Russian Revolution, if civilian deaths by assassination, disease and famine were counted, would run into millions.

A COLUMN FROM THE PAST

Seventeen Years Ago In Our Neighboring Communities .... From The Walton Advertiser

Last week the remains of Orgie Jones were brought here from Houston, Texas, where he was killed March 17 by falling from a scaffold while working at this trade as a painter. He was a former resident of Walton, leaving here years ago. He was married and his wife resides in Ludlow, Ky. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Elds, of Bracht Station, Kenton County. He was a brother of Melvin Jones, of Walton, Route 2. Funeral services were preached by Rev. R. F. DeMoisey.

Monday morning, Ben Stanafer and W. J. Dudgeon purchased the stock of goods and building of J. B. Powers for $20,000, possession to be given May 1.

FAMOUS WOMEN TALK ABOUT SILVER

(From April Good Housekeeping Magazine)

Mrs. Borge Rohde (the former Ruth Bryan Owen, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Denmark) has had thirty years of enjoyment from the flatwear you see pictured here. Bought before her marriage, this simple pattern has never failed to give Mrs. Rohde that little glow of pride that we all associate with our fine possessions. "One does not tire of simple things," says Mrs. Rohde in speaking of her pleasure in her silver.

Her silver flatwear has seen lots of important duty—in such varied places as Jamaica in the West Indies, London, Cairo, and Washington, through to diplomatic duty in the American Legation in Copenhagen, where Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde did her official entertaining.

MRS. BORGE ROHDE

She has a service for eighteen, although in some pieces that are necessary for state dinners she has as many as five or six dozen of a kind. Mrs. Rohde does not remember the name of her pattern, and considers it irrelevant to its beauty.

Dorothy Kilgallen, star reporter who is famous for racing by air round the world against two masculine competitors and for her syndicated column "The Voice of Broadway," has an interesting point of view about her silver.

"I see so much of the tinsel and make-believe of Broadway that I probably appreciate more than most people the beauty of sterling silver."

Miss Kilgallen is acquiring her silver by the place-setting method periodically buying all the pieces for setting one cover. Different kinds of pieces can be grouped to make a place setting, but Miss Kilgallen has chosen to include a dinner knife, dinner fork, salad fork, butter spreader, oval soup spoon, and teaspoon in her place settings.

DOROTHY KILGALLEN

When asked why she chose the pattern called "Greenbriar," she said: "I was choosing the silver for a future household and not an existing one. So I chose a pattern that would look well in almost any type of decorative scheme."

WHAT we men are doing here is called "maintenance of way."

You'll have to think twice to name any other kind of transportation that does that job for itself.

They tell me that more than thirty cents out of every dollar the railroads take in goes for maintenance, interest, taxes and other costs due to the fact that the railroads do build and maintain their own roadways—and that more than half of the total railroad investment is in roadway.

If other kinds of transportation that use "ways" built and maintained by the public had to pay the full cost of building and maintaining the "ways" they use, they couldn't even come close to furnishing their service for what the railroads charge.

That goes for the so-called "cheap transportation" by inland waterways. Almost without exception, the subsidy paid by taxpayers for each ton of freight moved on these rivers is as much as, and in most cases more than, the total cost of moving the same freight by rail.

The biggest part of the taxes paid by highway carriers goes to building and maintaining the roads they use—and they tell me that studies by a number of state highway departments show that these taxes do not cover the highway carriers' real share of road costs. Railroads pay more taxes per dollar of revenue than highway carriers do. And the big point is that railroad taxes are not used for building or maintaining their roadway—they go to meet general expenses of government.

That's why I say, "It takes real railroading these days." And the railroads are doing a real job.

When the railroads haul a ton a mile at an average revenue of one cent and pay all their own costs, they're doing a job that can't be beat by any other transportation system in the world, bar none.

And when they do a job like that—it seems to me that about all they need is a square deal in transportation.

FUNERAL SERVICE

VERONA, KY.

CHEVROLET IS THE WORLDS "LAND YACHT".

Utility, comfort and compactness reach a new "high" in the trailer-office which Myron Zobel, eastern advertising executive, recently put into commission as a means of maintaining personal contacts thru-out his territory.

The new trailer, known as the Graduate Group Continental Clipper, is powered by a Chevrolet cab-over-engine truck. The outfit is of maximum afety and comfort. Inhined in its streamlined body are an office, a traveling home, a short-wave amateur radio station, and four private power plants operating the radio transmitter and receiver, air-conditioning equipment, and house and running lights.

An all-steel insulated body affords maximum safety andcomfort. Interior arrangements have been designed ingeniously to afford sleeping space for six within the trailer, as well as an apartment-size kitchenette, tile bath, radio transmitter for amateur broadcasting, radio receiver and phonograph,typewriter, dictaphone, filing space, dining space, and ample lounging room for about 10 persons. Six months were required for its construction.

Much of the owner's traveling will be done at night. Two former bus drivers will handle the wheel, alternating their rest periods in a comfortable sleeping compartment built into the spacious Chevrolet cab-over engine motor unit. A steward also travels with the trailer, sleeping on a specially constructed bed in the galley.

The trailer i scompletely air con-ditioned, and also steam heated by a "split system" tyo of heating. Indirect lighting adds another modern note to the homelike interior. Satinwood and aspen were used in decorating the interior.

A 110- volt DC generator produces 1,500 watts of power to run the 3-4 horsepower air conditioning unit. In addition, 1.750 volts are produced by a special generator for the radio transmitting outfit. Eighteen storage batteries, set into a compartment at the rear of the trailer, supply six volts of current for lights. The trailer is completely self-sustaining, except for water and gasoline. Storage tanks carry 72 gallons of water and gasoline.

The trailer was especially designed to allow the fore part to ride directly over the cab-over-engine rear axle. When traveling, occupants of the trailer can mount to a forward deck and enjoy the scenery by looking out over the truck cab. A duplicate of the tractor unit's instrument panel is set into the front of the trailer above the observation deck. There is a private phone between trailer and cab.

The observation seat is reversible, so that the rider may face forward or backward. In addition, it folds out into a full-sized bed at night.

A specially constructed cable composed of 48 strands is required for the various circuits between the trailer and cab.

The trailer was built by Schult Trailers, Inc., of Elkhart, Indiana. Total cost, including radio transmitting set, which is to be used strictly non-commercially, is in excess of $20,000.

The radio broadcasting outfit, according to the builders, is of 1,000-watt power, which is said to be 900 watts stronger than any previous mobile amateur unit.

A humorous sidelight on this elaborate "land yacht" is that it carries its own "motor tender." Strapped inside the cab is a little motor scooter, which can carry two persons, a diminutive power unit beside the huge trailer. The scooter is used for errands when the trailer is parked.

They were both members of the New Bethel Baptist church. Rev. C E Brown preached the funeral, assisted by Bros. R. F. DeMoisey and A. K. Johnson.

They were both born a few miles from Verona and spent almost their entire life near here. They lived in the State of Kansas for a while Uncle Jack and Aunt Ida had been united in marriage over sixty-one years and he departed this life at the age of 82 and she at 79 in a few hours of each other.

By their passing the community have lost two good true friends, neighbors and citizens.

J. L. Hamlton had charge of the funeral.

Speed Under 40 Miles An Hour Cuts Fatalities in Half

TERRIFYING though it may sound, there is no escaping the fact that every automobile is a potential killer, once its wheels begin to roll. And the faster the wheels turn, so does the grin on Death's face grow wider—for Death lurks everywhere along the highway, flapping his black shroud as he speeds along.

There is one definitely established fact in the relationship between speed and safety, writes J. C. Furnas in his article "Speed Limit" in the April Good Housekeeping, and that is that accidents resulting in death occur less than half as often in cars traveling under 40 miles an hour as in cars whose speed is between 40 and 50. And speed over 50 miles an hour means that death will strike in one accident out of every eleven.

Being a woman, Mr. Furnas says, you may be exempt from some of the speed impulses that come over men. Figures do show that the average speed of women drivers is several miles slower than that of men; but modern cars bring what they are, slick and insidious in pickup, the woman driver is often equally guilty of the most cardinal of all speed sins—speeding in excess of driving conditions. That is, driving too fast for your own skill under adverse conditions, such as a skiddy road, night driving, poor visibility around curves, an old car, etc.

Speed zoning is an excellent precaution, says the author. With maps, charts, photographs and mileage records before them, traffic engineers survey the whole main highway system of a state, mark off all dangerous stretches, and, figure out the top safe speeds for each. That speed is then marked on roadside signs.

Pennsylvania not long ago enforced a 50-mile limit all over the state. Since that limit went into effect, motoring deaths have decreased 40 percent. The answer may lie partly in the fact that violators are deprived of their licenses for three months; if so, fear of incurring the penalty is just what the doctor ordered.

More people believe that the faster they drive their car the more mileage they get per gallon. On the contrary, the writer points out, a light modern car in good shape gets about 20 miles to the gallon at 30 miles an hour. The same car, at 60 miles an hour, gets less than 16 to the gallon. Oil-consumption figures are even of greater disproportion. A car uses almost seven times as much oil at 55 miles an hour than at 30.

So, Mr. Furnas concludes, if the risk of death doesn't worry the careless, reckless driver, thrift ought to make him listen that speeds over 50 are an expensive waste—and make, to book, for mechanical inefficiency, for every time he increases his speed he shoots up depreciation costs.

Peace—With What?

PEACE is defined as "a state of quiet or tranquillity; freedom from disturbance or agitation; calm; repose."

Generally speaking, humanity knows not where to find true tranquillity, nor with what to make a compact in order to be free from disturbance. It perplexedly views the spectacle of men and nations that have little or no peace even after making great sacrifices to obtain it. Many gaze uncomprehendingly upon the settled peace of the reformer who has perhaps provoked storms of hate and opposition, but who nevertheless is himself serene, because he is in agreement with Truth and good.

With what then shall we seek to be in agreement? Here is indeed the vital question, for our choice will result either in gaining spiritual peace or in experiencing the lack of it. In seeking a basis for peace, should we not turn to the Bible, the acknowledged storehouse of true wisdom? If we accept its inspired teachings, which reveal God, good, as the basis for all action, agreement, and being, shall we not find our peace in reflecting Him? . . .

Attempts to make peace with human personalities as such, or with shifting material conditions and temporal pressures, bring only confusion. Since Truth, Life, and Love alone are enduring, there can be intelligent expectancy of peace only through conscious agreement with divine Principle. The would-be peace which springs from human temporizing, is as temporary and unsatisfying as is its illusive foundation. Enduring peace is built upon an enduring basis.

The decisions of world politics cannot prevent the individual from experiencing peace thfough his adherence to Truth. Nothing can stop one from loving and being loved, from being grateful to God for His goodness, and from helping others to be happy by his expression of God's goodness. Mary Baker Eddy says in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, (p. 264) "Spiritual living and blessedness are the only evidences, by which we can recognize true existence and feel the unspeakable peace which comes from an all-absorbing spiritual love."

Neither in matter, nor in false material sense, nor in human policy, is peace to be found. That which denies the power and presence of God can never contribute to one's conscious at-one-ment with spiritual good. The material and temporal, which are opposed to spiritual harmony, do not constitute reality. Spiritual sense discerns the allness of God, the nothingness of matter, and the powerlessness of physical sense to interfere with divine facts. When one is at peace with God, whatever seems to oppose one's manifestation of good is neutralized by the fact that good is true, and that its suppositious opposite is untrue.

Christ Jesus expressed more Godlikeness than any other who has ever walked the earth, and he therefore was more conscious of peace than any other. He knew that spiritual peace was one of the greatest blessings he could leave to men, for he said, before parting from his beloved disciples (John 14:27): "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." He spoke more than once of peace as being the result of following in his footsteps. Hate and misunderstanding might beset the path of his faithful followers, but their peace, founded upon the rock, Christ, would remain undisturbed. Such peace is bigger than circumstances, and circumstances do not change it.

All who acknowledge Christ Jesus as Master and Way-shower can find their peace where he found his, namely, in the daily demonstration of Truth and Love. As Paul declared (I Corinthians 3:11), "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."—The Christian Science Monitor.

A REAL GOLD BRICK IS POLICE PUZZLE

Loot Is Found Melted Into Precious Ingot.

FLORENCE.—An ingot of pure gold has baffled Italian police and hampered the liquidation of two cases of robbery perpetrated here last summer.

Several months ago a band of thieves broke into Villa Marmagliano, mansion of Mrs. Beulah Branch, widow of a Chicago banker, for many years a resident of Florence. They carried off money, silverware and jewels with a total value of more than $100,000.

A short time later another theft, the traces of which had strange resemblance to the one at Villa Marmagliano, occurred in the palace of Goffredo Visconti, an eccentric 80-year-old multimillionaire of Florence.

Following Giannini's confession police captured Otello Balzani, leader of a band of half a dozen thieves, including his 26-year-old mistress, Valeria Uccifiti. Police have rounded up the entire band, which now is awaiting trial in the Murate jail of Florence.

Cini confessed that part of the gold bracelets and earrings stolen from Villa Marmagliano had been melted together with rings and other jewels stolen from Visconti's home.

Mrs. Branch's jewels were recovered in part in Giannini's shop, but a diamond ring worth $10,000 and a pearl necklace of greater value have not been found.

Police have not reached any decision regarding the gold ingot, which perhaps will be equally divided between the American widow and the aged Visconti.

QUICK RECIPE FROM THE PANTRY SHELF

How often have guests dropped in on Sunday noons and you wished you could invite them to remain for an informal "bite"? But the neighborhood grocery store was closed and there just was not the making of a meal in the house.

A clever way to avoid such a contingency is to keep on one of your pantry shelves the making of a dish that can be put together in a hurry and yet maintain your reputation as a cook as well as a hostess.

For such an occasion stock up with a couple of boxes of macaroni, one or two cans of No. 2 tomatoes and two six-ounce jars of shrimps. Onions being a staple are always on hand and the only other ingredients are sugar, salt and pepper also staples.

Then, if you want to put together a quick and filling dish you are well prepared. To serve four, take one box of macaroni, and cook in boiling water until tender. Open a jar of shrimps and remove the black veins. Open a can of tomatoes and mix with the shrimps and macaroni. Chop up fine a medium sized onion and add to the mixture. Season with a teaspoon of sugar (to counteract the acid of the tomatoes), salt and pepper. Pour in a casserole and bake in a moderately hot oven for 40 minutes.

Flower Topknots

A frivolous but utterly fetching addenda to your new spring ensemble for dress up wear would be one of the little toplnots of flowers shrouded in yards of veiling while masquerade under the name of hat. They may be had in a variety of flower interpretations but are particularly charming when made of jonquils, narcissus, iris or roses.

Gaiety In Gloves

Bright hued gloves will be an almost ubiquitous part of smart ensembles this spring. The gloves are being shown in both suedes and leathers, among the newest being those of pigskin in the season's high style colors, which are cyclamen, fuchsia, aqua blue and hyacinth.

Seashell Boutonnieres

These wee little shells that sprinkle Miami sands are being used by the novelty jewelry makers to fashion boutonnieres for spring suits. Strung on wires and painted in the brighter colors, the shells are fashioned to resemble bunches of tiny flowers.

Monogram Pins

Keep an eye out in your favorite store for the new monogram pins, to be had both in silver and gilt finish. The pins are so reasonably priced that you will be able to afford both gold and silver finish ones and they are decorative and vastly useful.

MUSCLE HARMONY IS IMPORTANT TO GRACE

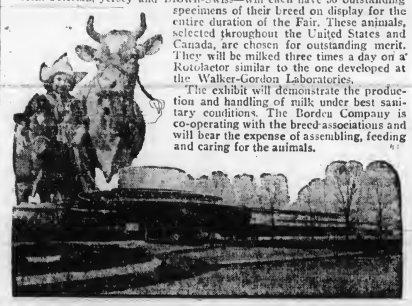
Beauty experts may differ as to make-up and shades of powder and lipstick, but they are all in agreement on one point, and that is bodily grace and really well proportioned figure cannonly be achieved with exercise.

Diet, of course, has its place in the picture they say, and massage is excellent for those lump protuberances that frequently are so inflexible to reducing treatments, but neither diet nor massage can take the place of exercise.

A set of exercises much in vogue with Hollywood stars is that which is done with a strong rubber band. Use of the band makes it possible to bring into play each set of muscles and thus exercises of this type have the value of normalizing the figure. It is simple to fasten the band to a door—only be careful that it is securely fastened so that it cannot give way and cause a fall or snap back and cause a bruise. It is also possible to have the band attached to a small piece of metal or wood that has been clamped to the wall.

One simple exercise is to pull back on the band while holding the shoulders erect. This slenderizes the shoulders and back. Another movement is to step on the band and pull vigorously. This reduces the hips and develops the bust. In this one the head and chest are held high and there is the combined strain on all the muscles, followed by quick relaxing, which is ideal for perfect poise and equilibrium.

The safest and most successful way to get a set of exercises designed for your own particular needs is to go to your own beauty parlor or gymnasium and discuss your figure problems with them. Then ask them for a set of home exercises to accompany regular visits to the gymnasium, which undoubtedly will prove advisable.



First Aid For Carvers

Even the most unsophisticated carver may attack the roast or duck with confidence if armed with one of the new pronged holders which is guaranteed to stop skidding. The new gadgets are of nickel-plated brass with two efficient prongs about two and a half inches apart. They are moderately priced and undoubtedly will be hailed with thanksgiving by the man of the house.

Pure-Bred Cows Going to World's Fair

This photograph shows the partly completed building which will house the "Dairy World of Tomorrow" at the New York World's Fair in 1939. In it the five pure-bred associations—Ayrshire, Guernsey, Holstein-Friesian, Jersey and Brown-Swiss—will each have 30 outstanding specimens of their breed on display for the entire duration of the Fair. These animals, selected throughout the United States and Canada, are chosen for outstanding merit. They will be milked three times a day on a Rotolactor similar to the one developed at the Walker-Gordon Laboratories.

The exhibit will demonstrate the production and handling of milk under best sanitary conditions. The Borden Company is co-operating with the breed associations and will bear the expense of assembling, feeding and caring for the animals.

Dairy Cattle Royalty to Grace World's Fair

This young lady and her pure-bred companion were photographed while attending ground-breaking ceremonies for the "Dairy World of Tomorrow" on the World's Fair grounds at New York.

The "Dairy World of Tomorrow" is to be one of the striking exhibits at the 1939 Fair. Here 150 dairy cows, each a queen on the basis of her type and performance, will be on exhibit. These cows will be selected by the Breed Association representing the following breeds, Jerseys, Guernseys, Holstein - Friesians, Brown - Swiss, and Ayrshires. These cows will be milked three times daily on a rotolactor equipped with magnetic milkers—giving the public a chance to observe the most modern methods in handling milk. In addition to the cows mentioned, calves and a bull of each breed will be on display.

The "Dairy Worki of Tomorrow" is being staged by the five breed associations mentioned above in cooperation with The Borden Company for the purpose of showing the place of the pure-bred cow in the economics of dairying.

Aluminum Blinds

A new type of venetian blind now on the market is made of aluminum and consequently is easily cleaned, impervious to discoloration from rain and needs no periodic refurbishing. Other virtues of the new blinds are that in winter they reflect the heat of the room inwards and in summer the sun's heat is reflected outward.

Polish For Antiques

A polish which decorators and makers of fine furniture have used for years to protect the patina of old woods is now available in the general market and should be in the mop closet of every owner of antique furniture. The polish also may be used for leather, bronze and other metals and is no more expensive than other good polishes.

4-H CORN CHAMPION GRAYSON BOY STATE

Hasting Suepr Prolific corn was planted on goood soil that had been treated with limeston, superphosphate and manure, and then 100 pounds of fertilizer was placed in the corn rows. The stalks greww 12 to 18 feet high, with two to seven ears per stalk.

Dry weather and storms damaged the crop; otherwise Brownie believes he would have produced 125 bushels on an acre. In 1937 Brawnie produced 101 bushels on an acre, and was second in the state 4-H club corn growing contest.

Second place in the 1938 contest went to 13 year old James O. Davis of Bell county. His acre of Tennessee Red Cob yielded 79 bushels.

CHILD'S APPETITE MAY NEED TEMPTING

Children are great imitators. Like adults, they sometimes get fatigued, want attention or get just plain bored with routing of living. Then they may refuse to eat. Mrs. Mary Van Cleve, in charge fo the University of Kentucky nursery school makes the following suggestions:

Let the child rest 15 to 20 minutes before mealtime.

Don't coax the child to eat; it makes him worse. For your own sake, as well as his pay as little attention to his not eating as possible—he will recover more quickly.

Children are astute observers; so try, as parents, not to have food dislikes. However, the 'yum yum spimach" school doesn't fool onyone. Most parents aren't good actors.

A good general rule is to have part of everything composing the meal eaten before dessert is served. Have a simple dessert that is an integral part of the whole meal.

On an ocean liner, a person recovering from seasickness has his appetite tempted before he is fed. The sam eplan often works with children. Serve, not huge quantities of food, but rather sandwiches made from thinly cut bread, with just a hint of parsley or lettuce; small bowls of vegetable soup or stew or the non-greasy variety; and small bowls of vegetable soup or stew of the non-greasy variety and small servings of daintily prepared vegetables.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Seventy two McCracken county farmers are much interested in stawberry growing and have token part in meetings in several communities. Paul Farlow ofthe Illinois Central Railroad has cooperated in the project.

More than 600 lambs will be ready for sale in the late spring in Greenup county, where 27 sheep raisers have 95 percent of the stock. A relatively new industry for Greenup, it as already proved profitable.

Waine county farmers interested in better hog production have sponsored the importation of purebred gilts and boars into widely-separated parts of the county. Last month, 26 were brough in.

Boyle county's record: five carloads of phosphate spread (one carload used last year); 10,000 tons of limestone ordered double last year's total use), and at least 25 erosion control demonstrations set up with a possibility of more later.

More than 250 members of the Harrison county rural electrification project attended a meeting celebrating the energizing of 60 miles of line. Approximately 180 farm families will be served by this line. Much new equipment such as washing machines, irons, lamps, etc., have been purchased.

Goals of Breathitt county farmers include reducing acreage put to corn by getting a larger yield thru use of lime and phosphate; more attention to feed the family from the farm program; better fencing of pasture, and higher grade poultry.

For Shaved Ice

An ice cube crusher may now be had attached to a tub, which serves as an ice container. The crusher holds three trays of ice cubes and has a removable hopper. A budget item, the crusher is one of three gadgets which will make itself an indispensable pantry item shortly after acquisition.

Writer Finds Daily Newspapers Greatest Source of Inspiration

THE daily newspaper is the greatest source of inspiration for Rita Weiman, popular short story writer. At least ninety percent of the stories she has written drew their first breath somewhere on a newspaper page. This is the method she employs to bring her stories to life: a certain item in a paper strikes a chord in her imagination; she clips it, pastes it on a sheet of paper, and immediately sets down her "fiction-eer's" reactions. If the reactions are all-powerful she begins drafting a story on the spot; if not, she files the item away for possible future material.

Rather than the headline itself, Miss Weiman is primarily interested in the human motives back of the news. That is, what prompted certain characters to act the way they did; what was the psychology behind all their actions and movements. This, for Miss Weiman, is her story, what she calls "the unwritten story behind the news." In final form, her story may be totally unlike the original item that struck the first spark, for, as she says, some of the actual happenings of the day would be labeled "fantastic" if they were reproduced fictionally. A good example of this would be the Musica story. "Impossible," "too fabulous," "not a grain of possible authenticity," "too unreal to have any bearing on humanity," might well have been some of the complaints thrown at a fiction writer's head had the story ever been written in the past.

RITA WEIMAN

Characters are real only when they create their own situations, Miss Weiman says. They are perfectly clear to her when she sits down to write, but she lets them run their own course, rather than force them to things against their own will, figuratively speaking.

Miss Weiman, who has contributed to such magazines as Good Housekeeping, Cosmopolitan, Collier's, the Saturday Evening Post, and the late Pictorial Review, writes her stories in longhand. There is something about the typewriter that frightens her. She usually writes a story only twice, the original version (which she corrects as she goes along) and the final one. A story of 5,000 words takes her about three weeks; one of 15,000 words about six weeks.

Miss Weiman is married and lives in the country in a house "so conducive to work." Six hours a day she puts in at her work, three in the morning and three in the afternoon. She loves writing, one reason being it's essential for her disposition. As her husband puts it, "she's impossible to live with when not working."

As for advice to the young writer, Miss Weiman says get all the learning you can about the arts—not for the information or factual knowledge itself, but for the love of rhythm and symmetry one acquires, so essential when putting words down on paper. As for further advice, well—read the newspapers and try hiding away in the country, if you're from the city, or vice versa: a fireplace and green fields for the city-folk and the roar of a subway and bustling Times Square for those from out yonder.

HOLDS DOWN EMBASSY

London, March 28.—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy today said messages from his son, Joseph, Jr., in Madrid, indicated he was safe in the 8 pantish capital, which was surrendered to the nationalists. Young Kennedy has been "holding down the old embassy building in Madrid with the aid of a caretaker," his father said.

With The Reds--

Whatever enthusiasm exists about the Incinnati Reds is due principally to their battery strength and crew of long distance sockers who helped the Reds avarage more runs per game thany any other national League team last season.

However, an overlooked factor in the development of the Redleg machine is that they are a stream-lined outfit with one ofthe fastest line-ups in either major league. At six of their positions they can show players who are among the speed merchants of the league, and when Johnny Vander Meer is in the pitching box they can exhibit a seventh speedster. Vander Meer is one of the best runners on the squad

Attention was called to the presence of sped on the Reds when Bill Werber, one of the best baserunners in the business, was purchased from the Philadelphia Athletics for third base duty. Suddenly close followers of the club became speed conscious, particularly when they were made to realize that Werber three times led the American League in stolen bases.

And so, each position was analyzed with the result that the proof of a streamlined team was brought forth. It isn't that the Reds go in for baseballing on a big scale. This isn't the case because the presence of long distances sockers discounts the value of this sort of offensive, particularly with young, inexperienced men. Speed can be utilized in other ways, for instance, the covering of greater defensive territory and the gaining of an extra base of hits to safe ground, etc.

Baseball is built on a foundation of speed. Everything evolves around it. This applies to both offensive and defenive sides. This coveres one of the reasons why the Reds have moved up so high in the National League deroy in such a hsort space of time. Two years ago the Reds did not possess the speed they have today. They were slow team They finished last. Today they are outstanding in this respect and they are rated as contenders.

SEVEN AGES OF MAN

MUNICIPAL CURBS ON DOOR TO DOOR SALES DEBATED BY WRITERS

What about the house-to-house salesman? Are his calls a nuisance that should be curbed by city ordinances, such as some cities now enforce? Or are they indispensable contributions to household efficiency and to merchandising in general? Two authorities debate this timely lesson the the current Rotarian Magazine

B. S. Hoover, former mayor of Green River, Wyoming, the town where the ordinance banning the uninvited door-to-door salesman was enacted, speaks from his experience: "The ordinance was adopted at the request of numerous private residents who were exceedingly annoyed by repeated uninvited visitations." These salesmen, he states, are schooled to high-pressure tactics, disregard the amenities, and hold that "meriness' pays. Through unwillingness to be rude Mr. Hoover holds, many people are overborne y these tactics. After the salesman has gone, they find they are in for it; often they have to accapsomething they don't really want and perhaps can't afford.

"Now, there is certainly no urgent social need for salesmanship of this kind," insisted Mr. Hoover. "In the old days of bad roads and farscattered stores, it was often a real convenience to have a traveling trader come to the door once in a while. But today virtually every community is served by modern mercantile establishments . . . We feel it is only right that the business of the community should be handled through the institutions that make our communities possible the people who employ local labor, pay taxes, and help maintain the schools and churches.'

Herbert J. Taylor, president of the Club Aluminum Company, states the case for house-to-house selling. "Consider the contribution that direct selling makes to the progress of civilization by introducing new products," he writes. "The man who first made can openers is said to have tried selling them in stores, but without success. Then he turned to house-to-house solicitation. Soon customers demanded that retail stores keep them in stock . . . Oil burners, vacuum sweepers, electric washing machines and ironers, and refrigerators were introduced o ydoor-to-door salesmen."

He further states that if such laws as the Green River ordinance were universally adopted, they would wipe out the jobs of 250,000 full-time and part-time door to door sellers, about 75 per cent of whom live in the communities in which they sell. "Laws prohibiting all uninvited calles of salesmen as homes," says Mr. Taylor, "interfere with the personal freedom of the housewife to buy either new or established products when and where she chooses."

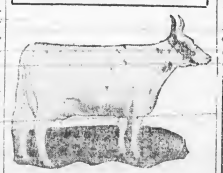
GOING BY CAR? THEN HERE ARE SOME TIPS

Soon several million motorists will be off on automobile tours. But not all will have the good time they expect. Headaces, backaches, and grief await man of them. Yet Paul W. Kearney, in the current Rotarian Magazine, indicates that these annoyances can be cut to a minimum by heeding a few commonsense rules. Here is a condensed list of his do's and don't's for motorists:

1. Eat lightly while on tour. Heavy eating causes drowsiness.
2. Stop now and then for a rest. Play catch or hang by your hands from a tree limb.
3. Take an emergency can of gasoline. One and a half million motorists ran out of gas last year.
4. Avoid excessive fatigue. If you must drive when fagged out, reduce speed and use extra caution.
5. Take along duplicate car keys, but let someone besides the driver carry them.
6. Carry a tire gauge. When driving on a hot day, check tire pressures.
7. Have a block of wood suitable for use under your jack on soft ground.

TRIS SPEAKER SEES SANDLOT BASEBALL AS CRIME CHECK



As sandlot baseball increases in a community its juvenile crime rate decreases Tris Speaker former big-league player, points out in current Rotarian Magazine.

The man regarded by many as baseball's point's out in the mfwypzg baseball's greatest outfielder now gives much of his time to spreading interest in the national pastime by teaching school boys its fundmentals. With Lew Fonseca, former White Sox star, and other players he has conducted baseball schools in Chicago, Boston and other cities and few of the lads ever cut classes.

"Nobody, of course, will ever be able to say just how much those boys learned from us about baseball," comments Speaker." "But this We do know, their interest was simulated to a high degree, and the police told us that Juvenile delinquency decreased as much as 35 percent in some of the neighborhoods where we conduct our schools."

For futher evidence of preventing crime through vacant-lot games, Speaker cites his home city Cleveland, Ohio, where similar schools have been held. He reports that Eliot Ness, the city safety director cure told him that if amateur baseball did not occupy such a large place in the thoughts and actitives of Cleveland boys work of the police department would be tripled.

Queens for the Fair

When the World's Fair opens in New York in the spring of 1939, the dairy industry will be well represented. Five breeds of dairy cattle —Ayrshire, Brown-Swiss, Holstein, Guernsey and Jersey—will each have thirty outstanding cows in the "Dairy World of Tomorrow." These 150 cows will be milked in the Borden Building on the Central Mall, using a rotolector equipped with magnetic milkers to do the job. Calves and bulls representative of each breed will also be on exhibit.

The animals are chosen by a special committee from each Breed Association, and will come from all parts of the United States and Canada as representatives of the best that the breed can produce. The Ayrshire cow shown above is one of the animals chosen.

In this exhibit not only the production of milk will be demonstrated, but the handling, bottling and sale of it will go forward under the eyes of the public. About one-third of the milk produced by the cows of this country is used as fluid milk. The rest is sold as butter, cheese, ice-cream, casein for paint, billiard balls, paper sizing, milk sugar for medicines, and in literally hundreds of others forms. The Borden exhibit will tell much of this story and give a better understanding of the place the dairy cow, as exemplified by these pure-breds, and the milk distributor play in the scheme of things.

Girls Of That 'Uncertain Age' Get Life's Answers Early

ONCE a month the teen-age girls of Bethlehem, Pa., gather in the high-school auditorium "to find out." The doors are locked; not a boy is in sight.

Life grows more pleasant, living more gracious because of these meetings; for here the girls unburden their minds of questions they would not ask even the most sympathetic mother—questions of morals and manners.

The Bethlehem Girls' Council came into being three years ago. A group of enlightened women heard of a plan dealing with the problems of high-school girls and set about putting it into effect. They succeeded so well that the National Council of Women now has adopted the Bethlehem Plan and stand ready to sponsor girls' councils all over the country.

The plan is simply this: to let the girls teach themselves, rather than be lectured to, through their own dramatizations of playlets of morals and manners. There is a question-box into which the girls drop any questions they choose. They do not sign their names. From these questions the monthly plays are chosen. Members of the women's committee prepare a rough script and turn it over to the girls for polishing. Teenage language and atmosphere, of course, are employed.

Helen Welshimer, who was sent to Bethlehem by Good Housekeeping to make a first-hand study of the plan, relates her impressions in an article called "The Questions They Ask" in the April issue. She reports that all of Bethlehem agrees the plan is "the best thing that ever struck this town."

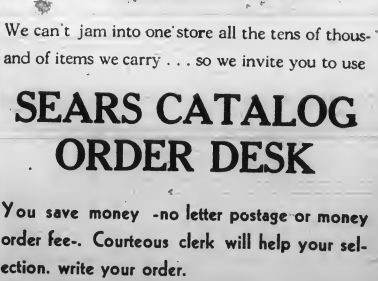
The playlets range in theme anywhere from the problems of smoking, drinking and petting to how to acquire charm, poise and personality. The following are a few of the questions already successfully answered:

How should you handle a boy who tries to get fresh?

Should you leave a boy when he has had too much to drink?

What do you think about going on blind dates?

How do YOU rate at a dance?



Is it right, when you have gone out with a boy a few times, to let him kiss you good-night?

In addition to these dramatizations, there are personal-appearance clinics and pre-marriage and pre-business classes, usually reserved for senior girls. Famous women physicians lecture on hygiene and health; then the girls hand in unsigned, written questions — the frankest sort of questions—which the lecturer answers in equally frank language.

Thanks to the Bethlehem Plan, girls of that "uncertain age" are going to have an easier time of it. They will be able to meet the world with greater assurance, knowing that what they have been taught will help make them better wives, better mothers and better citizens.

The National Council of Women is going to act as a clearing house for communities throughout the country, providing them at cost with detailed outlines of the Bethlehem Plan. The National Council of Women, Inc., may be reached at International Building, Rockefeller Center, New York City

COMPENSATION BENEFITS NOW BEING PAID

Unemployment compensation benefits which are now being paid in this state have no relationship whatever to old age insurance benefits which are also under the Social Security Act.

"Recently, a number of workers are drawing unemployment compensation benefits under our state job insurance law hace called at this office to discuss this matter. Some of these workers thought the unemployment compensation which they get now might reduce the old age insurance annuities or lump sum benefit to which these workers may be entitled later.

"There is no connection between the two types of benefits. Job insurance benefits are paid by the state to workers who become employed and who are covered by this state's unemployment compensation law. Old age insurance benefits, for which workers contribute one per cent of their wages while employed in jobs covered by the Social Security Act, are paid to a worker when he reaches age 65 or to his legal heirs if he dies. There will be no deductions or chances in old age insurance benefits because of any payments made under our state's job insurance law," Mr. Decker concluded.

BROWN TO ANNOUNCE PLATFORM APRIL 6

Following a conference with Tom S. Rhea, Russeville, and other state Democratic polititions, John Y. Brown, Lexington, anti-administration candidate for governor, Tuesday said he would make his formal announcement, April 6.

Mr. Brown is expected to outline his platform along with his announcement at 5:45 p. m. (CST) over a Louisville radio station.

Mr. Brown said he would urge taking maximum advantage of federal funds for old age pensions. This would mean a $30 monthly grant.

A record usm was voted by the Senate for peace time use by the War Department. Acording to the way events are happening in Europe its about time were breaking some kind of record.

Spring time is fishing time as hundreds of fishermen took to the streams in quest of their favorite sport. The warm weather afforded the Isaac Waltons a chance at their sport.

Two hundred 40-acre farms are lost every day in the year through soil erosion.

But, according to Superintendent Darnell of CCC Camp, Walton, that rate of soil loss is going to decline materially if farmers continue their fight against erosion.

Mr. Darnell pointed to April 5 on the calendar. That date is the sixth anniversary of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and that date six years ago, maked the beginning of the nation's first organized drive against soil washing.

We are going down hill in respect to our soil, and most people do not realize the seriousness of the problem.

According to figures released by the superintendent, work done by the camp since its establishment of July 17, 1935, included strip cropping, buffer stripping, fencing, gathering limestone, building diversion ditches, tree planting and mulching.

PATERNALISTIC GOVERNMENT

If, as some of our politicians argue, the steady and rapid extension of government control over individuals and businesses marks the royal road to security and plenty for the people, the totalitarian states should be veritable marvels of prosperity.

The fact is, as everyone who has studied the subject knows, that totalitarianism tends to promote a lower, not a higher standard of living; a lower, not a higher wage for the worker; a smaller, not a larger return for farmer and manufacturer.

In Russia, articles that Americans of all economic levels consider almost absolute necessities—such as woolen clothing, good leather boots, meat and butter for the table, and adequate furniture—are possessed only by the relatively few, the favored ones of totalitarian "aristocracy." In Italy, wages and the standard if living have been consistently lowered by governmental fiat, and even so common a commodity as whole wheat bread is unavailable for the bulk of the workers. In Germany, the government-sponsored spread of "ersatz" foods and materials—that is, substitutes for rubber, eggs, butter, bread made of grains, coffee, etc.—testifies mutely to what is happening to the ordinary citizen's standard of living and chance to progress there.

There isn't any mystery as to why this is so. As Harry Curran Wilbur said: "Goverment is a non-producer, and has no resources save what it takes from producers, distributors and those servicing both processes." Taxes and competition, under paternalistic government, gradually drive the private producer to the wall. The nation's resources are gradually used up and destroyed. The national income drops while taxes rise. And the standard of living goes down.

History, ancient and modern, tells the story. And if you think "it can't happen here" just consider the expansion that has taken place in our own government in recent years, and its competition with private citizens—then think again.

CHEAPER "IRON LUNGS"

Lord Nuffield, the millionaire British motorcar manufacturer, is reported to have set aside a portion of his huge factory at Cowley for the manufacture, of "iron lungs". Profit is no part of his aim. In fact, his announced purpose is to prevent the machines to hospitals without cost. He hopes to make it possible for every hospital in the British Empire to have at least one of these strange but important life saving devices. Only a small percentage of hospitals now have them.

The first use of the iron lung on a human being was made in Boston in 1929. It saved the life of a young college man who was the victim of infantile paralysis. The exact number of lives saved since then by its use is not known, but it must be well above 1,000. The number of lives lost during those ten years because there was no iron lung available where it was needed is estimated to be many times 1,000.

An iron lung is a fairly costly piece of equipment. Prices vary, but it is said that the average price of the 5,000 which are to be made by Lord Nuffield under mass production conditions will probably be about $500. Many hospitals where limited budgets cannot afford to pay the price.

Not many individuals could afford the price either. But there's a way aroun that obstruction. In many cities, civic organizations and service clubs have either bought an iron lung outright and presented it to the local hospital, or have started a community movement for such a purchase.

Now the iron lung at your hospital—if it has one—probably stands idle most of the time. Usually it is just waiting. When fire escapes first came into use, an old school board member said to the principal who demanded one for his building. "We don't need one. We ain't had a fire in the schoolhouse for 25 years." One could dispute the need for an iron lung in about the same way, but no onewould—whenthe need for one visited his neighbor's family—or his own.

VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE

When your wife goes to the grocery store, she turns up her nose at stale bread, tainted fish, mildewed vegetables. So she should, for their's no sense in buying indigestion. But take ten minutes some day to visit your public library, where you and your children get some of you intellectual groceries. Is the merchandise fresh there?

Look over the books on vocations, for example. How many are there, when they were published, what is their condition? You may be startled by their inadequacy an dntiquity. Yet youg people depend upon them for information about your profession and others.

What can be done about it? Scores of Rotary Clubs all the way from Colwyn Bay, Wales, to Torrance, California, have an answer for that. Set up a Rotary vocational bookshelf—as they have done. On a prominent, plainly labelled shelf in the schaal or public library each Club member places an vocation. The young careerseekers do the rest. Librarians—need it be said?—like the idea very much, too.

That season when one's impulse to give reaches it yearly maximum comes on apace. It could take few worth directions, these scores of clubs would say, than toward a vocational bookshelf. Fresh groceries—for the stomach and for the intellect. Young folks need both.

VERHAUL FIRE FIGHTING TOOLS

Man has designed fine weapons with which to fight his ancient enemy, fire. But in too many cases man allows these weapons to deteriorate and become useless.

For example, periodically reports are published of highly destructive fires which take place in buildings equipped with automatic sprinklers. In practically every case, the sprinkler systems would have swiftly extinguished the blaze,and almost no loss would have resulted—but, due to carelessness and inattention, the systems were allowed to become inoperative.

In the case of towns, community equipment such as water supply, fire engines and alarm systems hould always be 100 per cent efficient, and replacements should be made immediately whe required. Cting down on the fire fighting budget is likely to prove the most expensive "economy" move any town can make, and cause loss of life.

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

An old fashioned colored man, Uncle Pete, living in the hills of Clark County, Kentucky, decided he wanted to see a big city. He went to Winchester and bought a round trip ticket to Covington on the old Kentucky Central, whose terminal was Covington. As he wanted to see Cincinnati he walked across the the Suspension Bridge which was one of the wonders of the Queen City at that time. As he crossed the bridge the wind was strong; it blew Uncle Pete's hat into the river. He started to climb on the railings to try to get his hat. A policeman caught him by the coat tail and said: "You fool, your hat is gone, and if you fall off this railing you'll be a goner, too" and persuaded him he had better continue his sight-seeing bareheaded. He walked to Fountain Square and asked all kinds of questions; where water came from and how it got up so high. He decided he wanted to see the Zoo and the animals, asking a policeman what car to take.

He finally got to the Zoo and tramped around seeing the different animals. He walked up to an old ape, who was sitting very quiet with a long face and lower lip hanging down, looking as if he was in deep trouble. Uncle Pete said: "Mister have you lost your hat?" The ape didn't say anything Uncle Pete broke out in an old fashioned Southern darkey laugh, saying: "You can't fool me, you would talk, but you are afraid the white folks would put you to work."

After putting in a full day at the Zoo he boarded a street car, got off at Fountain Square and walked accross the bridge to Covington, hoping he might find his hat floating up to the river bank, or that someone had saved it for him. No hat could be found, and he had to go home bareheaded. While he was waiting for the train to pull out of Covington he saw a man tapping on an instrument. As he was out to learn, he asked the depot man what the instrument man was doing. The depot man said he was talking over the wire to a man in New York. Uncle Pete, believing all he heard and saw, went home a much wiser man.

When he reached home, all his friends gathered around to hear about the wonders of the big city. He told them about the many things he had seen but the most wonderful thing he saw was a man tapping on an instrument which talked to New York. One of his listeners said: "I have believed everything you have said, but I do not believe your dog talking story." Uncle Pete said: "I can prove it to you. If you had a dog reaching from Covington to New York you could pinch his tail in Covington and he would bark in New York. That was what the man done with the talking instrument."

What was true of Uncle Pete's story then is true now of all the world, for the talking dog goes around the world. We have heard it said of dogs barking at the moon. Who knows what future dogs may talk to other worlds? Nothing is impossible with God, so the Good Book says. We believe God gives inspiration for all discoveries and iuventions.

By JAMES PRESTON

Congress may be asked to go home before it is ready. The adjournment drive has already started.

There are many factors involved in the move for earl yadjournment. And the move is being made, not by the Congressmen themselves, but by the Washington strategists. Here is why, as Washington sideline speculators see it:

Congress up date has not been very "cooperative". In fact, it has shown a strong tendency toward revamping some of the reform legislation put into the statute books in the last few years.

The question of hearing public testimony on proposals to amend the National Labor Relations Act is a typical example of the conflict between Congress and the "downtown Washington" strategists. Most of the Congressmen wanted to start hearings weeks ago and then endeavor to correct the labor act. The strategists delayed hearings as long as possible, but finally had to give in to growing public pressure.

The next step, then, was to rush the adjournment drive so amendment of the labor act could not be accomplished at this session.

In this connection, there is an interesting story making the rounds of the Capitol corridors. It is being accepted as the "news behind the news" of the CIO-AFofL peace negotiations.

The story being told is that agreement was reached several weeks ago between the CIO, the Labor Department and someone at the White House that there should be no amendments to the labor act. The problem, then, was to find a way to fore stall the drive for careful diagnosis of the act in Congress.

A "peace conference" was finally decided upon. Announcement was made that the warring labor factions were being brought together for peace-pack. Then word was sent to the Capitol that the prospects of peace would be dimmed if the labor act question was stirred up in Congress. It is, indeed, a sore question with both the labor organizations, with the AFofL wanting amendments and the CIO demanding the act be left alone. True, it would dim the prospects for peace between the two groups, but—

It was a foregone conclusion in Washington at the time the peace conference started that no peace agreement could possibly result.

It's Happened Again: The Secretary of a not-so-important government executive looked up for her desk a few days ago to see a gentleman walking toward the office door of the executive. She called the gentleman to see the said executive, the secretary chirped efficiently:

"Well, you'll just have to wait. He's busy now."

After several minutes of heelcooling the gentleman informed the young lady secretary that he was in a hurry; that his mission was important. But this failed to influence her. After more minutes of waiting, the gentleman departed, but with this reminder to the secretary:

"Just tell your boss that the Attorney General of the United States was in to see him!"

One of the Congressmen has done a painstaking job of research and come up with some figures indicating that the U. S. has probably outdone Europe in the number of "emergencies on denials periods" in the past six years.

Since 1933, the Congressman report sin the Congressional Record, there have been no less than 39 so-called "emergencies" proclaimed officially by Federal officials. To prove his point the Congressman listed the dates and exact quotations of official statements that an "emergency, crisis, disaster, serious situation, or period of increasing urgency" exked.

"This is at the rate of one now emergency every six weeks for six years," declared the Congressman. "Is it any wonder that the people are emotionally exhausted?"

Washington Sidelights: The government has just placed an order for 8,584,704 inches of red tape(literally) to be distributed as next year's red tape quota for each of the 132 Federal bureaus, departments or agencies. That is about a mile of red tape for each unit . . . It is used for binding documents and similar purposes. Congress has decided that Secretary Ickes has on legitimate need for 21 additional press agents in his department, so an appropriation request for money to hire them has been rejected . . . likewise, Congress doesn't believe the Interior Department will be especially handicapped if $1,070,000 isn't appropriate dtobuy reindeer in Alaska. So that appropriation request has been rejected, too.

COMPENSATION

A job for every employable Kentuckian will be the goal of a Statewide drive to be launched early in April, Direcour William H. Fraysure, of the Kentucky State Employment Service, announced recently.

Within a week or ten days from one to five representatives from each of the thirteen field offices of the service will begin a systemadic check of every employer and industry in their respective arens to ascertain the employment needs of each such employer or business.

Director Fraysure said one of the principal points of the campaign would not only include an employment need survey, but would also impress employers of the State that by availing themselves of the opportunities offered by the Kentucky State Employment Service, they would not only save time, but would obtain better and more highly efficient employees due to the wide selective list available.

Representatives of the service will also explain the coordinate work now being done between the Unemployment Compensation Insurance Division and the Employment Service. As all unemployed workmen eligible to receive Unemployment Insurance benefits are automatically required to register with the Employment Service before they can draw payments. Director Fraysure pointed out it could readily be seen the service was able to offer to employers a very wide and diversified group of persons available for employment.

The Employment Service, Director Fraysure said, has also made a careful study of seasonable industries of the State and has compiled a calendar on such industries, which will enable the service to arrange visits of it srepresentatives to such employers just prior to the opening of the season when such businesses reach their peak.

All employees of the employment service have just completed a special course designed to ground them particularly for the campaign work in April. Director Fraysure said the service intended to particularly attempt to place workers in private industry in as large a number as possible.

PARTIES AND SOCIABLES

Dancing has again become so common that it is nearly the most recognized form of social amusement. But a generation ago dancing, harmless old square dancing at that, was very naughty. A few representatives of the world and the flesh and the devil still knew how to trip the light fantastic, and did it, too, in defiance of church and parental authority. Those of us who were afraid of our parents and the wrath to come still had our social field, a bit drab as viewed by our descendants. We had youth, and that was something; we courted and got married, and thus it goes always, regardless of the form of social amusement.

Our old-fashioned parties, after the square dance went out and before the "round" dance came in, had certain definite features that must have been rather common everywhere. Some communities, through outlawing square dances, allowed play-party games: "Susie in the Ring," "Roxie Ann," "Rosy Betsy Lina," "Old an Tucker," "Chase the Buffalo,"" and so on. As I have already spoken of these games, it would be unnecessary repetition to write something more. But the rigid people of some parts of the State looked upon these games as wicked and equal to the square dance.

When we went to parties we had to devise other means of entertainment. Our liveliest game was snap, a game that used to seem very exciting, bt now somewhat resembles drop the handkerchief. A couple stood up in the floor holding hands (that was the good part of the game). A boy would then snap his finger in front of a girl, who forthwith had to chase him around the couple until she caught him. Then he took the place of the boy holding hands and the girl snapped another boy. This continued indefinitely, often with rather disastrous results to the garments of the two holding hands, as the players would swing around roughly and take all sorts of changes to keep from being caught.

Then there were kissing games galore. Just why dancing was so wrong and kissing so right might take a philosopher to discover, I suppose that postoffice was the best-known kissing game; since I have not played it in many years, please do not expect me to remember the rules of the game. There may have been no rules; anyway, somebody got kissed and appeared innocent.

Playing social was a standard game, if one could call it that. The girls were seated at intervals all around the room on chairs or on seats make by laying planks from chair to chair and spreading a folded quilt over them to make the sutting more comfortable. Some boy acted as introducer or passer-on or whatever you could call it. He took a boy around and introduced him to a girl, leaving him to talk to her until someone else was brought around. That was lots of fun until a fellow got stuck with some dull girl whom nobody wanted to talk to. Sometimes the boys agreed to talk to such for a certain length of time, provided they would be relieved by other folkws who would make marvyrs of themselfs in the interest of casing everyone to have a good time. I could add, parenthetically, that there were dull boys, too, but they had the advantage of being able to get away better.

Refreshments at any kind of party were likely to be pickles and cake, especially if the party were during Christmas week. Indigestible, yes, but always suggestive of sociables and parties.

PATIENT TELLS OF HER FEELINGS AS HER MIND RETURNS

Quick Results Are Obtained By Use of Injections Of Metrazol.

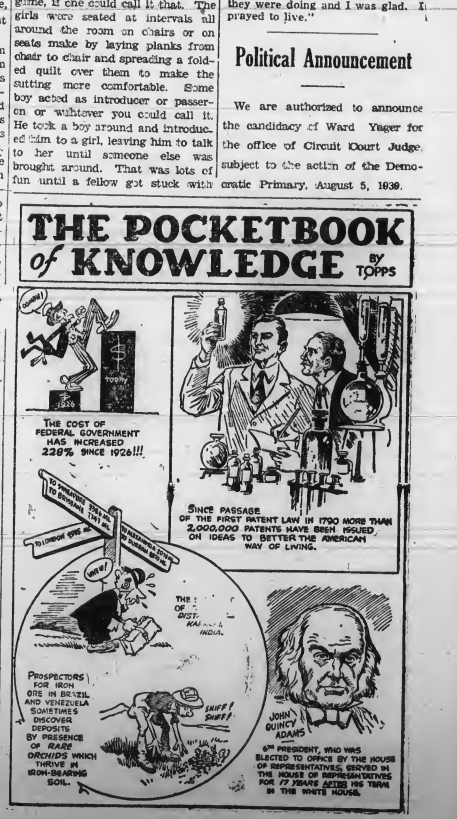
MERIDIAN, MISS. — Shocked from insanity, a woman released from the East Mississippi state hospital here recalls with clarity the delusions she felt in that gray world.

The woman who prefers to remain anonymous, is one of 15 persons believed cured by the "shock treatment." It consists of convulsions and a 55-second coma induced by injections of Metrazol, a comparatively new discovery.

The 11 women and four men thus far released are part of a group of 62 treated. One of them had been insane for 20 years. Others of the group may be released soon. Only two failed to react at all, and only seven responded slightly. No deaths from the treatment have occurred, physicians said.

Looking back, the woman remembers that it was after the third injection of Metrazol that she began to recognize members of her family. Then she said she realized for the first time that she had been insane. She realized her position and saw her companions as they were. She also knew the reality of insanity and the possibility of her being cured.

Feared Poison Food.



This woman remembers refusing to eat anything not wrapped in cellophane for fear of being poisoned. At one time she said she thought if anybody touched her they would die.

Describing the treatment by Metrazol injections, she said:

"The first time I thought they were killing me, that they were planning to put me out of my misery. I hoped I would die. But after the third shot I understood what they were doing and I was glad. I prayed to live."

SOCIETY WRITER SPURNS SOCIETY

"I'VE given the best years of my life to Society," says Inez Gallaway Robb. "Would I, after eleven years of constant association and observation, like to be a full-fledged bonafide member of it. No, no, a thousand times no! If I must Tell All, Society has always seemed a pretty dull dish to me." With this observation, the famous society reporter, sums up her attitude toward the social set in May Cosmopolitan's revealing story, "A Pair of White Gloves."

Society is changing and being changed, Miss Robb goes on to say, by outside and inside influences. State and Federal taxes make the vast fortune heir to multiplied hazards. Yachts, mansions, private cars, racing stables and other monuments to wealth are becoming a drug on the market because few families can pass on the wherewithal to maintain them. The servant problem is increasingly difficult and the day of the great hostess and social leader is at an end. The younger generation prefers a more direct and simple approach to amusement and the decline of inherited wealth is making this approach necessary.

The fabulous success of Elsa Maxwell has grown out of the inability of society to entertain itself, Inez Robb is convinced that the acquisition of wealth is usually accompanied by the loss of two of mankind's most precious boons: imagination and a sense of humor. Miss Maxwell has supplied society with these two things.

"Persons who can lighten for one moment that ennui induced by too much money and too little imagination are worth their weight in gold to a group which long ago gave up all effort to hide its yawns when face to face with itself," Miss Robb says in discussing Elsa Maxwell.

ELSA MAXWELL

Society in 1939 is showing a few encouraging signs, the writer believes. There is no longer such a thing as a social arbiter. The throne is vacant because none of the younger socialites have thought it worth bothering about. Class lines are being broken down to admit exponents of various talents. But society still needs to get more for its money. Miss Robb says in conclusion. "Riches ought to be good for something beside a ringside table and a Winchell footnote."

$20. AN ACRE VALUE ON WINTER PASTURE

Crimson clover and Italian grass rye pasture was worth $20. an acre as cow feed this winter on the dairy farm of J. M. Neal in Graves county.

Sixteen acres were seeded to 10 pounds of Italian rye grass seed to the acre last September. Thefield has been in lespedeza. Two tons of limestone and 200 pounds of triple superphosphate to the acre were applied before the clover and grass were seeded. Also about three and a half tons of manure per acre had been spread in the spring of 1938.

An excellent stand of clover and rye grass was obtained and grouth was splendid throughout the winter says W. R. Hoover, assistantfarm agent in Graves county.

Mr. Neal owns 84 acres and rents 50 acres. He has terraced limed and phosphated his entire farm in the past four years. In the same period he has developed a dairy herd af 24 cows from an average production of 222 pounds of butterfat in 1925 to 370 pounds in 1938.

County Agent John Watlington estimated that 500 Logan county farmers will sow 50,000 pounds of Italian rye grass this spring. It will be sowed in korean lespedeza, to make pasture in winter and to act as a cover crop. Logan county recenty inspected a field of rye grass on the farm of F. J. Berry, where they say rye grass growing in alfalfa, in crimson clover, in wheat and alone. "It is interesting to see a cornfield in which Italian rye grass was sown last September and note the perfect stand after it had been grazed all winter by sheep," said Mr. Watlington.

Samuel Miller, of Elizabeth, N. J., was upset when he found that his brother had sold his overcoat to an old clothes dealer for a few cents. Samuel had pinned $199 in the lining of the coat.

KENTUCKY WILL NOT HAVE AN EXHIBIT AT WORLD'S FAIR

Kentucky will have no exhibit at either the New York or the San Francisco World's Fair this year, G. M. Pedley, State Director of the Division of Publicity said today. The statement said:

"While the Legislature passed an act transferring $35,000 from funds of the Highway Department to be used for renting space and constructing an exhibit at the New York exposition, the attorney general subsequently ruled such transfer of funds to be unconstitutional and there is no other means open to the State to provide necessary money.

"Saturday, August 19, anniversary of the Battle of 'Blue Licks, 'Last Battle of the Revolution', has been chosen as the date of a Kentucky Day celebration at the New York Fair, and a program is being arranged for this occasion by Grover Whalen, president of the Fair, Governor Chandler and the Division of Publicity. This program will be given wide publicity in the press and via radio well ahead of date.

"A Kentucky Day celebration will also be arranged at the San Francisco Fair, date to be announced later."

TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE

The Y. M. C. A. of Cincinnati and Hamilton County is holding "Open House" on Monday, April 10, from 2:30 to 5:30 p. m., for 1939 high school graduates living in, or within a radius of fifty miles of Cincinnati.

It is the purpose of the YMCA, through this "Open House" to familiarize these yong people, both girls and boys, with the activities of the YMCA and the possibilities of continuing their education in the YMCA Day Business School, or in some phase of Evening School work.

Joseph Kenning, of Lexington, Ky., crawled four miles with a broken leg after being struck by an automobile which failed to stop after hitting him.

A Chicago man who was found raising his hat and trying to flirt with wax models in a department store window was arrested and fined for drunkenness.

FOR GOVERNOR

Louisville, Ky., April 5.—Opening headquarters in the Kentucky Hotel for Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson, of Richmond, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, J. Lyter Donaldson, of Carrollton, said here today that the formation of a Johnson-for-Governor campaign organization is "in response to an overwhelming demand for an honest, trustworthy and unwavering Democrat as a candidate to lead the Democratic party to certain victory in November."

Mr. Donaldson, a banker, attorney and farmer, served as a member of the Kentucky State Highway ommission under three Governors, a part of which time he was chairman of the Commission.

"The Democrats of Kentucky want unity and harmony, now and in 1940," Mr. Donaldson said, "and for that they need Keen Johnson."

Mr. Donaldson said there had been no occasion for a formal announcement on the part of Mr. Johnson up to the present. "It is a sign of weakness," he said, "for a candidate to announce his candidacy every few days."

"Mr. Johnson has conducted himself in a manner that the dignity of the Governor's office requires. He has had unusual experience as Lieutenant Governor and Acting Governor and as secretary of the Democratic State Central Executive Committee. He is not trying to promise himself in the Governor's chair to gratify personal ambition. A good way to judge how a Governor will act when elected is the manner in which he conducts himself during a campaign.

"We are not trying to trump up any sheshowe ballyhoo for the real estament in behalf of Mr. Johnson is to pronounced that it is apparent at every hand. Indications of support for him have come from all parts of the State, due to the confidence in his integrity, his independence of thought and action and his record as a level-headed, straightforward public officer, always willing to sacrifice personal interests for the unity and harmony of his party and the welfare of his people."

Mrs. Eugene Ellson Wackenhuth, member of a socially prominent Greenwish, Conn., family, won a divorce from her husband, a gasoline station attendant, when she testified that the finger nails in a res manicuring his fingernailsi n a restaurant.

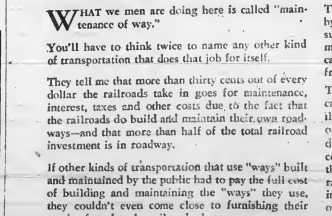
WHAT we men are doing here is called "maintenance of way."

You'll have to think twice to name any other kind of transportation that does that job for itself.

They tell me that more than thirty cents out of every dollar the railroads take in goes for maintenance, interest, taxes and other costs due to the fact that the railroads do build and maintain their own roadways—and that more than half of the total railroad investment is in roadway.

If other kinds of transportation that use "ways" built and maintained by the public had to pay the full cost of building and maintaining the "ways" they use, they couldn't even come close to furnishing their service for what the railroads charge.



That goes for the so-called "cheap transportation" by inland waterways. Almost without exception, the subsidy paid by taxpayers for each ton of freight moved on these rivers is as much as, and in most cases more than, the total cost of moving the same freight by rail.

The biggest part of the taxes paid by highway carriers goes to building and maintaining the roads they use—and they tell me that studies by a number of state highway departments show that these taxes do not cover the highway carriers' real share of road costs. Railroads pay more taxes per dollar of revenue than highway carriers do. And the big point is that railroad taxes are not used for building or maintaining their roadway—they go to meet general expenses of government.

That's why I say, "It takes real railroading these days." And the railroads are doing a real job.

When the railroads haul a ton a mile at an average revenue of one cent and pay all their own costs, they're doing a job that can't be beat by any other transportation system in the world, bar none.

And when they do a job like that—it seems to me that about all they need is a square deal in transportation.

Lamason told Magistrate Tom G Mooney who issued the warrant that Bailey had threatened " to break every bone in his body" if he printed an editorial criticizing the conduct of the junior prom Saturday night. Lamason said he was determined to print the editorial.

The editor said in fairness to Bailey he had shown him a copy of the editorial, to see whether Bailey desired to make any reply, or to challenge the accuracy of facts on which the editorial was based. It was then, he stated that Bailey threatened him.

Lamason did not give the warrant to the police immediately, since he said if Bailey were arrested to night he might have to pass the night in jail.

"I'll wait and have it served tomorrow," Lamason said. "I don't want to work any hardship on him, but I want him to understand he can't get by with anything like that."

BUS FARES DOWN

Substantial reductions in motor bus fares throughout the Southeast, were announced here today by officials of the Southeastern Greyhound Lines. The fare reductions will be in effect south of the Ohio in deast of the Mississippi. The new fares, approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, called for a scale, the cost per mile becoming less as the distance traveled increases. The fare starts at a zone rate from one to 50 miles at .015c per mile and is decreased according to the mileage traveled. Over 500 miles rates are only .0115c per mile. Motor bus officials pointed out that this is also subject to a 10% discount on round trips. The new fares are the lowest transportation rates in the history of travel by highway, rail or any other means of transportation.

The new tariff constructed on a mileage scale is the first time that bus fares have been based upon actual mileage travel. Previously, fares were set up according to types of equipment, highways conditions and the amount of service rendered. Competition was also taken into consideration. The new tariffs have been distributed throughout the system and all local agents have been instructed to sell at the reduced fares.

With announcement of the new reduced local fares is a special circle tour rate of $69.95 to both fairs taking in the New York World's Pair and the San Francisco Exposition from any city in the United States. This is the lowest transcontinental round trip rate ever in existence at any time in American history.

EXPERT PREPARES "FASHION CHART"

A "fashion chart" prepared by Miss Frances Seal's, style expert of the University of Kentucky home economics department, fill[illegible] fashion spring colors: Forsythia, [illegible] yellow, white henna; bright [illegible] in general, or put it. The old [illegible] are as good as ever.

[illegible] to be seen. Old fashioned [illegible] again, the [illegible] of a lady, yes. More and more layers [illegible] and skirts.

[illegible] Good as always, both tailored and more feminine kinds.

[illegible] Very definite and [illegible] appeal. Whether [illegible] low and the upper part or [illegible] will make the waist seem [illegible].

[illegible] Neat, the high top [illegible] continues, but without so much emphasis at the neck; a crisp [illegible] or lacy touch at the neck is good.

Sleeve lines: The wide shoulder popularity continues, but usually not so fancy this season, merely squared. Some sleeves full for entire length.

Accessories: Bags of manipulated pouch effects, and large in size, to be much used. Hats are of such variety buyers can get one that is suitable and also fashionable. Shoes to be very "cut out."

A fashion detail: There will be much trimming, some old-fashioned looking, and—to make everything right—the bolero is still with us.

Bromfield Sings On Life That America Is

AFTER twenty-five years abroad, Louis Bromfield, the novelist, has come home to America, from whence he sprang. His American roots, those that were implanted in him early in his youth although dormant for so long, surged upward and propelled him back to his own land. Europe, he felt, was dying under a great curse; the very air reeked with venom and hatred. The continent was condemned, and he had to escape. He wanted above all to hear his children laugh again.

For the March Good Housekeeping, Mr. Bromfield has written a poignant piece, describing what went on inside of him upon his return home. He entitles his article "To Whom It May Concern."

"Twenty-five years is a long time to be away from home," he says. "In twenty years I had returned for only a single night; but when recently I came back, to stay, something inside me said: 'You were right. This is home. Out of this you have come. All that you are, good or bad, feeble, strong, or indifferent, came from these woods and fields and fertile hills.'

"For three or four months before returning, life was nightmarish. Each morning I wakened with a dread at what I should find in the newspaper. Gradually that wore me down until on every awakening, ever every sunrise, there was a feeling of horror, as if the sun were obscured.

"From that I went straight into the heart of Ohio. And for the first time in months I saw the sun rise, brilliant and clear, because in my soul there was no mist of dread and doom . . . there was no waiting for some horror without name. Thus, it seemed to me, must a soul feel emerging from Purgatory into Paradise.

"I am home again, and it is a home worth fighting for. Only someone who has lived through the misery of Europe knows how much it is worth fighting for."

FARMERS WHO HELD DOWN COSTS MADE MONEY FROM LAMBS

Farmers who held down costs of raising lambs had a lower depreciation on ewes, made money from sheep last year, accordingto a study which the far mecnomics department of the Kentucky College of Agriculture made of 32 flock records kept in Bourbon,Fayette , Harrison, Jessamine and Woodford counties in Kentucky. Owners of the ten best-paying flocks made an average profit of $3.32 per ewe.

Lowering the cost of producing lambs included raising more lambs per ewe. This meant saving all lambs possible at birth, with a liberal sprinkling of twins.

Higher prices were received from early marketings, and the most successfull sheep men sold their lambs in May, June or July. This called for early breeding in the fall, and keeping the ewes in good condition, so they would have plenty of milk for their lambs; and also attention to rapid development of the lambs.

Greater care in selecting lambs at selling time resulted in heavier weight per lamb at market. Most profit was made where lambs were sold only when in good condition, those not in proper condition being held back until they were better fished.

KENTUCKY FARM NEW

Plans to improve the livestock in Boyle county includes placing Milking shorthorn sires.

Eleven men in one county on March 1 took possession of land bought under the Tenant Purchase Plan. The county farm agent, local improvement committees and other agencies will give assistance in soil building and other work to improve the farms.

Twelve Green county farmers have ordered 20,000 black locust seedlings to set on abndoned waste land. A program, launched through the assistance of W. E. Jackson, state extension forester, includes reforestation, timber improvement, and tree planting demonstrations.

Henderson county farmers are making their own stock mineral mixture at a cost of $1.55 for 100 pounds. It consists of powdered limestone, steamed bone meal, salt and powdered charcoal. The Farm Bureau is sponsoring the project.

The county planning program in Wolfe county includes prevention of forest fires, planting of seedlings on waste land, putting sheep on all farms, drainage of level land, use of limestone and phosphate, seeding of hay and grass, and better livestock.

A student at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., asked to name two ancient sports, replied: "Anthony and Cleopatra."

COMMITTEE TO LOOK AFTER HYBRID COEN

Stocks of hybrid corn developed at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Statio nwill be distributed over the State and future supplies of seed produced under the supervision of a special committee of farmers named by Dean Thomas P. Cooper. In this way it is hoped to produce within a few years sufficient seed of approved hybrids to supply the needs of the farmers of the State.

The committee of farmers, the Experiment Station and the College of Agriculture and the Kentucky Seed Improvement Association will cooperate in furthering the production and distribution of pure strains of the hybrid corn developed at the Experiment Station farm at Lexington.

The Experiment Station has produced outstanding hybrid corn, and ean Cooper said it was his desire that agriculture secure the benefit of this scientific work.

Members of the committee are: Murray Hagan, Owensboro; Charles Meacham, Morganfield; W. H. Rogers, Harrodsburg; W. F. Rickard, Winchester, and W. C. Johnstoen, of the College of Agriculture, acting as an advisory member.

"FARM PLAN" GIVES AAA IMFORMATION

All County Agricultural Conservation offices in Kentucky are making plans to contact farmers concerning the 1939 "farm plan," according to O. M. Farrington, State Executive Officer. In some counties the contacts are being made by county agents and committeemen at community meetings. In other counties, farmers are being contacted when checks for1938 payments are distributed. Other farmers will receive their "farm plan" by means of visits to the counto yffices.

In 1939 "ayments" will not be made to any farm operator who has not worked out with the committee and signed the "farm plan", Farrington said. The "farm plan" provides for eacho f the acreage allotments, the total amount of payment which may be earned, and space for the practices which will earn the entire soil-building payment. The practices will be agreed upon when the farmer and the committeemen set up the "farm plan".

The "farm plan, also carries information about rates of payments, rates of deductions and credit which will be given for each soil-building practice.

Each farmer who intends to cooperate for payment should fill out a "farm plan". A copy of this will be given to the farmer at the time it is worked out, as a guide to help in carrying out the program on his farm.

FISHERMEN ASKED TO OBSERVE STATE LAWS

Now that the fishing season is here and every person interested in the art of angling is taking advantage of the good weather to go to the lakes, streams and ponds, Major James Brown, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, calls attention to the limitations on the number of fish to be taken by an individual.

No person shall take or have in his possession more than ten trout, fifteen rock bass or giggle-eye, fifteen crapple, fifteen jack salmon or wall-eyed pike, nor more than, fifteen striped bass in any one day. The angler may not take nor have in his or her possession any black bass under eleven inches in length, any trout under seve inches, any crapple under eight inches, provided, however, that any person having fished two days in succession may have in possession a total not to exceed 20 black bass or trout, 30 rock bass or goggle-eye or 30 crapple, 30 jack salmon or wall-eyed pike, or 30 striped bass.

Attention is also called to the section of the Game and Fish laws which requires all persons, both men and women, to possess a fishing license when enjoying that particular sport. The license must be worn on the outside of the clothing where it wil lbe plainly visible.

Egg Marks The Spot, Officer

Patrolman Harold Nickerson of the Detroit Police put his ticket book away when Betty Dane, Wayne University student, explained that her driving with an egg was only part of a sorority initiation stunt. She did it, too, without breaking the egg, by using a Chevrolet, in which vacuum from the motor supplies nearly all the power necessary in shifting gears with the new steering-column shift lever.

MAKES POOR LAND PRODUCE PAYING GAINS ON STEERS

Farmers who attended the recent meeting at the Western Kentucky Experiment Sunostation at Princeton heard Supt. S. J. Lowry tell an amazing story of ten years of pasture development on some of the poorest land in Caldwell county.

Land that had become almost wholly unproductive was given simple treatments of limestone and acid phosphate, sowed to a grass mixture, and the value of the grazing measured in terms of weight put on steers. A ten-acre field so treated produced an average of 1,683 pounds of gain on steers each year. A ten-acre field of similar land with no treatment, but sowed to the same grass mixture, averaged 469 pounds of beef a year.

The treated ten-acre field carried an average of eight steers for the grazing season, compared to three steers on the untreated field. Cost of gains on the treated field was placed at $3.14 a hundred pounds, and on the untreated land $9.55.

A ton and a half of limestone and 1,000 pounds of acid phosphate per acre were used on the treated field. The grass mixture sowed consisted of 6 pounds of orchard grass, 2 pounds of each Canada and Kentucky bluegrass a pound and a half of common lespedeza, a pound and two-thirds of korean lespedeza, a pound of white clover, a pound of redtop and 2 pounds of sweet clover, per acre.

TODD CALVES SELL WELL IN NASHVILLE

Todd County, Kentucky, 4-H Club members sold a dozen well-finished calves in Nashville for $788.00, net, and also added cash in the form of show prizes. First prize went to Albert Waldrep on a 975-pound Angus calf, which brought $100 plus $10 in prizes. "Producing costs were low, due to cheap feed and good management. Calf club work has proved profitable for club members," commented County Agent Stuart Brabant.

FASHION ALWAYS SAME THING

The thought that fashion and good taste do not always go together is expressed by Miss Frances Seeds, a clothing expert at the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The woman of food taste, she says, should remember that fashions were made for her, not her for the fashions.

Sales people are primarily interested in making sales, she reminds women. Therefore it may be wise to take their advice "with a grain of salt." It is pointed out that this season's wide variety of offerings means that careful buyers can be well dressed. It is better to wear a color that is attractive to the wearer than to choose the leading color.

SPRING OPERATIONS BEGUN AT ASHLAND STATE HATCHERY

The quail and fish hatchery at Ashland, Ky., owned and operated by the State, has begun its spring operations of transferring the brood bass from winter quarters to their summer abode where they will spawn. Rearing pools are being cleaned out to receive the small fry which will be placed in them later on in the season. The quail pens are receiving new coats of paint, the quail brooders have been overhauled to receive the first of the young that hatch off, and numerous other little odd jobs have been performed in getting the hatchery in first class shape.

Bob Raisor, caretaker of the hatchery, said that after a tabulation of the entire stock of brood bass last week, he finds that the hatchery has a total of 266 fish with which to work this spring. These bass weigh anywhere from two to seven pounds each.

The Division of Game and Fish, under the direction of Major James Brown, is planning a more extensive quail production program at this particular hatchery this season. A sufficient number of old quail are kept on hand to furnish the eggs for the incubator, which can turn out approximately 2,500 young quail at a time.

MAY STRIP TOBACCO BY ELECTRIC LIGHT

The extension of power lines to several thousand farms in Kentucy is creating interest in the use of electric light last fall reported satisfactory results, especially where certain forms of indirect lighting were used.

Investigations now are being made made at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington and by electric companies, in an effort to determine the best type of electric lighting to use in stripping rooms.

Electric lights, it is pointed out, would materially lengthen the hours in which tobacco could be stripped and sorted, whereas such work now is often confined to a few hours in the middle of the day, and on cloudy and dark days is often done with difficulty.

FILLERS

Herman Douyard, fishing-bait salesman of Northampton, Mass., has invented an automatic worm vendor to serve customers while he sleeps.

CHILD SHOULD EAT AT LEAST FOUR EGGS A WEEK

Eggs are richer than most foods in some of the minerals and vitamins the body needs, points out Miss Florence Imlay of the University of Kentucky College ofAgriculture. Since much of the mineral and vitcontent is concentrated in the yolk this part is especially valuable. That is why it is one of the first foods added to the baby's milk diet. Eggs are needed for their iron, vitamins and their "efficient" protein; they are rich in phosphorus, and are good source of calcium. Besides vitamin A, eggs are an excellent source of vitamins G and E, and the yolks are one of the relatively few good natural sources of vitamin D. Nutrition experts recomend that every child eat four or five eggs every week, or better still, one every day. Adults need to eat at least three or four eggs a week.

KEEP YOUR GREASE REMOVER HANDY

The wise housekeeper keeps a small can of grease solvent handy for small can of grease solvent handy for emergencies such as cod liver oil that has been spilled. Carbon tetrachloride is non-inflammable, and so is the safest of the solvents. If any are used, the containers should never be opened where there is a flame or fire of any kind. Even the pilot light on a gas stove or a lighted cigarette may cause gasoline or other inflammable cleaning fluids to explode.

LAND SLARGE BASS

Roger Clark, of Danville, Ky., has been receiving the congratulations of his friends upon his piscatorial prowess in snagging a seven-pound, four-ouce bass from the waters of Lake Herringtonat Gwinn's Island last Sunday afternoon.

The huge specimen of the elusive finny tribe was lured by the expert casting of Mr. Clark, using a flapper bait. It is believed that his catch is the largest taken from the lake this spring.

TOWN AND COUNTRY MAGAZINE MAKES SURVEY

American upper class is still able to make merry in spite of the growing hazards to possession of extensive fortunes, according to their butlers, who report that one hundred typical wealthy families consume 240,000 bottles of beverages annually, entertain 190,800 guests per year, employ 1,081 servants and make 24 trips accompanied by seven trunks to the family. The average size of the family is five persons.

These striking facts are brought out in a recent survey conducted by Town & Country Magazine in conjunction with the Butler's Club of New York. One hundred members of this group returned signed questionnaires describing the habits and perferences of their employers. This survey provides a cross section of the spending trends of wealthy families in the United States.

A breakdown of beverage expenditure discloses the consumption of 20,000 bottles of wine, 56,000 bottles of whiskey, 28,000 bottles of gin, 11,000 bottles of champagne, 38,000 bottles of beer, 30,000 bottles of ginger ale and 43,000 bottles of charged water, a quantity sufficient to keep the hundred wealthy families in a high state of conviviality were it not for the fact that they entertain six hundred guests daily. The favorite cocktail of this contingent is the Martini, closely followed by the Manhattan. Old Fashions came third.

A total of 42 rooms per family is the average space occupied by this group. Ninety-four per cent have country houses, boasting an average of 100 acres of ground in the estate and 22 rooms in the house. Eighty-seven per cent have town houses, averaging 18 rooms to the house. One family of five manages to occupy 44 rooms and employs 40 servants. About one-fourth of these houses are redecorated every year and eight-four per cent of all the employ the services of a professional decorator. Sixty-nine per cent of these families own more than one pattern of sterling silver with which to vary the monotony of eating.

More than none-half the family groups represented in the survey maintained stables, with the number of horses ranging from two to 32. Race horses numbered 25, polo ponies 54, saddle horses 119. House dogs maintained added up to 111, with cocker spaniels, scotties and wire-haired fox terriers as favorite breeds. Two households owned 12 dogs each.

An average of three cars per household represents the motor investment by this group. Out of the hundred families, twenty-three operated station wagons. The most popular make of car represented was in the low-price field. Twenty-five Rolls Royce owners were tabulated.

Florida was the most prominent vacation objective of the hundred families, with Bermuda and Europe vying for second place. White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Maine and California ranked next in the order named. Ninety-four per cent of these families were accompanied by a servant when traveling.

The Butler's Club of New York, enlisted by Town & Country in the compilation of these unique statistics hitherto considered almost impossible to obtain, has a membership of 2,000 butlers in and around New York City, supports its own publication, Staff, and entertains annually with a ball.

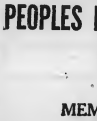
DARK TOBACCO PAYS ON TEST FARM IN WESTERN KENTUCKY

For three years dark tobacco, produced under practical farm conditions, has returned an average of $230 per acre at the Western Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Sbstation at Princeton. Two acres are grown each year in a curing experiment.

Nothing was done either in the growing or curing that could not readily be don eby any farmer, according to S. J. Lowry ,Superintendent of the Experiment Substation. Each tobacco cro p followed legumes and grass on ground that had been treated with limestone and phosphate.

Manure at the rate of eight tons to the acre was worked into the soil before the tobacco was set. A broadcast application of 300 pounds of 2 0per cent superphosphate per acre and a hill application of 150 pounds of 5-105 fertilizer were used each year.

Up to the time of curing the whole area was handled uniformly as regards treatment, cultuer and the like. Half of the tobacco was cured by one method and half by another, both of which gavesimilar and satisfactory results.



The average yields for the three crops was 1,428 pounds per acre per year, the average $16.11 per hundred pounds, and the average return per year $230.02.

Judge R. C. Burwell, of London, declared in court that if women controlled their tongues half the lawyers would be out of work.

After quarreling for 37 years over how knives and forks should be arranged on the table, Charles Bucher and his wife were divorced in Los Angeles.

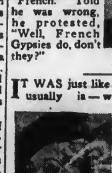
GOSSIP-GRAMS

News and Views on Air Personalities

ALWAYS being in the thick of things is the keynote to Dorothy Thompson's success as leading lady of journalism and the only woman to make good as international political commentator. She once covered a Polish Revolution in evening dress and satin slippers; she has braved machine-gun fire for a story in Bulgaria.

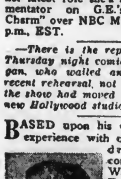
Dorothy Thompson

In fact she managed to be on hand for every event of importance and hse interviewed all leading figures on the continent, including Hitler.



While Miss Thompson, wife of the novelist, Sinclair Lewis, has settled down to a more quiet life, her typewriter goes at a terrific rate. In her latest role she'd heard as commentator on G.E.'s "Hour of Charm" over NBC Mondays at 9:00 p.m., EST.

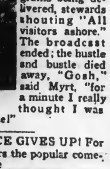
—There is the report about the Thursday night comic, Frank Morgan, who walked an hour for a recent rehearsal, not realizing that the show had moved to the elegant new Hollywood studio.



CONTESTANTS on Jim McWilliams' Ask-It Basket often put up a fight if they think their answers are more accurate than those approved by the judges. Asked what language the gypsies speak, a contestant answered, "French." Told he was wrong, he protested, "Well, French Gypsies do, don't they?"

Jim McWilliams

IT WAS just like a steamer sailing usually is—whistles blowing, everyone down to see "Myrt and Marge" off, yelling fond farewells from pier to deck, telegrams being delivered, stewards shouting "All visitors ashore." The broadcast ended; the hustle and bustle died away. "Gosh," said Myrt, "for a minute I really thought I was going some place!"



"Myrt"

BASED upon his own extended experience with over one hundred thousand convicted men in Warden Lewis E. Lawes' "Criminal Case Histories" program (NBC-WJZ 8:00 to 8:30 p.m. EST every Friday). In examining the criminal's attitude toward society and society's attitude toward the criminal—the warden maintains—"It's Mr. Average Citizen who pays the bill, who is the real victim of crime, and who as a member of a democratic community is finally responsible."

Warden Lawes

—This marks the seventh year that Warden Lawes has been trying to tell us (tax payers) just where we get off. His dramatized stories graphically present a cross-section of underworld doings.

FANNY BRICE GIVES UP! For nineteen years the popular comedienne of the Thursday night Good News program has been trying to keep daughter Frances—her own "Baby Snooks"—from following an acting career. Just when Fanny thought she had the problem licked, Frances got some small parts at MGM. A week later she was working at Paramount. "Oh well," says Fanny, "like father like son . . . I mean like mother like daughter!"

Fanny Brice

—Incidentally, we just can't wait for television so we can see "Baby Snooks" each week in these tragic-life, mirth-provoking sketches. The facial expressions must be swell.

NEWS OF INTEREST TO UNEMPLOYED

An ever-mounting stream of funds is being paid weekly to Kentucky workers entitled to collect benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Law, figures released by the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission revealed today.

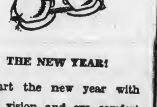
With more than $800,000 already having been paid in unemployment insurance benefits sice February 1, Commission officials anticipated April would see a weekly payment of approximately $300,000 to unemployed Kentucky workmen or a monthly total exceeding three quarters of a million dollars.

All claims received by the Commission are processed, calculated and payment ordered within twenty-four hours after they are received in the Frankfort office. The number of claims pending owing to requests to reconsideration or due to protests filed against the payment of the claimant have been reduced to a negligible degree, less than a few hundred being in the office at the present time.

Soince the payment of benefits began in Kentucky on February 1, a total of $802,697.94 has been paid out to unemployed Kentucky workmen. Of this amount, $290,317.94 was paid during the twenty-eight days of the month of February, while $512,399.22 was paid out during the first 25 days of March. The March payments, Commission officials said, would be twice as great as those made during the month of February.

The sharp jump on benefit payments is revealed in the number of checks issued during February and for the rest of 25 days of March. During the month of February a total of 33,231 checks were issued, while 60,667 checks were issued from March 1 through March 25, representing a total of 93,858 checks which have been issued by the Commission or on an average of 3,500 checks per day for the six-day period.

Benefit payments during the month of April are expected to continue to rise until they approximate $200,000 per week or more. This will mean that $800,000 or more is being paid monthly to unemployed Kentucky workers to tide them over their period of unemployment.



Payment of $200,000 in benefits each week would represent 25,000 checks weekly or an average of 4,100 per day.

Though the Commission for the past week or so has been handicapped in its operations somewhat through lack of funds available for administration and it is expected that only a partial payment of its employees salaries will be able to be made on April 1, a sufficient amount of money to purchase stamps to mail checks to all workmen entitled to receive benefits has been set aside for at least the next ten days. It is hoped by that time that sufficient funds for administrative purposes will have been received from the Social Security Board in Washington.

Albe nefit payments made by the Commission are paid from the trust fund created by contributions from employers and employees. All funds for administrative purposes are received by the Commission in grants from the Social Security Board. The law prohibits the use of any portion of the trust fund for any other purpose than for the payment of benefits.

OLD SOD PAYS

Louis Brown, Christian county Negro farmer, received $215. for 860 pounds of tobacco produced on seven tenths of an acre of land that had been in grass and clover for 10 years. Tobacco from seven-tenths of an acre that had been in sod only two years brought only $65.

Woman Ignores Mule And Goes to Hospital

VISALIA, CALIF.—The relative degree of a mule's resistance to an automobile is still a disputed question here. The test was made when Charles Joyner and Miss Velma Cranfield, driving along a highway, encountered one which refused to budge.

Joyner ignored the mule, with the result Miss Canfield went to a hospital, the car to a repair shop.

'JEKYLL-HYDE' IS GIVEN PRISON TERM

Doctor Goes to Leavenworth On Narcotics Charge.

COVINGTON, KY.—Dr. Henry Logan Gragg, gray-haired country doctor, who admitted the role of a "Jekyll and Hyde," now is serving a five-year sentence at Leavenworth, Kan.

The 53-year-old physician, who attended child births almost daily among the poor of Boyle county, pleaded guilty in the federal court here to charges of supplying morphine to a small-time narcotics ring whose customers mostly comprised young men in their twenties.

Doctor Gragg was sentenced to five years each on Two counts charging sale of narcotics and to two years on a third charge of conspiracy. The sentences are to be served concurrently.

Federal narcotics agents' records showed that the country doctor received more than 9,000 half-grains of morphine this year—more than a regular physician would use in over 150 years of legal practice.

In passing sentence, Judge H. Church Ford said he was taking into consideration the fact that Doctor Gragg virtually donated his services to his impoverished patients. It was indicated that the country doctor might have sold the narcotics to compensate for unpaid bills of his patients.

Five of six defendants sentenced with Doctor Gragg, four of them under 30, were given terms ranging from two to five years at the federal narcotics farm in Lexington, Ky. They admitted they were drug addicts. The sixth prisoner was sentenced to the federal prison for two years.

The court session completed a lengthy federal investigation that ended in the seven arrests in September. The arraignment proceedings took place before the United States commissioner in Lexington.

Bird-Eating Spider Is Discovered in Australia

MELBOURNE, VIC.—This country of strange animals, birds and insects has discovered a new freak in spiders that eat birds.

John Clark, museum entomologist, swears to the discovery and says he found the legs of a newly killed young turkey half-way down the hole occupied by one of these monster spiders, which are Mygales. The largest recorded specimen was about nine inches in leg span, with a body as large as a bantam's egg.

Another naturalist, Mr. R. Steed, states that in western and inland Australia there are dry salt lakes, on one of which he, saw what he thought to be a large rat running and disappearing into its hole. He found it was an enormous spider, which sat back and showed fight.

Bird-eating spiders are found from Alice Springs, central Australia, to the edge of the Mallee, in Victoria.

Help! Snake Authority Has Rattler as Caller

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—An authority on reptiles which roamed the earth millions of years ago, Dr. Robert Karpinski, Indiana State Teachers college geologist, does not consider himself an expert on the Twentieth century rattlesnake variety.

But when he heard the sound of a snake in a hall outside his laboratory last night, he summoned John Helm, night watchman. Together they disposed of the four-foot rattler after a thrilling battle. The snake had escaped from a wire cage in the zoology laboratory.

Kitten Gives Alarm as Thief Cuts Wash Line

NEW ORLEANS.—Happy, a six-month-old Persian kitten, basked in the limelight here after saving the family wash from a thief.

The kitten was tied to the clothesline when the thief entered the yard, cut the line and started off with the Monday wash.

Happy ran into the house, meowed loudly and jumped up and down to attract attention. The maid understood, called police and the thief was caught.

Man Needs a System of Super-Highways to Help Cure Him of Motor Mania

THE grip of a steering-wheel, open road ahead, the mad desire for speed running through him—and man, the superior thinking animal, forgets to think and lets himself fall easy prey to that devastating disease of the highways, motor mania.

Traffic engineers and psychologists, studying this unconscious suicidal tendency, decided the only way to suppress it would be by taking judgment out of man's domain. He must be directed without knowing it. In a word, he must be given foolproof roads.

Thus was born, in the early '30's, our modern super-highways, utilizing the "limited-way" plan which eliminates four sources of danger: (1) There can be no head-on crashes, because the four-lane road is separated into two parts by an island. (2) There are no intersections, because overpasses are built for motorists crossing the highway. Fast and slow lanes branching from underpasses are the means of entering and leaving the highway. (3) There are signs warning against parking and U turns—and the State police are right there to nab violators. (4) There can be no pedestrian casualties because no pedestrians are allowed.

In "This Way to the Highway"—Good Housekeeping's fourth article (the March issue) in its campaign for greater traffic safety—Rita Weiman appeals to the public, especially the women, to agitate and propagandize for a national system of these super-highways. Get after your legislators, Miss Weiman exhorts, and demand that part of the taxes you pay be used for better roads.

The author cites the Merritt Parkway as an example of what can be accomplished by public-spirited men and women. Originally conceived to divert traffic from the congested Boston Post Road, the Parkway was opened in June, 1938, and for the first three months only 46 accidents were reported—with no fatalities! Compare this record with that of the Post Road for the same distance and period of time, and the extraordinary saving of human limb and property becomes apparent: 115 accidents, including one fatality. And for the same three months in 1937, when there was no Parkway, the Post Road suffered 186 accidents. A loud cheer, therefore, for the Fairfield County Planning Association and the State of Connecticut.

The women, bless them, have contributed considerably to the beauty and safety of the Parkway. Not only are they better driving risks than the men, according to Acting Lieutenant Irving T. Schubert of the Fairfield County Headquarters, but their garden clubs and civic organizations are powerful factors in maintaining the road's impeccable standards. Women have agitated with remarkable success for the removal of signs and billboards and ramshackle eating stands, real menaces to safe travel.

Finds He Slept for Two Nights With Dead Man

TOLEDO, OHIO.—Police here investigated the story of a 53-year-old man who said that he had slept in bed with a friend for two nights without knowing that the man was dead.

The first night he noticed nothing unusual, he related, and when he came home and went to bed the second night, he still thought nothing was amiss although his friend had not moved.

At the end of the second day, he tried to awaken the "sleeping" man. He failed, and called police to whom he told his story.

Deputy Coroner A. H. Steinberg said the man had died of natural causes and probably had been dead 48 hours.

Court Punishes Husband As He Punished His Wife

BERKELEY, CALIF. — Police Judge Oliver Youngs believes in a certain application of the "eye for an eye and tooth for a tooth" law. When Mrs. Gustav Berndt complained that her husband knocked her down and poured one pitcher of ice water down the back of her dress and another down the front, Judge Youngs ordered Bailiff Charles Matlin to take the husband to the basement of the court and apply the same treatment to him.

"Now how do you expect me to get home in these wet clothes?" demanded the soused prisoner upon his return.

"The same way your w did," replied the judge, "and st right away."

Sloth makes all things difficult, but industry all things easy.—Benjamin Franklin.

Rugged Individualist Is Fined by English Court

BOURNEMOUTH, ENGLAND.—Appeasement has cost Abraham Richard Hewitt, local hardware merchant, $82.50.

Hewitt deals in metal garbage cans, but for his own home he used a wooden box, thus violating a local ordinance. For 20 minutes the magistrate tried to persuade Hewitt to reconsider his firm stand and use a metal garbage can.

"Don't you ever change your mind?" the magistrate asked of Hewitt.

"No, sir," he replied. "My name is not Chamberlain. You can't Hitlerize me!"

As this was the third time that Hewitt was summoned for the same offense, he was ordered to pay $13.25 on the spot and $1 for each day he had violated the law.

DENY SEEKING AID

Baptist Churches do not solicit support from "saloon keeper or operators of gambling houses," the North Kentucky Baptist Pastors Conference said yesterday in a statement issued by a committee composed of Rev. T. C. Steele, Rev. Raymond Smith, and Rev. M. M. McFarland.

In the statement, issued following a conference, the committee said: Baptist pastors in this locality since Sunday closing has become an issue in Covington, Kenton and Campbell Couties, that many saloon operators are saying, 'we do not see why the churches are insisting upon Sunday closing of our establishments, as the churches always come to us for donations.'

"The North Kentucky Pastors' Conference, of course, can speak only for the Baptist of Kenton Campbell and Boone Counties, but it can assure the saloon keepers that Baptist churches do not solicit from them for their churches, orphanages or other institutions. It further can assure the saloon keepers that before they go afield and ask the world to support their religious work they voluntarily will close their doors.

NATIONAL BOYS AND GIRLS WEEK

Indications from all parts of the United States are being received that the observance of Boys and Girls Week—April 29th to May 6th —will be more wide-spread this year than in any other of the sixteen years since the Week was organized, according to information received from John L. Griffith, Chairman of the National Boys and Girls Week Committee for the United States.

The American Legion, the National Commitiee of 4-H Clubs, and the Rotary clubs of the country, as well as some thirty other cooperating organizations, report plans for unusually active participation. It is impossible to estimate the number of boys and girls who will take part in the observance, according to Major Griffith, but with such organizations as the fore-going, plus Kiwanis, Knights of Columbus, Lions, Exchange, Order of DeMolay, Salvation Army, Y. M. C. A., Boy Scouts, and others, the total of participants will undoubtedly be numbered in the millions.

Boys and Girls Week is the outgrowth of Boys Week which originated in 1930 through the Rotary Club of New York City and in a few years spread to all parts of the world. With the growth of Boys Week, there developed the feeling that girls as well as boys should be publicly recognized during the week. Since 1934, children of both sexes from about ten to eighteen years of age have been included in the activities.

The annual program in most communities includes parades, pageants and exhibitions, church and citizenship activities, health, vocational, and educational events, as well as entertainments and athletics. A popular feature is the boys and girls evening at home, the objective of which is to stress the mutual responsibilities of parents and children as members of the family group.

The object of Boys and Girls Week are the following:

1. To focus public attention upon boys and girls, their potentialities, and their problems, to the end that increasing numbers of adults may be awakened to the joys and opportunities of youth service and inspired to participate.

2. To give impetus to year-round programs of character building activities for the general welfare of boys and girls; and to acquaint the public with the agencies which are serving this purpose.

3. To emphasize the importance of a sound body, trained mind and spiritual growth in the complete development o fthe boy and girl; and to emphasize the important functions of the home, the church, and the school in such development.

4. To emphasize the need of instilling in the boys and girls the love of country and respect for its laws and established institutions and of bringing to each the realization of his duties and responsibilities as a citizen.

Details fo rthe observance of Boys and Girls Week in this community will be announced later.

G-MAN EDUCATION

For State Police Of Highway Patrol

State highway patrolmen will receive intensive courses of instruction with in the next six weeks with Federal Bureau of Investigation agents assisting. Major Joe Burmon, Supervisor of the Bureau of Identification of the State Highway Patrol revealed here today.

Instruction will be given to all men in the department for about one week, Burman said. Instructors will move back and forth between two district headquarters twice a day, training one group in the morning, and another group in the afternoon.

Burman said this procedure would permit the State to be covered in about a month, without taking any great number of patrolmen off the highways except for two hours a day in one district at a time.

Schedule for the course has not been completed, Burman said, but the first school probably will be started at Richmond April 16.

Burman made his announcement after receipt of a letter from J. Edgar Hoover, Chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, promising that requested instruction material was being forwarded and thte agents would be assigned whenever esired to assist him in conducting the classes. Burman himself it a graduate of the FBI school and also has taken intensive training at Northwestern University.

"The instruction will include all the field essentials of police work," Burman said. "Every man in the department ought to know how to take fingerprints, make a record of other evidence and do the other things that are necessary to do on the spot. In going after a desperate man, the FBI men have worked it down to a science to do the job with the least risk. You don't often hear of a G-man getting hurt in taking some o fthe most desperate criminals in the country I want our men to have the benefit of their knowledge.

"Such things as first aid, proper handling of firearms and other routine of police work will also be a part of the courses. Of course we don't have the money to give every man in the department a complete crime school training, but we want every one of them to know the essentials that are most needed in the field. We hope to have one thoroughly trained expert when more complete knowledge is needed.

Burman said he took up with FBI the subject of training courses for the highway patrolman at the direction of Governor Chandler.

Hoover's letter to Burman commended the department for it "progressive attitude."

SEEKS PAYMENTS

Final efforts to obtain advance payments from residents of Erlanger to take advantage of a Federal proffer of funds with which to complete the city's sewer system will be made at a mass meeting of Erlanger citizens at 8 o'clock Wednesday in Lloyd High School auditorium. The meeting will be sponsored by the Erlanger Board of Trustees.

The Erlanger Trustees said the meeting would be devoted largely to the organization of a corps of solicitors to call upon property owners in the town who have not thus far paid their $2 a front foot sewer assessment. Under a recent plan worked out by residents of the town the Community Bank of Erlanger was made trustee for the sewer fund, into which property owners were to pay the sewer assessment.

Part of the assessments have been paid to the bank, it was said, but unless all are paid by Saturday there is a probability that Erlanger will lose an allotment of $69,000 that has been set aside by the Works Progress Administration to finish the town's half-completed sewer system fund, which must reach $30,-000 if the WPA grant is to be received, should be made at the Community Bank.

A proposed new contract with the Kenton County Water Commisson, under which the annual service charge of $8 would be abolished and the tap-in fee for residences reduced from $50 to $45 also will be discussed at the mass meeting

Members of the Board of Trustees urged all residents of Erlanger to attend the meeting.

A MINIMUM OF OF WASTE

We have all heard of the efficient methods employed by the big meat packing plants in the utilization of the by-products incidental to the preparation of meat products for the consuming public. And we know of at least one instance where agriculture has taken a lesson in industrial efficiency and is utilizing by-products which have in the past been thrown away. In Texas in "The Valley" which is the delta of the Rio Grande River, approximately 40 miles wide and 60 miles long. Its soil is incredibly rich and the black earth is so deep it practically has no bottom. A deficiency in rainfall has caused the development of the Rio Grande River, is about 40 miles wide. abundant water supply in the Rio Grande. Three crops a year can be raised, a large part of the green vegetables consumed in Northern cities in the winter and early spring being raised in that region. The surplus over and above the immediate demands of the market is canned or frozen for later consumption.

As one illustration of the efficient methods being employed in the production and sales of these products, in the plants where grapefruit juice is canned, even the grapefruit skins are utilized. They are dehydrated, crushed and press. In that form they are a most acceptable food for cattle. No use has yet been found for the seeds, but doubtless one will be discovered.

This is only one instance of turning what was waste into something of value. Little by little things which our fathers discarded as of no value are being transformed into products of worth and service.

Perhaps after a while even cornstalks can be changed into something now and useful. Certainly if a use can be found for the lowly grapefruit skin, it is not too much to expect that she shall eventually learn new and profitable uses for many things which are now regarded merely as waste.

TAX RELIEF

An important measure of business tax relief—amendment of the Social Security Act reducing premiums for unemployment insurance—shortly will be recommended to Congress by the Ways and Means Committee. The proposed amendment would exempt from the present three per cent unemployment insurance tax all sums paid in salaries in excess of $3,000 a year. As the law now stands employers pay three per cent of their entire payroll, although employees of the lose their jobs, can collect no more than $15 a week, regardless of what their salaries have been. The change, incidentally, has been approved by the Social Security Board.

It is also indicated that Congress will re-enact the various miscellaneous and nuisance taxes expiring June 30. These taxes yield approximately $500,000,000 a year in revenue. Among the levies which expire are those on gasoline, electrical energy, lubricating all ,telephone and telegraph messages, perfumes, cosmetics, matches, refrigerators, radio sets and firearms.

The average person is not usually aware of the existence of these taxes, since they are levied on the manufacturer. The tax then becomes one of the expenses of doing business and prices for these various classes of merchandise or service must be adjusted upward accordingly.

EUROPE'S BATTLEGROUND

Sudden and undeclared war is imminent in Europe, as reports from Germany indicate that Hitler is preparing to send war planes over Europe if the Anglo-French "anti-agression bloc" continues to encircle Germany. Already "punish England" propaganda is heard in all parts of Germany. Three divisions of German regulars have moved up to the Polish border and these troops are rapidly being supported by detachments of artillery and motorized cavalry.

Mussolini definitely will back Hitler in any situation that arises from the exer-tightening crisis, and reports from usually sources indicate that Il Duce is surrounded by German agents and representatives in order to force his loyalty to the Rome-Berlin axis. These agents are in a position to sabotage the internal peace of Italy.

If reason is not brought to bear on the entire European situation, we are perilously close to a repetition of the situation that confronted the world in 1914, incredible as that may seem. In view of the lesson the world is supposed to have learned in that world conflagation, it seems incredible, but nevertheless it is true. If statesmanship is not a lost art and a hollow mockery, surely the leaders of the world can come to an agreement around the council table, instead of submitting their countries and the whole world to the savagery of modern warfare.

QUICK WORK

Hard on the heels of the U. S. Supreme Court's decision empowering State Governments to tax the incomes of federal employees, a bill has been introduced in the New York Legislature paving the way for collection of such taxes next year. Even those on the payroll of the Army and Navy would be taxed.

It is expected that similar bills will be rushed through the Legislatures of the other 32 States that have income tax laws. A possible joker in the New York proposal, however, may be the provision that the tax will not become effective if Congress continues to grant State and municipal employees immunity from federal income taxes.

TAX SALES VALID

For the first time in many years, sales of real estate for delinquent general property taxes to be held by sheriffs within the next few weeks will be valid, according to an announcement made recently by the State Department of Revenue.

Previous to the simplification of legal procedure by the 1938 Legislature the purchaser of real estate at a tax sale could not take possession even after the expiration of the redemption period, which was five years. Under the simplified legislation all sales will be legal and valid, mainly because administrative procedure to be followed will be in keeping with court decisions affecting the new regulations. A purchaser of real estate at a tax sale may now take possession at the expiration of three years, and the new procedure is expected to materially affect sales of property being sold for delinquent taxes.

A Live Wire Briar Hopper

An Explanation! Why I am having my Briar Hopper stories reprinted; all but a few of my original stories were lost in the flood, having a great many requests for the stories I am having them reprinted with the intention of putting them in book form with other interesting matter—Will S. Norris.

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

When the Briar Hopper was a boy at school, ready and always full of fun and to take part in all or any games. When it came to rough and tumble he was always ready. On one occasion one of my schoolmates, Bruce Adams, began throwing small blocks of wood at me. I met him by throwing blocks at him. Unfortunately, one of the blocks thrown by me hit him in the eye, almost severing his eyelid, which I deeply regretted. To make it harder, his sister was my sweetheart, which put me in a terrible fix, not knowing what my fate with her would be.

The brother's eye was given good medical treatment and apparently the eye was going to get all right. Being good Christians, the brother and sister forgave me in good Christian manner.

I drifted away from my village school and home. Not seeing my schoolmates for a number of years; he made a special trip to visit me in my adopted home. I was glad to see him. We talked over old school days. I saw that his sight was affected and hesitatingly I asked him about the eye. You can imagine my dejected feeling who his ald he was totally blind in the one eye, which had never recovered from the lick I gave him, but he assured me he had no ill feeling toward me, which was a great relief to me.

In later years he moved from our Kentucky home to near me. I often met him and had pleasant talks with him. I'll never forget the last time I was with him. He was in bad health. Realizing that he had not long to live, he said to me: "Keep on praying; Meet me in Heaven!"

While he carried his blind, scarred eye to the grave, I cannot get rid of the scar of remembrance, notwithstanding it was a prank of boyhood, a boyish accident.

EMPTY AGAIN!

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

By JAMES PRESTON

A G-Man behind the counter of every grocery store in the United States!

That is just what some Washington observers see ahead of the complicated food-stamps-for-reliefers plan of the Agriculture Department is to be a success.

The plan is to go into a trial period soon in a few hand-picked cities. Relief clients will be given, in addition to cash, stamps with which to buy food. There will be two kinds of stamps. One will be for the purchase of ordinary foods. The other will be for the purchase of foods the government earmarks as "surpluses." The government would redeem the stamps from the grocers.

If the trial period shows any success at all, it would be put into general operation throughout the country. Agriculture Department planners think it is a sizzling idea and fondly believe that it will not only give the reliefersmore benefits but also help dispose of surpluses.

But other people around Washington are beginning to ask themselves this question; Suppose the reliefer wants a few bottles of beer or a carton of cigarettes? The stamps supposedly could not be used to buy these things. But what would prevent the relief client, if he did not want artichokes or some other "surplus" food, from making a "deal" withthe grocer?

If the plan is to serve the purpose for which it is intended, the Washington side-line spectators see a Federal policing job ahead that will be bigger than anything undertaken by the G-men. It would mean Federal inspection of every grocery list of the several millions relief families.

Tax Note: Senators and Representatives have learned withsurprise that the District of Columbia tax assessor has the Capitol building valued on his books at $50,000,000. But of course the government pays no property tax.

The District assessor explans that he assessed the building imply because "we have so many call about what the government would have to pay it it paid taxes."

An unprecedented event had Capital Hill in a mild furor the other day. It happened during the consideration of the President's request for additional $150,000,000 to meet "emergency" expenditures of the WPA. While the bill was being concreids dmany of the Congressmen bega to receive letters from CIO and WPA demanding that the request begranted. But the unprecedent part of it was that the letters were mailed in frandked WPA envelopes—on which the taxpayers pays the postage!

For anyone who might wonder just what an Interior Department press agent does (after reading recently that Congress had denied Secretary Ickles addditional funds to hire more press agents), the following is offeredas an example. It was one of several Interior Department releases, distributed to everynewspaper writer in Washington one day last week:

"Men of Uncle Sam's Navy, now returning from fleet maneuvers in the Caribbean are said to have stowed aboard their battleships, destroyers, submarines and bombing planes, a $3,472,280 assortment of cocktail napkins, finger-tip bowls, baby bibs and baskets, according to advance reports from the Virgin Islands Handicraft Cooperatives which reached the States today."

But that was only the first paragraph of the release which finally concluded: "It must be that every wife and sweetheart of the fleet will receive a gift."

OUT WITH THE RUBBISH

Into the rubbish heap at the first opportunity should go newspaper clippings saved long ago for a forgotten purpose, magazines, even dog-eared books and letters, suggested experts in home management at Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Houses and also people's minds can be cluttered by rubbish preserved sentimentally or carelessly from year to year. Everyone intends to use these things—but few ever do. After 10 years of work saving such things, moving them around, trying not to get them soiled, etc., it may be advisable to take agoodlook an then discard them. Books and mayazines may be given to schools and other institutions.

SPRAY INFORMATION FOR FRUIT GROWERS

The establishment of a spray information service for fruit growers is announced by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington. Growers of Apples, peaches, strawberries and other large and small fruits will be kept informed of the appearances of insects and diseases and told how they may be controlled.

To help keep abreast with the coming of insects and diseases, the Experiment Station has eqiablished insectaries at Lexington, Princeton, Henderson, Louisville and Paducah, and observers will report the appearance of pests and diseases to W. D. Armstrong, horticulturist at the Western Kentucky Experiment Substation at Princeton. He in turn will prescribe the necessary sprays and pass on such information to county farm agents for the benefit of fruit producers.

CHOICE FEEDERS SCARCE

Montgomery county cattle feeders in the market for choice 400 pound steer calves found them scarce and high in price. They plan to bring in several hundred head by May 1. Cattle on feed in the county receiving the recommendation of silage, hay and cotton seed meal did well and made money for their owners, according to County Agent Floyd McDaniel.

Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore

SOME FOLK TABOOS

It is astonishing to us who can look back a few decades to find how many things that are now discussed frankly were formerly taboo. I cannot believe that we are any less modest today, fundamentally, than we were in olner times, but our immediate ancestors, were they living, would be painfully shocked at our every-day language.

Male animals just were not mentioned if possible, though female ones were called by their real names as often as one liked. One could feed the old sow and her pigs, but not a boar, at least not by that name. He could be called a male hog without offending anyone. Similarly, the dear old cow was almost a member of the family; the bull was unmentionable except under some softened name: male cow, hebrew, male, or even, in extreme Kentucky, mayfield, I suppose as a sort of anagram of female. All sorts of devices were used to avoid using the names of other male animals, so many that a good-sized dictionary of modest Victorianisms could be compiled.

Religious words with a kick, except at church, were equally ruled out of ordinary conversation. Some of the softened words had emanated from the nursery, but clung to the language of the grown-ups. God was the Good Man; the devil, the Bad Man. Some pious older people spoke of Old Master when referring to divinity. Old Nick, with a slightly comic suggestion, was often used to refer to the devil. Heaven was on many a tongue, but one softened up the word for hell: the bad place was the commonest substitution in my early days. Very naughty boys sometimes told their playmates to "go to grass." I suspect that an uglier place was meant

Taboos extended to clothing. The line of demarkation between the clothing of men and that of women was strictly drawn. Something of disgrace was attached to a member of either sex who transgressed this law. After a boy had put on pants and discarded his boy dresses, then he would not be caught in women's clothing again, no matter what happened. I have sometimes wondered whether some of the unnecessary dislike in the South for Jefferson Davis after the fall of the Confederacy was not due to his escape in womens' clothes. I have known plenty of people who would have thought that such a disguise would have brought disaster, even though Yankee soldiers were not on the trail.

Even more disgraceful was it for a woman to wear men's garments. It has not been twenty years since women were arrgested in large cities for being attired in trousers, with no intention of deceiving anyone as to their sex, either. When a neighbor girl of mine used to put on her brothers' pants and ride a horse astride, older people gasped and predicted dire things for her; none of them seem to have happened yet, unless being past fifty is the curse, and it has long ago brought down her critics.

These taboos extended, and still do in some places, to occupations. In some sections men do not milk cows, though the heavens fall. I have known men to go hungry or to eat unpalatable food rather than do their own cooking. There used to be an idea that occupations were as permanent as the sexes and that any crossing the line invited tragedy.

If only some of the old-timers could have lived until our time!

Two Brothers Confess

C. P. and John I. I. Yates, 20 and 21 years of age, are in the county jail, charged with stealing a Ford car in Newport at 12:30 a.m., Thursday, April 6th. They confessed to the theft of the car and said they had found the car standing on the east side of Brighton Street.

The boys drove to Cherry Grove, three miles south of Williamstown, and tried to sell the car to Clark Littell for $12.50. Littell told the boys to wait until he went to the house and got some money. They waited. Littell called up the sheriff and in a few minutes they were under arrest and being conveyed to Williamstown.

Electric Lights Fail

Friday night the electric light systems of Walton, Florence and Erlanger were put out of commission for about three hours, by a tree falling across the wires at Ft. Mitchell during a windstorm which occurred about five o'clock that evening. The piano recital at the school building had to be postponed until Tuesday night. The damage was repaired about 9:00 o'clock that night.

H. C. Deirs left for Troy, Ohio, Saturday to arrange for his spring shipment of nursery stock from the Farmers' Nursery Co., for which concern he is state agent for Kentucky. He sold several carloads of nursery stock to Kentucky customers the season past.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church will meet at the home of Mrs. J. C. Bedinger on Saturday, April 15. All members are most cordially invited to attend.

T. P. Vallandingham has beautified his residence property by building a very pretty porch in front of same. The floor of the porch is of concrete with concrete columns. He has also razed the old stable on the lot adjoining, and with part of surplus lumber anticipates building a residence for sale or rent on his lot on Needmore Street, which he recently purchased of W. B. Johnson.

Kyle Nickelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. P. Nickelson, after a short visit to his parents, left Sunday evening for Chicago, where he will take up a special study of the intricacies of a profession for which he is fitting himself at the State University. He is studying electrical engineering. He will graduate this term, and being of a studious turn of mind, will no doubt acquit himself with honor.

Early Monday morning a freight train was wrecked near Elliston and delayed traffic for about four hours. No one was hurt.
